The Indian Express, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 2021

DELHI: The tractor protests, which began on January 1, 2021, continued on Republic Day as farmers rallied in different parts of the country to demand the repeal of three farm laws.

In Delhi, thousands of farmers descended on the capital, waving flags and banners as they marched from Tikri, Singhu, and Nangloi to Red Fort. They carried Nishan Sahib and Kisan Union flags, andumbo polices were deployed to ensure the smooth passage of the protesters.

The protesters’ call for the repeal of the farm laws stems from their concerns about the impact of the laws on their livelihoods. They have been protesting for more than a year, and their demands have not been met by the government.

The farmers’ movement has gained traction in recent months, and the protests have become a major issue in the political landscape.

As the tractor rally approached, Delhi Police had set up barriers and used water cannons to disperse the protesters. The situation was tense, but the protesters remained peaceful.

The farmers’ movement has become a symbol of resistance against the government’s policies, and the Republic Day rally was a significant event in their campaign.

The Indian government has announced that it will introduce new laws to support small farmers. However, the farmers are not convinced that these laws will address their concerns.

The tractor protests have attracted widespread support in India, with people expressing solidarity with the farmers on social media and through protests across the country.

As the day wore on, the situation remained peaceful, with both sides committed to finding a resolution to the dispute.

The Republic Day Tractor Rally was a significant event in the ongoing farmer protests, and it is clear that the government and the farmers are far from any agreement.

The Indian government has announced that it will continue to negotiate with the farmers, and it is hoped that a resolution can be reached soon.

The protests have highlighted the need for a more inclusive and participatory approach to policy-making in India, and it is hoped that this will be a stepping stone towards a more democratic and just society.
How volunteers at Ghazipur lost the plot

THE INDIAN EXPRESS, NEW DELHI, JANUARY 26

NIFTY rally group breaking of uly set on bad towards central Delhi, and some attempts by protesters to break from the main road towards Tikri, the rally from Ghazipur was stalo- tised after an hour or so. Volunteers and coordinators were stunned to the left of the main road next to the flyover, where they attempted to walk through the police barricades.

Rakesh Tikait stood at Ghazipur over the Ghazipur flyover and ordered that they would not be allowed to head towards Delhi. The protesters then broke through the barriers and forced their way through.

At ITO, both sides engaged in a heated argument in front of the flyover. A few with police34

TheAPSRTC tableau and Black Cat commandos were my favourites. My brother died five years ago in the Surma attack. We did good service to the nation, so we decided to do the service.”

As of January 21, 2023, the Tractor rally on the occasion of the 74th Republic Day was held in New Delhi. The rally was organized by the farmers’ organizations to protest against the farm laws passed by the government. In the rally, farmers from different parts of the country participated and marched towards the Red Fort to express their protest against the farm laws.

The rally started from the Tikri border and reached the Red Fort. The farmers carried their tractors and other equipment to the rally. The farmers were accompanied by thousands of supporters who had come to show solidarity with the farmers. The rally was marked by protests and clashes with the police.

The police had earlier warned the farmers not to approach the Red Fort, but they ignored the warnings and went ahead with the plans. The farmers were demanding the rollback of the farm laws, which they claimed were against the interests of the farmers. The police had also appealed to the farmers to maintain peace and order during the rally.

The rally ended peacefully with the farmers reaching the Red Fort. The farmers were met by the farmers’ leaders who had been invited to meet the Prime Minister. The leaders had discussed the farm laws and other issues with the Prime Minister. The farmers were happy with the assurance given by the Prime Minister and the meeting ended on a positive note.

In conclusion, the 74th Republic Day rally by the farmers was a significant event in the country’s political history. The farmers had been protesting against the farm laws for almost a year and their demands were finally met by the Prime Minister. The farmers were grateful for the meeting and the assurance given by the Prime Minister. The rally ended peacefully and the farmers were happy with the outcome of the meeting.

