Intercaste out, panel will track only interfaith marriages, says Maharashtra

MUMBAI, DECEMBER 15

A DAY after The Indian Express reported that Maharashtra had constituted an 'Intercaste/ Interfaith Marriage-Family Coordination Committee (state level)' to gather details about couples in such marriages, and maternal families of such women if they were estranged, the state government Thursday amended its Government Resolution, saying the task of the committee will now be limited to gathering information about interfaith marriages, and not intercaste marriages.

The new GR stated that the panel had been renamed 'Interfaith Marriage-Family Coordination Committee (state level)' and "it was under the government's consideration to amend the committee that was set up".

Collegium target again: Govt says new system to appoint judges is the need

DAMINI NATH
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

LINKING THE huge pendency of cases in courts to vacant posts of judges, Union Law Minister Kiren Rijiju, referring to the Supreme Court's Collegium system of appointments to the higher judiciary, told Rajya Sabha Thursday that this issue will not be resolved until a "new system" on appointments is evolved.

He also said "there is a feeling among people of India that the long vacation which the courts obtain is not very convenient for justice-seekers" and it is his "obligation and duty to convey the message or sense of this House to the judiciary".

Rijiju's remarks in the House came days after he criticised the Collegium system as being "opaque" and the Vice-President called the Supreme Court's 2015 judgement striking down the National Judicial Appointments Commission Act a "severe compromise" of parliamentary

BACK IN August 2014, almost all parties united in both Houses in Parliament — the AIADMK abstained — and more than 50 per cent of states including those led by the Congress and the Left, unanimously ratified laws to bring in the National Judicial Appointments Commission (NJAC) to replace the Collegium system of appointment of judges to the higher courts.

DOHA, DECEMBER 15

BEFORE FRANCE'S World Cup quarterfinal against England last week, a French journalist asked manager Didier Deschamps, somewhat agitatedly: "What is our identity?" He dragged on: "Where is our identity? Do we have any?" Deschamps, taking a deep breath, betraying no sign of frustration, replied calmly: "Winning is our identity." The room crackled with laughter.

It's an answer Deschamps has produced and reproduced a thousand times.

The French might be winning the World Cup again — they beat Morocco 2-0 in the semifinal and will meet Lionel Messi's Argentina in the final Sunday. They could also become just the second side after World War-II to defend the World Cup crown. But the French media are unsatisfied with just winning.

The lament is they don't play Champagne Football, a phrase that contains all the grace and grandeur of French football — a

Bones found in forest match DNA of Shraddha Walkar's father: Police

Police say Shraddha was killed in May this year

JIGNASA SINHA
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

FORENSIC REPORTS have confirmed that some of the bones recovered by police from the Mehrauli forest area in Delhi last month belong to Shraddha Walkar, who was allegedly killed by her live-in partner Aaftab Poonawaala in May, officials said Thursday.

Sources said tests conducted on the bones — part of the jaw, pelvis and lower limb — have confirmed a DNA match with Walkar's father, they said. Further examination of the bones will be conducted to ascertain the cause of death and time period.

The death of Walkar came to light after her father lodged a missing-person complaint in October with Mumbai Police. Walkar, 27, and Poonawala, 28, hail from Maharashtra and shifted to Delhi's Chattarpur Pahadi area in May.

Following his arrest in the case in November, Poonawala allegedly told Delhi Police that he had strangled Walkar on May 18 at their rented flat in the capital, cut her body into over 30 pieces and dumped the parts in the Mehrauli forest nearby.

Officials said the Delhi Police received reports from the Central Forensic Science Laboratory (CFSL) and the Forensic Science Laboratory (FSL) in Delhi Wednesday. The CFSL reports were on the bones

Rs 11.5 lakh/yr median fee in pvt medical colleges, says expert body

ANONNA DUTT
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

IN A first such survey, an expert group under National Medical Commission, the apex medical regulator, has found that the median for fees of deemed universities is Rs 21 lakh a year, almost double of the median for fees of private medical colleges at Rs 11.5 lakh a year. Median is the middle number in an ascending or descending list of numbers.

There are nearly 96,000 MBBS seats in the country for 2023, of which nearly half are in the private sector (private medical colleges and deemed universities).

The information made available to Parliament in a written reply by Dr Subhas Sarkar, Minister of State for Education, showed that the median fee for seats under management quota was the same as that for normal seats in private colleges as well as deemed universities. For seats under NRI quota (reserved for NRIs, Overseas Citizens of India, Persons of Indian Origin or those with an NRI sponsor living outside India), the median fee was more than double that for normal seats at Rs 24 lakhs a year in private medical colleges. The median fees for NRI quota seats

1991 PILIBHIT FAKE ENCOUNTERS

HC commutes life sentence of 43 cops to 7 years jail term

ASAD REHMAN
LUCKNOW, DECEMBER 15

MORE THAN six years after a CBI court handed life imprisonment to 47 policemen for killing 10 Sikh men in three fake encounters in a single night in Uttar Pradesh's Pilibhit district in 1991, the Allahabad High Court on Thursday commuted the sentence to seven years of rigorous imprisonment.

Setting aside the trial court's verdict which convicted the policemen of murder and criminal conspiracy, the High Court convicted them of culpable homicide not amounting to murder.

The High Court was hearing appeals filed by 43 policemen who challenged the trial court order. A total of 57 policemen were chargesheeted in the case, of which 14 are now dead.

In its order, the Bench of Justice Ramesh Sinha and Justice Saroj Yadav said "there was no ill-will between the appellants (policemen) and the deceased persons".

"…this court convicts the appellants under Section 304 Part I of the Indian Penal Code and sentences them to seven years' rigorous imprisonment along with fine of Rs 10,000, which this court considers adequate in the circumstances of the case," the High Court said.

The case dates back to July 12, 1991, when police stopped a Pilibhit-bound bus at Kachlapul ghat and dragged out 11 Sikh men. The other passengers, including women and children, were taken to a gurdwara in Pilibhit, while the men were made to sit in another vehicle. Late in the evening, additional forces joined the police team and they allegedly divided the Sikh men into three groups.

On the intervening night of July 12 and 13, the policemen allegedly gunned down the Sikh men in three separate encounters in the thickets falling under three different police station areas — Bilsanda, Niuria and Pooranpur— in Pilibhit. The police said that they had criminal cases against them and claimed to have recovered arms and ammunition from their possession.

The body of one of the Sikh men was not recovered. Most of the victims were from Gurdaspur in Punjab.

The High Court also said that the killings were unacceptable and cannot be "justified to kill innocent persons along with some terrorists taking them to be also terrorists".

"...it is not the duty of the police officers to kill the accused merely because he/she is a dreaded criminal... Undoubtedly, the police have to arrest the accused and put them up for trial," the High Court said.

New system to appoint judges is need: Govt sovereignty and disregard of the "mandate of the people".

Replying to a question by Congress MP Rajeev Shukla in the Rajya Sabha on the number of working days of courts, Rijiju said the number of pending cases in the country was nearing 5 crore, having reached 4.90 crore.

He said there were many reasons for this, but the "primary one is the appointment of judges" and vacancies in the sanctioned strength.

The Minister's written reply stated that the sanctioned strength of the Supreme Court, High Courts, district and subordinate courts was 25,011 and the working strength was 19,192 as on December 12, 2022. He said 46 judges had been appointed to the Supreme Court from May 1, 2014 to December 5, 2022. The reply stated that 69,598 cases were pending in the Supreme Court as on December 1, 2022, as per the court's own website, and 59.56 lakh cases were pending in High Courts.

"At this point, the government has very limited powers to reduce vacancies… I don't want to comment much on the courts as it sometimes looks like the government is trying to interfere with the court's powers. If you look at the provisions of the Constitution, the process of appointments was the right of the government with the consultation of the court. This changed after 1993. We are giving our support to end the pendency of cases, but till we don't set up a new system for appointments, questions on the appointment of judges will keep being raised," he said.

Citing the NJAC Bill, 2014, Rijiju said Parliament had unanimously passed the Bill, but it was struck down by the Supreme Court in 2015. He said the current system of appointment of judges – the Collegium system – did not reflect the feelings of the public and the House. He said many retired judges, including members of the Constitution Bench that struck down the NJAC, have since stated that striking down a Bill passed by Parliament was not right.

In reply to DMK MP Tiruchi Siva's supplementary question on the number of women, SC, ST and OBC judges, the Minister said the government had written to Chief Justices of High Courts to keep in mind disadvantaged groups while recommending names for appointment as judges. Until now, there had been just one judge from the ST community, he said.

On vacations, the Minister's reply stated that the Supreme Court had 224, 217 and 202 working days in 2019, 2020 and 2021, respectively. Similarly, all High Courts usually have an average of 210 working days a year.

In a supplementary question, BJP MP Sushil Modi asked the Minister if the government would speak to the Chief Justice to switch from vacations for the whole court to individual judges taking vacations at different times of the year.

Responding to Congress MP Vivek Tankha, Rijiju said: "Definitely, there is a feeling among people of India that the long vacation which the courts obtain is not very convenient for justice-seekers... it is also my bounden obligation and duty to convey the message or sense of this House to the judiciary. Will definitely ensure that even if there are vacations, the functioning of the court should not be stopped."

• All got together to pass NJAC, now Opp rethink: 'need to protect judiciary'

However, that rare unanimity is coming unstuck as the Government ratchets up its attack on the higher judiciary for striking down NJAC as unconstitutional.

The Indian Express spoke to several leaders across the political spectrum to find a clear shift in the position of many.

Many in the Opposition feel the remarks by the Law Minister Rijiju coupled with Vice President Jagdeep Dhankhar's statements signal that the government is preparing the ground for bringing the Bill.

Said Congress party's Chief Spokesperson Jairam Ramesh: "This whole issue is being orchestrated at various levels… expect the NJAC to be back or at least keep the threat of it alive so as to get the judiciary to fall in line." Saying he wasn't speaking for his party, Lok Sabha MP Shashi Tharoor said: "Subordinating the judiciary to executive control would be to compromise its independence at the very moment of appointment."

Said CWC member and lawyer Abhishek Singhvi: "The Congress is unlikely to support, though, in absence of any suggested move by the government, we cannot be expected to give our decision in advance." P Chidambaram said the Congress's decision "will depend upon the text of the Bill and the composition of the NJAC."

His colleague Manish Tewari said the Collegium system may not be perfect but it is the law of the land. "If the government was unhappy, it should have filed a review petition and if that were to be dismissed, they should then have filed a curative review. They chose not too means they accepted the judgment," he said.

Trinamool Congress's Sukhendu Sekhar Ray said the party had supported the NJAC Bill in both Houses of Parliament in 2014. "But now the way the government is bent on encroaching upon Constitutional authorities, particularly the judiciary, our party may consider the present unpleasant scenario in its proper perspective. Ministers and even the Vice President of India have unleashed a direct attack on the independence of judiciary."

The Rashtriya Janata Dal signalled it would support NJAC if the Bill provided for reservation. "All institutions in a democratic country should have a representative character, and should reflect the diversity of caste and community. The Collegium system has not been able to address the issue of the widest possible representation, an Indian reality," its leader Manoj Jha said.

A senior DMK leader said the government is raising the heat after seven long years because it is sensing there could be a pushback from the Supreme Court. "There is talk about the apex court disregarding the mandate of the people and all. Why didn't the government not file a review petition then?" he said.

The CPM, which had supported the Bill in 2014, said its stand remained the same. "We want a national judicial commission that should not only make appointments and decide on transfers, but also decide on everything else connected with the judiciary… along with all the questions raised on the judiciary," CPM General Secretary Sitaram Yechury said.

• Rs 11.5 lakh/yr median fee in pvt medical colleges: expert body

WHAT MEDICAL COLLEGES CHARGE

	Private medical college	Deemed Universities
Median	₹11.5 lakh	₹21 Lakh
Management Quota	₹11.5 lakh	₹21 Lakh
NRI Quota	₹24 Lakh	₹31 Lakh
Govt Quota	1/6th of MQ fee (₹1.91 lakh)	1/10th of MQ fee (₹2.1 lakh)*

at deemed universities was 50 per cent higher than that for normal seats at Rs 31 lakh a year.

As for government quota seats – seats in private colleges earmarked by state governments with usually lower fees and higher qualifying ranks, the cost is one-sixth the normal fees in the private colleges and one-tenth the normal fees at deemed university, according to the reply.

"The fee structure differs for different categories of seats in different states – there was a drastic difference in fee structures across the country. This made it impossible for the government to settle on a baseline fee for MBBS, hence the exercise to determine the median fee was undertaken by the expert committee," said Dr Pravin Shingare, former head of Maharashtra's Department of Medical Education and Research.

The expert group can guide the fee regulatory authorities across the country – there are 27 fee regulatory committees from each of the states and 70 committees from each of the deemed universities.

This fee, however, will not become the baseline for deciding fees for the private medical colleges in the country. In an attempt to make medical education more accessible – so that India's needs can be fulfilled and children do not have to go abroad to study, the government has increased the number of medical seats and also reduced the cost of education in private medical colleges.

Earlier this year, the National Medical Commission issued guidelines stating that the fee for half the number of seats across private colleges and deemed universities must be brought to the level of government medical colleges.

In addition, the guidelines spelt out certain principles to calculate the fees for the rest of the seats. Although the NMC had said the new fee structure would be applicable from the current session, the matter is pending in court.

"As of now, the existing Supreme Court judgements say that the deemed universities have a right to fix the fees of their seats in consultation with their fee regulatory committee, headed by a retired judge. Although the current matter is pending in courts, the NMC cannot unilaterally decide to fix the fees for all 100% seats. For that, the government will have to go to Parliament," said Dr Shingare.

Bribery can also be proved by circumstantial evidence: SC

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE SUPREME Court on Thursday ruled that demand and acceptance of illegal gratification by a public servant can be proved also by circumstantial evidence in the absence of direct evidence due to passing away of the complainant or his/her failure to support the prosecution case.