A flagpole was hoisted on Tuesday by BSF Director General Rakesh Asthana, who unfurled the Tricolour at the Attari-Wagah border. The 131-foot flagpole was installed along the India-Pakistan border, making it visible as far as Pakistan’s Sialkot town, near the Suchetgarh sector of RSPura sub-division. Artillery fire was also fired to mark the occasion. The Tricolour, which was hoisted at 6:30 a.m. at Bhavan near Rawatal, was surrounded by jubilant villagers. The BSF said it was an expression of nationhood, pride, and unity.

The BSF also took part in the Independence Day parade at the Attari-Wagah border, where the Tricolour was hoisted and the national anthem was sung. The BSF said it was a symbol of the country’s strength and unity. The BSF stated that the Tricolour was a symbol of the Indian people’s love for their country and their commitment to its sovereignty and integrity.

The BSF also said that the Tricolour was a symbol of the country’s commitment to the principle of non-violence and the promotion of peace and prosperity. NEW DELHI, JANUARY 21

A place of serene face to face with nature, the hill station of Ladhak, India has been frequented by tourists for decades. However, in the past few years, the area has witnessed an influx of tourists from near and far, with the number of visitors increasing every year.

On Saturday, the second day of NITK’s tour, the students were greeted by a beautiful view of the mountains and the Zanskar River. The weather was clear and bright, with a temperature of around 15°C.

The tour began with a visit to the Chadar trek, a popular hiking trail that starts from the village of Chatru and ends at the village of Karsha. The trail passes through the frozen Zanskar River, and the students were able to witness the breathtaking landscape of snow-capped mountains and frozen water.

The second stop was the Hemis National Park, a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The students were able to spot a variety of wildlife, including wolves, snow leopards, and blue sheep. The park also has a rich floral diversity, with over 300 species of plants.

The evening ended with a visit to the Leh Palace, a majestic structure that serves as a museum and cultural center. The palace was built in the 19th century and is now home to a variety of artifacts, including paintings, sculptures, and manuscripts.

The next day, the students were taken to the Pangong Tso, a saltwater lake that straddles the border between India and China. The lake is known for its crystal-clear water and stunning landscape.

The tour ended with a visit to the Karsha Monastery, a Buddhist monastery that is over 1,000 years old. The students were able to witness the traditional architecture and intricate carvings of the monastery.

Overall, the tour was an enriching experience for the students, allowing them to witness the natural beauty and cultural heritage of Ladhak.

The pandemic endgame

Vikram Patel

The WHO declared that the pandemic is over, but is this truly the case? The world has faced many pandemics in the past, but the COVID-19 pandemic has been unique in its scale and complexity. The impact of the pandemic on various aspects of society has been profound, and it has raised numerous questions about the future of our world.

Regardless of the truth about the pandemic, we face the reality of an endgame that has claimed hundreds of millions of lives and has caused significant disruptions to our lives. In this complex and challenging situation, we must focus on preparing for a future that is uncertain and unpredictable.

The pandemic endgame presents us with an opportunity to reflect on our past and learn from our mistakes. It is essential to acknowledge the challenges we faced during the pandemic and to understand the lessons we can learn from it. This reflection is necessary to ensure that we are better prepared for future pandemics and to build a more resilient and sustainable world.

The pandemic endgame has made us realize the importance of international cooperation and collaboration. It has highlighted the need for stronger global health systems and the importance of investing in research and development.

We must engage in meaningful dialogue and work together to address the challenges that we face. This will require a commitment to building a more equitable and just society, one that is inclusive, socially just, and environmentally sustainable.

The pandemic endgame has also emphasized the importance of education and social responsibility. It has shown us the value of education in preparing for future challenges and the importance of social responsibility in addressing the needs of our communities.

Children from economically weaker backgrounds have fallen behind as classes shifted to the digital mode during the pandemic. Remedial action involving parents, communities and schools is urgent.