Stating that "proof of demand and acceptance of illegal gratification by a public servant as a fact in issue by the prosecution is a sine qua non in order to establish the guilt of the accused public servant under" the Prevention of Corruption Act, a five-judge Constitution bench presided by Justice S Abdul Nazeer said: "...the proof of demand and acceptance of illegal gratification can also be proved by circumstantial evidence in the absence of direct oral and documentary evidence."

The bench, also comprising Justices B R Gavai, A S Bopanna, V Ramasubramanian and B V Nagarathna, said such inference about the guilt of a public servant under the Act can be drawn based on "other evidence adduced by the prosecution".

"Presumption of fact with regard to the demand and acceptance or obtainment of an illegal gratification may be made by a court of law by way of an inference only when the foundational facts have been proved by relevant oral and documentary evidence and not in the absence thereof," it said.

Writing for the bench, Justice Nagarathna recalled what was said by the top court in the past – "Corruption by public servants has become a gigantic problem. It has spread everywhere. No facet of public activity has been left unaffected by the stink of corruption. It has deep and pervasive impact on the functioning of the entire country. Large-scale corruption retards the nation-building activities and everyone has to suffer on that count."

• Big B flags free speech, Shah Rukh the 'narrowness'

Festival, which was also attended by West Bengal Governor Dr C V Ananda Bose, Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee, actors Rani Mukerji and Shatrughan Sinha, and leading personalities of the Bengali film industry.

Bachchan referred to the history of censorship in Indian cinema, and said, "Even now, I'm sure my colleagues on stage would agree, questions are being raised on civil liberties and freedom of expression."

Shah Rukh Khan, who is awaiting the release of his next film "Pathaan", spoke about how social media is "driven by narrowness of views". And signed off with a line from "Pathaan": "Apni kursi ki peti bandh lijiye, mausam bigadnewala hai (Fasten your seat belt, the weather is about to get rough)."

Khan's comments come amid calls on social media for a boycott of "Pathaan" over a song featuring him and Deepika Padukone.

The need of the hour, he said, was to build a better world for the future generation by "using the power of cinema as a vehicle for people of different cultures, colours, castes and religions to better understand each other".

In his address, Bachchan wondered whether Satyajit Ray's reaction to the current scenario would be much like that of the protagonist of his 1990 film, "Ganashatru".

"One of his later films, "Ganashatru", can be taken as an indication of how Ray may have reacted to current times. In this chamber drama, about a jaundice epidemic caused by water contamination that is suppressed by both the state and the local temple, Dr Asok Gupta (the protagonist) becomes the enemy of the people, fighting for justice," Bachchan said.

• Panel on interfaith marriages

On Tuesday, a committee, under state Women and Child Development Minister and BJP leader Mangal Prabhat Lodha, had been tasked to look at interfaith and intercaste marriages.

The decision drew criticism from the Opposition which pointed to the state government scheme of granting funds to couples who go for intercaste marriage.

Speaking to The Indian Express Thursday, Deputy Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis said, "Tuesday's GR of the WCD department has been amended. This committee is only for interfaith marriages, and not intercaste marriages. The earlier GR was not the correct one."

"The state government is encouraging intercaste marriages and there is also a plan to give financial rewards to those who do it. But cheating in interfaith marriages has increased in the past few years and some aspects have come to light in the Shraddha Walkar murder case," he said

"It is alarming that there has been an increase in cases of cheating in interfaith marriages in some parts of the state. Therefore, fraud in the name of love jihad has to be stopped," Fadnavis said.

collected by police from the Mehrauli forest and nearby areas.

According to sources, around 12-13 pieces of bones recovered from the forest belong to Walkar. "These are bones from the jaw, pelvis, limbs and other body parts. They have marks on them, which show assault from a sharp weapon. The bones matched DNA samples of Walkar's father. This is critical evidence," said a police officer.

The police have also received a polygraph report from the FSL, officials said, adding that narco-analysis test reports are pending.

Sagar Preet Hooda, Special Commissioner of Police (Law and Order), said, "We have received DNA reports from CFSL on Lodhi Road. The report is helpful for us. We have also got a Polygraph test report from FSL in Rohini. Both reports will be helpful in the investigation."

Based on Poonawala's interrogation, the police had conducted searches across several days in Delhi and Gurgaon to find Walkar's body, her phone, and the weapon used in her killing. The police are yet to find the phone but have recovered a few mini-saws and knives, and are checking if they were used by Poonawaala.

Sources said the recovered piece of jaw will help investigators ascertain the period when the woman died. "We will send the bones to AIIMS where an autopsy will be conducted. These bones, especially the jaw, will undergo several tests and studies to determine the chemical composition. This will help us in finding the cause of death and maybe even the time period when the incident took place. And medical tests may reveal how old the bones are," said an officer.

philosophy forged by the "Godfather" of French football managers, Albert Batteux, whose favourite author was the existentialist writer Albert Camus but whose game was forged in the ideals of playing "in the most beautiful way".

From a host of French managers who idolised Batteux, the Euro 1984-winning Michel Hidalgo explained the traits of Champagne Football: "A short game, played with vivacity and technique. It was sparkling football. Everything was done with quality of play in mind, for the sake of having the ball at your feet and attacking. It should be the way French football should always be played."

But just days before France embarked on their World Cup defence mission, the newspaper "L'Equipe" lamented: "The French have no identity, and the French team losing could be a blessing in disguise." The implication was clear: If Deschamps stuttered, he could be axed and a new manager, preferably Zinedine Zidane, the monument of Champagne Football, could restore the lost identity.

The French are obsessed with aesthetics and elegance. The dissatisfaction among critics is that despite the gilt-edge potential, despite the attacking prowess, they are still knee-deep in pragmatism. There are moments when they flutter the wings, bursts when they uncork Champagne Football -- especially Kylian Mbappe and Antoine Griezmann -- but fundamentally they are a defensive-minded side.

But dig deeper into Deschamps's France, you do unearth identity. Maybe, not as profound as Spain's Tiki Taka or as beautiful as the Dutch Total Football or as energetic as Germany's Gegenpress, but an identity that is not rooted in the brand of football they display, instead in the virtues they shed. In their steeliness and ruthlessness, pragmatism and togetherness, in their structural and defensive discipline, in their monkish calm under pressure, in their ability to seize half an opportunity.

They might not have played like a World Champion side, but they have shown the characteristics of one. You can call this the Deschampian identity.

In the build-up to the tournament, France lost nearly half their first-choice eleven; in the 10th minute of the first game, they lost their regular left-back; the day before the semifinal, their trusted centre-back and midfielder caught a bug. That they recovered from these setbacks is as much a testament of their dizzying depth of talent as a statement of their ruthless mentality. Deschamps has built a team that wants to win and knows how to win.

To expand on their identity and virtues, it's worth revisiting what happened on November 22. In the afternoon, Saudi Arabia pulled off the upset of the tournament, beating Argentina. A few hours later, France were trailing 1-0 to Australia. For the first 20 minutes, the French were abysmal, losing possession, defending clumsily and not producing anything melodic or meaningful. But they didn't freeze. They soaked the pressure, took time to settle down, slowed the game down and when order was restored, regenerated into a fire-spitting dragon.

The theme was to recur throughout the tournament. Against both England and Morocco, there were moments when they were genuinely the second-best team, when they seemed racked and ragged. But they didn't look frazzled, or flustered. Even when England equalised and buzzed and bustled, they did not wither.

Against both England and Morocco, they had less possession than the opponents, fewer passes and fewer touches in the opposition's penalty box. Yet, they scored more goals. Against Morocco, they could have scored more goals but for sloppy finishing and the post. All the four goals in these two games originated from the drive to reach the ball quicker than the opponent, the anticipation that the ball could deflect or rebound into the path.

The goals against Morocco were instructive. Particularly the first one, when Theo Hernandez made a darting run down the left. He could have stopped when he saw the ball was on Mbappe's feet, but he lingered, cut infield, and when the ball bounced in front of him, showed immaculate technique to blast it home.

That was Champagne Football. There were other moments in the tournament too -- every goal of Mbappe, for instance. But Deschamps has the wisdom to realise that playing Champagne Football alone would not lead to champagne moments.

IMMIGRATION COUNTERS, SECURITY CHECK LINES BEING INCREASED

Congestion at Delhi and Mumbai airports: Home secy holds meeting

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

UNION HOME Secretary Ajay Bhalla Thursday held a high-level meeting on congestion at major airports in the country, including those at Delhi, Mumbai, and Bengaluru. The meeting dealt with congestion in the departure area and how arrival areas were crowded owing to delays in immigration clearance.

"It was a meeting to review the situation and how things can be eased for passengers. The ministry has been concerned about delays at immigration for passengers arriving from abroad. This has been an ongoing problem for which solutions were discussed," a home ministry official said.

Sources said the meeting was attended by officials from the Bureau of Immigration, Ministry of Civil Aviation, Central Industrial Security Force (CISF), Bureau of Civil Aviation Security (BCAS) and Airports Authority of India (AAI).

Display boards at each entry point and live updates on social media have reduced chaos at Delhi airport. Express

Sources said that during the visit of Civil Aviation Minister Jyotiraditya Scindia to the IGI Airport recently, 16 entry gates were operational which has now been increased to 18 and will be further brought up to 20. Similarly, immigration counters and security check lines are also being increased, they said.

The BCAS has asked the airlines and airport operators to put up posters and send awareness messages to passengers for carrying one cabin baggage and undergoing web check-in.

It has asked the airport operator DIAL (for IGI), apart from other large airports, to look at the possibility of bringing in advanced 3D baggage scanners and more automatic tray retrieval systems (ATRS).

Over the last two weeks, passengers have been posting pictures and videos of long queues and crowding at the IGI Airport in Delhi and the Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj International Airport in Mumbai, prompting authorities to take note and ask airlines and airport operators to ease the congestion.

Ministry guidelines being implemented at Delhi airport's T3

Meanwhile, at Delhi's IGI airport, authorities have started implementing the ministry's latest guidelines and suggestions at Terminal 3 (T3).

Display boards at each entry point and live updates about them on social media, along with that of the flights, have reduced confusion and chaos to a great extent at the airport, officials said. The airport now has multiple display boards showing estimated waiting time outside the 16 entry gates. Some of the gates have a waiting time of 10-15 minutes.

"Earlier, there were 14 entry gates. They have now been increased to 16, and all gates are manned by additional staff, ushers and display boards to help passengers. We have also started posting live updates on Delhi Airport Twitter and other social media platforms to help passengers choose the right entry," said an official.

Airport officials said they have installed four more X-ray machines in the security check area. Some flights at peak hours have been shifted to Terminal 1 and Terminal 2, they added. "We have increased ATRS machines from 13 (pre-Covid) to 17. The ministry is in touch with top officials of the CISF and will increase the deployment of staffers in the coming days," said an official.

Rs 20-30 cr paid to Vijay Nair to achieve illegal cartelisation in excise policy: CBI chargesheet

ANAND MOHAN J
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE CBI chargesheet filed into alleged irregularities in the now-scrapped Delhi excise policy has stated that hawala channel transactions to the tune of Rs 20-30 crore were allegedly made by South Indian liquor manufacturers to AAP communications chief Vijay Nair to use his position in the ruling party in Delhi to achieve the illegal objective of cartelisation.

The central agency made its submissions before Special Judge M K Nagpal, who summoned seven accused, including Nair, after taking cognizance of the chargesheet. It was filed under sections of criminal conspiracy punishable under IPC section 120B, and under sections 7, 7A and 8 of the Prevention of Corruption Act at Rouse Avenue district court.

The details of the chargesheet detailing the investigation carried out so far were also discussed in court as the CBI submitted that it was still probing the role of Deputy CM Manish Sisodia and other public servants. The legal teams for the accused have denied all allegations in the chargesheet, stating that they will make their case before court.

As per the chargesheet, the accused allegedly entered into a criminal conspiracy when the excise policy was still under formulation from April 2020 to get "undue benefits by circumventing provisions of policy and to achieve illegal objective of cartelisation between liquor manufacturers, wholesalers and retail vendors".

It alleged that "huge amount of around Rs 20-30 crore was arranged by businessman Abhishek Boinpally at the behest of some liquor manufacturers belonging to South, and this amount was transferred or transmitted by him through accused Dinesh Arora to... Vijay Nair and his associates between July and September 2021 in cash using hawala channels".

The CBI chargesheet states that this was advance money "paid by liquor manufacturers from South" to Nair for "exercising his influence upon and using his position in the ruling party in Delhi to achieve illegal objective of cartelisation between different components of the excise policy".

It has been alleged in the chargesheet that "profit margin for wholesalers was intentionally kept as high as 12% of the landed cost of IMFL (Indian Made Foreign Liquor) and 6% share out of this 12% profit margin was to be paid or returned to Boinpally, stated to be a frontman of liquor manufacturers from South, against the above illegal amount of Rs 20-30 crore earlier sent by him to Nair through hawala channels".

The chargesheet has laid out the alleged role of accused Arun Ramchandra Pillai, who is also stated to be "a frontman of the liquor manufacturer group from South" and was given 32.5% shareholding of M/s. Indospirits as a result of above cartelisation.

The CBI alleged that this company was able to earn net profits of Rs 68,11,47,117 out of which, 61% share of profits was transferred, either directly or indirectly, to the account of Pillai or in some other accounts as per his instructions".

The investigation into credits made into the bank account of Pillai shows that "out of above profit margin of wholesale licensee, an amount of Rs 4.75 crore is alleged to have been transferred in the account of accused Mootha Goutam, the MD of India Ahead News, and from his account, an amount of Rs 3.85 crore is stated to have been transferred in account of accused Boinpally".

The agency alleged that further payments are alleged to have been transferred from Pillai's account to companies of a media group of South India, allegedly belonging to Boinpally and Goutam.