The Constitution must guide us in crafting a distinctly Indian, climate-friendly development paradigm

Shikha Nathan and Arun Patel

In the wake of Independence, India’s Constitution was an amalgamation of a diversity of beliefs and aspirations, different reasons why Indian statesmen had come together to form this vast nation. Article 81 of the Constitution explains the composition of the Parliament, which also includes the model of governance that the founder-statesmen intended to build. Both these principles would form the cornerstone for the Indian system of governance.

Over the last seven decades, India has made great strides in poverty reduction and measures to improve the quality of life have been a key focus of many governments, whether it was the Atal Bihari Vajpayee-led government or the Narendra Modi government. India now has the world’s second largest economy.

However, this is not to say that the country has been able to solve its poverty problem. Two areas of concern that need urgent attention are poverty reduction and empowerment of disadvantaged groups, which is the focus of this Editorial.

Poverty

India is home to almost 250 million people living below the national poverty line, out of which around 130 million are poor in rural areas and 120 million are poor in urban areas. There are many reasons why people are below the poverty line: a lack of access to education, lack of access to healthcare, lack of access to financial services, and lack of access to social protection.

In addition, the COVID-19 pandemic has increased poverty and inequality in India. The economic lockdowns and social distancing measures have had a devastating impact on the livelihoods of many people, particularly those in rural areas and the informal economy.

Empowerment of disadvantaged groups

India is a diverse and pluralistic society with a rich cultural heritage. The Constitution was designed to protect the rights of marginalized groups such as dalits, muslims, tribals, and other backward classes. The fourteenth schedule of the Constitution recognizes 7 castes and 5 communities as ‘reservation eligible’ for government jobs, education and public services.

However, the implementation of reservation policies has been limited. Thedalitstraditionally faced discrimination in various forms, such as caste-based discrimination, violence, and lack of access to education and employment opportunities. Similarly, the muslim community has faced discrimination in the past, and continues to face challenges in education and employment.

The Constitution must guide us in crafting a distinctly Indian, climate-friendly development paradigm. This means prioritizing renewable energy, sustainable agriculture, and climate-resilient infrastructure.

WHO issues new clinical advice on treating Covid-19 patients

HEALTH

The world’s top health officials issued new advice on Tuesday for treating Covid-19 patients, including those displaying present symptoms for over 10 days, and also said it was advising using low-dose corticosteroids to treat blood clots.

The WHO stressed that a new Covid-19 treatment called tafibody, which is currently in clinical trials, could be useful in reducing the risk of blood clots in patients with severe Covid-19. The treatment is designed to prevent blood clots forming in patients with severe Covid-19 and is approved for use in hospital patients, the WHO said.

The new guidelines also include advice on when to hospitalize patients and how to manage blood clots, which can be a complication of Covid-19. The guidelines also recommend the use of low-dose corticosteroids to treat blood clots in Covid-19 patients with severe symptoms.

The guidelines are intended to help clinicians and healthcare workers around the world provide the best possible care to patients with Covid-19, the WHO said.

Pakistan in trouble after bundling our Proteas for 202

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The cricket team had been looking forward to hosting the South Africans for a series, but instead had to watch them win by 166 runs in the third Test that ended on Saturday. The series is the first to be played entirely in Pakistan since the 2009 attack on the Sri Lanka team in Peshawar.

South Africa batsman Faf du Plessis played a key role in the victory, scoring 87 and 62 in the Test as he helped the Proteas to a comfortable win.

The defeat marked a significant turn of events for the Pakistan team, who had been successful in their recent matches against other teams.

The loss also highlighted the difference in performance between the two teams, with South Africa showing a better understanding of the conditions and exploiting them effectively.

The Pakistan team, on the other hand, struggled to find a consistent performance and faced difficulties in adapting to the challenging conditions.

The result also raised questions about the team's overall strategy and approach, and whether they can maintain their momentum in future matches.

Despite the setback, the Pakistan team remains in good spirits and continues to work hard to improve their game. They believe that with continued effort and dedication, they can bounce back and achieve success in the coming matches.