On the role of businessman Sameer Mahendru, the CBI alleged the wholesale distributorship of liquor brands owned by M/s. Pernod Ricard India Pvt. Ltd. was given to him. The CBI told the court that Mahendru could secure a wholesale (L-1) licence and another company named M/s. Khao Gali Restaurant Pvt. Ltd., which was owned or controlled by him indirectly, was given two retail zone licences (L-7Z)". The CBI alleged these were approved by public servants Kuldeep Singh and Narender Singh.

Wanted gangster and man behind Gurgaon multi-crore heist arrested

MAHENDER SINGH MANRAL & PAVNEET SINGH CHADHA
NEW DELHI, GURGAON, DECEMBER 15

VIKAS LAGARPURIA, a wanted gangster and alleged mastermind of a multi-crore heist in Gurgaon, was arrested on Thursday morning. While sources said he was detained from IGI Airport by central intelligence agencies late Wednesday after he arrived from Dubai around 2.50 am, following which a team of Haryana police Special Task Force got his custody after coordinating with the agencies, the STF said he was arrested from the Delhi-Gurgaon border.

B Satheesh Balan, Inspector General of Police, STF Haryana, said Lagarpuria was the mastermind and main conspirator in a theft case in which "over Rs 25-30 crore cash" was allegedly stolen from the office/flat of a society in Gurgaon in August 2021.

"We had received a specific input that Lagarpuria was on his way from Delhi to his village in Jhajjar to see his ailing parents. A team of STF officials began inspecting vehicles at Delhi-Gurgaon border and 2-3 persons were detained. He was travelling in a cab and was detained from the toll. He was evasive and, in initial interrogation, identified himself as Deepak from Hisar. He then claimed to be from Panipat. After sustained interrogation and verification of two hours, his identity was confirmed," said Balan.

Vikas Lagarpuria (32)

On whether the gangster had come from Dubai where he is suspected to have been hiding for some time, Balan, said, "It is a part of investigation. We have arrested him from Delhi-Gurgaon border. We will question him on these aspects."

Police said Lagarpuria has admitted his involvement in planning and executing the heist. "He claims he got over Rs 20.5 crore cash as his share, which he invested in property and spent some on his expenses and court cases. So far, he has endorsed the theory which had come out during the police probe on how the theft was planned and executed. We will take him on remand and question him on these specific aspects as to who all were involved and how the money was transferred and to whom," said Balan.

STF officials said that during questioning, the gangster appeared confident, claiming to investigators that the "stolen money was black (do number ka paisa thaa)". "He is fond of a lavish lifestyle and was wearing designer clothes and shoes when he was taken into custody," said an officer. He was produced in a district court and sent to 10-day police remand.

The case, which was reported as a routine burglary, later unravelled to become a large conspiracy and a meticulously planned heist involving a gangster, his henchmen, doctors, employees of a society managing a project, a Delhi Police ASI and a Haryana police IPS officer.

On the source of money and allegations of unaccounted money, Balan said, "The Income Tax department and Enforcement Directorate are probing the source and these allegations. We are working on arresting the accused and recovering stolen money."

In 2020, the Delhi Police Special Cell had issued a lookout notice against the gangster. This year, the Haryana STF had said an FIR was lodged against him after they came to know that he had travelled abroad using a fake passport. Later, Indian authorities had requested Interpol to issue a red corner notice against Lagarpuria.

One of the most wanted gangsters in Delhi and Haryana, Lagarpuria had a reward of Rs 2.5 lakh for information leading to his arrest. He has 24 criminal cases against him. The STF said it is currently probing three cases against him — the multi-crore theft, a case for forging a passport in Panipat and a case in which he jumped parole in Gurgaon.

What police probe has found so far

GURGAON, DECEMBER 15

THE HARYANA STF said a total of 19 accused have been arrested in the multi-crore heist case so far and a sum of Rs 5.78 crore, including gold and foreign currency, and six vehicles have been recovered.

On August 21, 2021, the theft was reported to Gurgaon Police by an employee of Alpha G Corp Management Services Private Ltd at its flat/office in Gurgaon One society, Sector 84, which it maintains. The complainant had not mentioned the stolen amount in the FIR. In a supplementary statement to the police, the complainant said Rs 50 lakh and some documents of the flats had been stolen between August 1 and 21.

According to the chargesheet filed by the STF last year, three representatives-cum-employees of the complainant company said in their statement that their company was intending to purchase property measuring 3 acres in Sector 28 Gurgaon and Rs 30 crore cash had been kept at their office for the same.

Lagarpuria's name had come up in disclosure statements of some of his henchmen during initial arrests by police. On October 8, 2021, police arrested Delhi Police ASI Vikas Gulia, a childhood friend of the gangster, who had allegedly been tasked with collecting the money and transferring it to Lagarpuria via hawala.

In November 2021, STF got a key breakthrough, with the arrest of Dr Suchender Nawal. He was allegedly among the main conspirators and in his disclosure statement, he named then Gurgaon Police DCP Dheeraj Setia, claiming he had paid a bribe to Setia to cover up the case. Setia was later suspended and police invoked sections under the Prevention of Corruption Act against him.

Police said the plan to commit the theft started when Shyam Singh, an employee of the complainant company and an accused, informed his friend Dr Gurpartap Singh (another accused) and Dr Nawal about a 'huge amount of cash' kept at the office. Nawal's driver is Lagarpuria's uncle and both were acquainted through him. In connivance with these accused, Lagarpuria allegedly planned the heist. A few days before the incident, one of his henchmen took a flat on 19th floor of the same tower on rent. On the intervening night of August 3-4, 5-6 men from Lagarpuria's gang arrived in a Scorpio car and carried out the theft, taking multiple trips to transport the cash.

HARIKISHAN SHARMA & JIGNASA SINHA
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

A DAY after the acid attack on a 17-year-old girl in Dwarka, the Central Consumer Protection Authority (CCPA) Thursday issued notice to Flipkart, the e-commerce platform from where, police said, the substance was bought online by the main accused. Sources said CCPA has also sent a notice to another e-commerce platform, Meesho, on the same issue and has given them a week's time to respond.

The girl was on her way to school with her younger sister on Wednesday morning when she was attacked by two men on a motorcycle near her home. She sustained severe injuries on her face, neck, and eyes, and is being treated at Safdarjung Hospital.

DCP (Dwarka) Harsha Vardhan said Thursday: "Notice has been sent to Flipkart to provide information regarding the seller and the particular transaction. They have also been asked regarding compliance of regulations related to sale of acid."

Issuing a statement Thursday, Flipkart said, "We strongly condemn this unfortunate incident, and our thoughts and prayers are with the victim and her family. The Flipkart marketplace platform closely monitors and delists products that violate expected standards. Strict action is taken against sellers who are found to be engaged in selling products that are illegal, unsafe, and prohibited. The concerned seller has been blacklisted, and we are extending all support to concerned authorities in their investigation."

"The e-commerce platforms should have done due diligence to ensure hazardous things are not sold on their platforms," a CCPA official said.

The body issued notices, invoking various sections of the Consumer Protection Act, 2019, including Section 2(47) that deals with "unfair trade practice", officials said. "Unfair trade practice" has been defined as "a trade practice which, for the purpose of promoting the sale, use or supply of any goods or for the provision of any service, adopts any unfair method or unfair or deceptive practice..."

The Delhi Commission for Women also issued notice to Flipkart and Amazon on the availability of acid on their platforms and sought a detailed action taken report by December 20.

EXPLAINED

Powers of the CCPA

THE CCPA, established under section 10 of Consumer Protection Act, 2019, is empowered to act against companies allowing sale of hazardous goods. Under Section 2(9) of the Act, the definition of "consumer rights" includes "the right to be protected against the marketing of goods, products or services which are hazardous to life and property". Besides, section 20 of the Act gives powers to the CCPA to order recall of hazardous goods.

Accused browsed several websites to buy acid, say police

Police said the main accused, Sachin Arora (20), was allegedly enraged after the girl ended their friendship 2-3 months ago. Police sources said he allegedly started planning the attack 7-10 days ago and roped in his friends, Harshit Aggarwal (19) and Virender Singh (22), to help him. He allegedly looked at several websites and portals a week before the incident to buy the acid, they said.

"He said he saw videos, crime shows and movies that showed acid attacks and decided to execute it. He called his friends for help... Harshit drove the bike while Virender helped the duo create a false alibi," said a police source.

Police said the acid was delivered near his house. "He didn't choose his house as the delivery location to avoid suspicion from his family," said a police officer.

"They wanted to mislead police and knew phone location is key evidence in crimes. So, they sent Virender on a bike with Sachin's phone to another place. Virender was also wearing Sachin's clothes. He later helped the accused hide," the officer added.

Meanwhile, doctors at Safdarjung Hospital said the girl is stable but it will take 48-72 hours to ascertain how severe her condition is. "She can see and is in a stable condition. Disfigurement has happened," said Medical Superintendent Dr B L Sherwal.

Ahead of G20 summit, beggars near Kashmere Gate to be relocated

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

BEGGARS NEAR Kashmere Gate will be relocated to night shelters ahead of the G20 Summit in Delhi.

A note by the CEO of the Delhi Urban Shelter Improvement Board (DUSIB), K Mahesh, which was sent to officers on the board as well as to the Social Welfare department, said, "Today, a telephonic call was received from the PS to the Hon'ble Chief Minister conveying that the Hon'ble CM has directed that the beggars around Hanuman Mandir, near ISBT, should be removed and relocated to the night shelters of the DUSIB. This exercise is necessitated keeping in view the meetings of the G20 summit."

DUSIB officials have been ordered to coordinate with different government agencies, including the Delhi Police, and to prepare an action plan for shifting the beggars to night shelters in Dwarka and other parts of the city.

A four-member committee has also been formed to put the plan into action.

The plan is to be submitted on Friday.

Pragati Maidan is the main venue of the summit, which will be held in September 2023.

Speaking to The Indian Express, K Mahesh said, "Beggars have the right to live with dignity and honour. At shelters, we will train the individuals in skills that can help them. Apart from physical security, the shelters also provide refuge from the cold, as well as three meals a day."

PhD scholar killed by landlord, body chopped up into 3 pieces

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
GHAZIABAD, DECEMBER 15

A 40-YEAR-OLD PhD scholar was strangled to death allegedly by his landlord, who then proceeded to chop up his body into three pieces using a saw. The victim, Ankit Khokhar, was killed in October in Ghaziabad's Modinagar, said police, adding that they arrested the landlord, Umesh Sharma, and his associate Pravesh Sharma on Wednesday.

According to police, Umesh allegedly murdered Ankit after he found out that the latter had obtained a sum of Rs 1 crore following the sale of ancestral property. Umesh, who worked as a compounder for an orthopedician in Ghaziabad, had also taken a Rs 40 lakh loan from Ankit.

Police, however, now face a challenge: locating the body parts. DCP (Rural) Iraj Raja said: "The body parts were disposed of in three locations — at a canal in Muzaffarnagar's Khatauli, a canal in Ghaziabad's Masuri area, as well as near the Eastern Peripheral Highway in Ghaziabad. The location near the highway is overgrown. It seems that the head of the deceased was disposed here. The exact details of which body parts were disposed of in which canal is not as clear."

Police teams have been dispatched to all three locations to try and recover body parts. While forensic teams were sent to examine the murder spot, the weapon has been recovered. Police said Ankit, who hailed from Baghpat, had been staying on the landlord's property for six months.

After the murder, police said Umesh allegedly withdrew about Rs 20 lakh from several ATMs. He then told Pravesh to withdraw money in Uttarakhand, while leaving his own phone at home, and switching on Ankit's phone near the ATM to create an alibi. Pravesh allegedly went to Haridwar, Rishikesh, and Roorkee on December 1, 2, and 12, withdrawing a sum of Rs 40,000 from an ATM each time.

The house in Ghaziabad's Modinagar where the victim, Ankit Khokhar, lived

Police said Ankit's parents passed away a few years ago. It was his friends who alerted police that something was amiss.

According to his college roommate Dr Vikrant Jawla, their suspicions were raised about two months ago after they received messages from him. "One thing which was suspicious was spelling of certain words in Hindi in messages sent from Ankit's number. While typing Hindi words in English, a different spelling was used compared to how Ankit usually typed," he said.

Two of Ankit's friends then left for his village in Baghpat, where they found on December 9 that he had sold his ancestral property. Six of Ankit's friends, including Vikrant, left for Modinagar and registered a complaint, after which an FIR regarding his disappearance was registered on December 12. Two days later, their worst fears came true.

Vikrant recalled he had first met Ankit in 2002 while he was pursuing a master's in mathematics and Ankit was pursuing masters in statistics. "We were in the same room in University of Meerut... he was a wonderful person. He had recently completed his PhD from BR Ambedkar University in Lucknow and he was planning to go to Germany for further research and studies."

His friends and those who knew him posted tribute on social media. One of his teachers, Surinder Kumar, said, "Very shocking to believe the sad demise of my student. He was a very intelligent and honest person..."

For cyber frauds, FIFA World Cup offers new avenue to dupe people

ANITA BABU
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE FIFA World Cup appears to have provided a fresh opportunity to cyber frauds to target those looking to buy tickets online.

According to cybersecurity experts, once scammers are approached by someone for a ticket, they respond via direct message and provide details of how to buy it for rates ranging between $50 and $120. They insist on using PayPal's 'Family and Friends' payment mode. PayPal doesn't allow paying for goods under this money transfer option, and such transactions are not covered under its fraud protection programme.

Facebook has at least 6-7 active groups run by scammers, said Nandakishore Harikumar, CEO and founder of Technisanct, a cybersecurity firm.

A spokesperson for Meta, Facebook's parent company, stated it won't be able to share its response until they have "looked into the matter".

Such groups exist on Twitter and Telegram, too. "As Telegram continues to rapidly grow around the world, we are working to expand both our Terms of Service and moderation efforts to explicitly restrict and more effectively combat other misuse of the Telegram platform, such as encouraging fraud," Telegram spokesperson Remi Vaughn said in response to The Indian Express's queries.

PayPal did not respond to queries from The Indian Express. A Delhi police spokesperson said they have not received complaints on this matter so far.

'ECO-TOURISM' PUSH

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE DELHI Forest Department is in the process of procuring electric cycles and golf carts to enable visits to the Asola Bhatti Wildlife Sanctuary.

A senior official of the forest department said the specifics on how many people would be allowed into the sanctuary at one time as well as the pathways that will be made available are still being worked out. "All of these vehicles will be electric and visitors will be able to rent them. While a final decision on the number of people that will be allowed into the sanctuary is yet to be taken, it will be a very conservative figure," the official said.

In October, Lieutenant Governor V K Saxena dedicated to the public four artificial waterfalls at the Neeli Jheel and directed officials to develop a cafeteria and public toilets besides deploying electric vehicles for visitors to the jheel as part of turning the area into an 'eco-tourism' hub. The Neeli Jheel is a lake formed in what was once a mining pit and is an important source of water for wildlife in the sanctuary, which includes leopards and hyenas.

The proposal for these 'eco-tourism' facilities is limited as of now, the official said. "While final preparation is yet to be done, the proposal involves walks and taking cycles through some parts of the sanctuary. No new pathways are being created, and the jungle won't be disturbed. Steps made of natural material are nearing completion close to the Neeli Jheel as a sort of viewing point...as of now, we are not allowing anything new that was not allowed earlier," the official said.

The Neeli Jheel is a lake formed in what was once a mining pit

Tender documents show that the forest department intends to purchase 60 electric cycles at an estimated cost of around Rs 39 lakh. A separate tender has been issued to hire six electric golf carts along with six drivers for a year at an estimated cost of around Rs 54 lakh. Tender documents for golf carts indicate that they are likely to be operational for around 10 hours per day for 26 days a month. A charging station will also have to be installed for the carts.

A source said cycle tracks, signages, and a few cycles were already available at the sanctuary, but prices to rent them were yet to be fixed. Private vehicles are being allowed into the sanctuary up to Neeli Jheel, the source said.

Fodder inflation rises to 27.66% in November

HARIKISHAN SHARMA
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THERE IS no respite in sight for families dependent on cattle rearing as the annual rate of fodder inflation rose to 27.66 per cent in November.

Wholesale Price Index (WPI) data released Wednesday by the Commerce and Industry Ministry showed that the index value for fodder was recorded at 225.7 in November, registering an increase of 27.66 per cent over the same month last year (176.8).

Fodder inflation stood at 27.31 per cent in October and 0.68 per cent in November last year.

Not only fodder, feed prices also trended upward. The inflation for 'manufacture of prepared animal feeds', a WPI subgroup, rose to 7.76 per cent in November. It was 3.38 per cent in October and 14.86 per cent last year.

The 'manufacture of prepared animal feeds' subgroup has a weight of 0.35630 in the WPI and includes five items — gola & similar cattle feed; rice bran extract; soya preparations excluding oil; cotton seed oil cake; and mustard oil cake.

In this sub-group, the highest inflation (36.28 per cent) was recorded by 'rice bran extract'. It was followed by 'gola & similar cattle feed' (11.59 per cent) and 'cotton seed oil cake' (6.47 per cent). Two other items, however, recorded negative inflation — soya preparations excluding oil (-9.96 per cent) and mustard oil cake (-25.09).

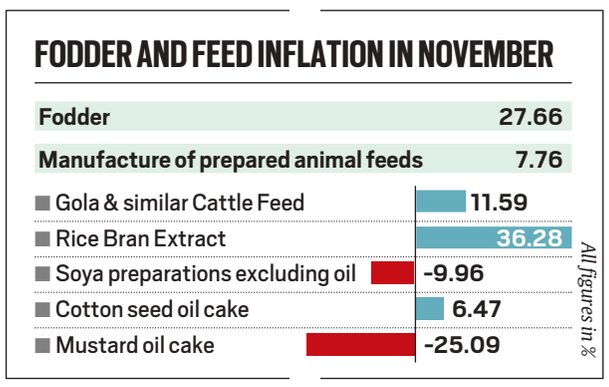

The level of fodder inflation in November 2022 was — the highest since June 2013, when it hit an all-time high of 29.70 per cent.

The upward trends in fodder and feed inflation are in contrast to softening of the overall WPI inflation in recent months. The overall WPI inflation has seen a downward trend in recent months, falling to 5.85 per cent in November– the lowest in the last 21 months — fodder inflation has been rising since December 2021, hovering over 20 per cent during the last 10 months.

In October, this year, The Indian Express had reported that fodder inflation had soared to a nine-year high — 25.54 per cent in August, causing hardship to rural households. The issue of fodder prices has also resonated in Parliament. On December 13, Union Minister for Fisheries, Animal Husbandry and Dairying Parshottam Rupala had informed Lok Sabha that the country is "deficit" in fodder.

"The ICAR- Indian Grassland and Fodder Research Institute, Jhansi has estimated that there is deficit of 11.24% ,23.4% and 28.9% in green fodder, dry fodder and concentrates respectively, in the country," Rupala had said.

STAMPEDE DEATHS AT BJP BLANKET DISTRIBUTION EVENT

Stay on FIRs against Suvendu: SC declines, HC to hear Bengal plea

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

A DAY after three persons died in a stampede at a programme attended by BJP leader Suvendu Adhikari, the West Bengal government on Thursday set out to get the stay on FIRs against him lifted, first moving the Supreme Court, which declined to entertain the plea, and later the Calcutta High Court, which allowed it to file a petition.

The stampede happened during a blanket distribution event in Asansol in West Burdwan district. Adhikari, Leader of Opposition in the Assembly, and fellow party leader Jitendra Tiwari, among others, attended the programme. The stampede happened after Adhikari left the venue.

Leader of Opposition in Bengal Assembly Suvendu Adhikari

In the Supreme Court, senior advocate Abhishek Manu Singhvi, appearing for the state government, said that owing to the December 8 order by a single judge of the High Court — which stayed all FIRs against Adhikari and barred police from registering more without its permission — the Bengal government was unable to file a case against him in connection with the incident.

Singhvi told the bench of Chief Justice of India D Y Chandrachud and Justice P S Narasimha that the state had moved the Supreme Court for modification of the order as the judge, Justice Rajasekhar Mantha, was not available for judicial work in Kolkata.

The court, however, said even if the judge was unavailable for work "by virtue of his judicial assignment at Port Blair, the petitioner had the remedy of moving the Chief Justice of the High Court of Calcutta for appropriate administrative directions". With the bench not inclined to entertain the plea, Singhvi withdrew it.

The state then verbally moved the Bench of Calcutta High Court Chief Justice Prakash Shrivastava, seeking permission to file a petition against the single-judge Bench's order. The High Court allowed the verbal prayer.

SC to hear pleas challenging electoral bonds scheme in Jan

New Delhi: The Supreme Court on Thursday said it will consider a request to refer petitions challenging the electoral bond scheme to a Constitution bench in January next year. A bench of Justices B R Gavai and Vikram Nath told advocate Prashant Bhushan, who sought the reference, that a preliminary hearing would be required for that.

Bhushan said the plea involves "weighty issues of public importance" and an "authoritative pronouncement" is required. "What is the pressing urgency that it has to be heard on the penultimate day before vacation?" the bench asked and posted the matter for hearing next month. ENS

Delhi HC reserves order on pleas challenging Agnipath scheme

MALAVIKA PRASAD
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE DELHI High Court on Thursday reserved judgment on a batch of pleas challenging the constitutional validity of the Agnipath recruitment scheme in the armed forces.

The court also reserved its verdict on pleas pertaining to recruitment processes announced under certain previous advertisements, which were put on hold before the launch of the Agnipath scheme.

A division bench of Chief Justice Satish Chandra Sharma and Justice Subramonium Prasad asked the parties to file their written submissions by December 23 before the court closes for winter break.

On day three of the arguments, Additional Solicitor General Aishwarya Bhati appearing for the Centre said the decision to cancel the recruitment processes was not taken in 2021. "It (Agnipath scheme) got decided in June 2022 when it was notified in a gazette," Bhati said. She said that the Union of India had not chosen advertisements and that till May 31, 2021 it tried its best to carry out recruitment wherever it could.

She also said the Agnipath scheme was going to bring a "paradigm shift" in the way armed forces personnel were recruited. "You are dealing with a defence policy. A lot of things we have said orally and a lot of things we cannot say on affidavit because this is concerning the nation's readiness in warfare," Bhati said.

VIJAY DIWAS

Fight for Bangladesh's freedom

Vijay Diwas also marks the contribution of Indian Armed Forces in the Bangladesh War

SHEIKH Mujibur Rahman, the founding father of Bangladesh, once said in his famous March 7 speech in 1971, "Today, in Dhaka, Chattogram, Khulna, Rajshahi and Rangpur, the streets are dyed red with the blood of our brethren. Today, the people of Bengal want freedom, the people of Bengal want to survive, the people of Bengal want to have their rights." These words immediately struck a chord with every Bangladeshi during a period of escalating tensions between the then East Pakistan and the powerful establishment of West Pakistan, becoming the precursor of Vijay Diwas for the now People's Republic of Bangladesh.

Vijay Diwas or Victory Day, which is observed on December 16 every year in Bangladesh and by the Bangladeshi community all over the globe alongside the Indian Armed Forces, commemorates the defeat of the Pakistani Armed Forces in the historic Bangladesh Liberation War that lasted from March 26 to December 16, 1971. The day marks the occasion when a written agreement between India, Pakistan and the Provisional Government of Bangladesh came into effect in 1971, thereby effectively bringing an end to the Bangladesh Liberation War while formally etching the ineffaceable presence of the People's Republic of Bangladesh on the global map as an independent nation.

On this eventful day, 51 years ago, the largest surrender of military personnel took place since the end of World War II, with the capitulation of around 93,000 West Pakistani troops of the Eastern Command of the Pakistan army. On December 16, 1971, Lieutenant General Amir Abdullah Khan Niazi of the Pakistan Army formally accepted this epoch-making surrender to the Mukti Bahini, also known as the Bangladesh Forces and the Indian Army; marking the end of the war and the official secession of East Pakistan. As he signed the unconditional Pakistani Instrument of Surrender effectuating the laying down the arms of his forces to the Indian Army's Lieutenant General Jagjit Singh Arora, who led the momentous war to a victorious conclusion as the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief Eastern Command, it paved the way for the creation of the independent nation of Bangladesh.

Member nations of the United Nations were quick to recognise the independent identity of Bangladesh. However, the Bangladesh Liberation War, which lasted for nine months, went down in history as one of the most violent wars of the 20th century. It also resulted in the exodus of nearly 10 million refugees and the barbaric killing of 3 million people at the hands of the Pakistani Armed Forces.

Bengali nationalism rose amidst growing discontent surrounding Pakistani military rulers' refusal to transfer power to the Bengali nationalist leader Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. East Pakistan had become a seedbed of pro-democracy movements and bore witness to a steady surge in Bengali nationalism between 1952 and 1970. This reached a crescendo when the Pakistani military junta refused to transfer power to Rahman's party, Awami League, which had gained a majority in the National Assembly of Pakistan in the general election held in 1970.

Although Bangabandhu had declared the independence of Bangladesh informally through the historic speech on March 7, 1971, to over two million people in Dhaka, the war broke out on the night of March 25, 1971, with the launch of Operation Searchlight. The said military operation, carried out by West Pakistan's military junta against the people of East Pakistan under the orders of their third President, Yahya Khan, was a desperate effort to curb the Bengali nationalist movement that was gathering momentum in East Pakistan.

The Bangladesh War of Independence saw the Mukti Bahini of Bangladesh join forces with the Indian military to wage a successful armed revolution against the Pakistani military that surrendered in Dhaka on December 16, 1971.

Victory Day celebrations are of importance to not only Bangladesh, wherein Bangladesh Armed Forces' military parade takes place alongside ceremonial meetings, speeches and broadcast of patriotic programmes, but also mark a special occasion celebrated across India, which bears testimony to the pivotal role of the Indian military and its contribution in the war.

The day commemorates the defeat of Pakistani Forces in the Bangladesh Liberation War that lasted from March 26 to December 16, 1971. With the capitulation of 93,000 West Pakistani troops, it was the largest surrender of military personnel since World War II

Opp, BJP MPs raise heat over Tawang, Bihar hooch deaths

Cong's Adhir cites The Indian Express report on probe into recent cyberattack on AIIMS-Delhi servers pointing to hackers in Hong Kong and Henan province

LIZ MATHEW
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

Proceedings underway in the Lok Sabha on Thursday. ANI

THE LOK Sabha on Thursday witnessed another day of Opposition and ruling party members slamming each other. As the Congress kept up the issue of PLA transgression in Arunachal Pradesh, seeking a discussion on the incident in Tawang sector and asking why the government is reluctant to show its "red eyes" to China, BJP members brought up the hooch deaths in Bihar's Saran district and sought immediate action against the Nitish Kumar government.

The ruling party members held the Bihar government responsible for the incident, in which 26 deaths were officially confirmed — while one BJP member put the toll at 37, Saran MP Rajiv Pratap Rudy claimed it was up to 52 and may increase further.

Congress leader Adhir Ranjan Chowdhury cited two reports in The Indian Express to point out that the probe into the recent cyberattack on some servers of AIIMS-Delhi found that IP addresses of two emails of the hackers originated from Hong Kong, and China's Henan province. The other report referred to by Chowdhury said India's imports from China have jumped to a record high over the last 30 months.

"The reports on the main page of The Indian Express say the cyberattack on AIIMS originated from China. While China is attacking us at the border, instead of showing it the 'red eye', this government has let a steep rise in trade..." he said.

"We wonder what's the intention of this government. Our trade with the US has dropped but trade with China, in which that country benefits, has gone up. When China is attacking and harming us, why should we help China? When will you show the red eye to China," Chowdhury asked, amid shouts of "shame, shame" from the Opposition benches.

The Congress leader was apparently referring to Prime Minister Narendra Modi's 2014 remark on showing "laal ankh" (red eyes) to the Chinese over repeated transgressions at the LAC.

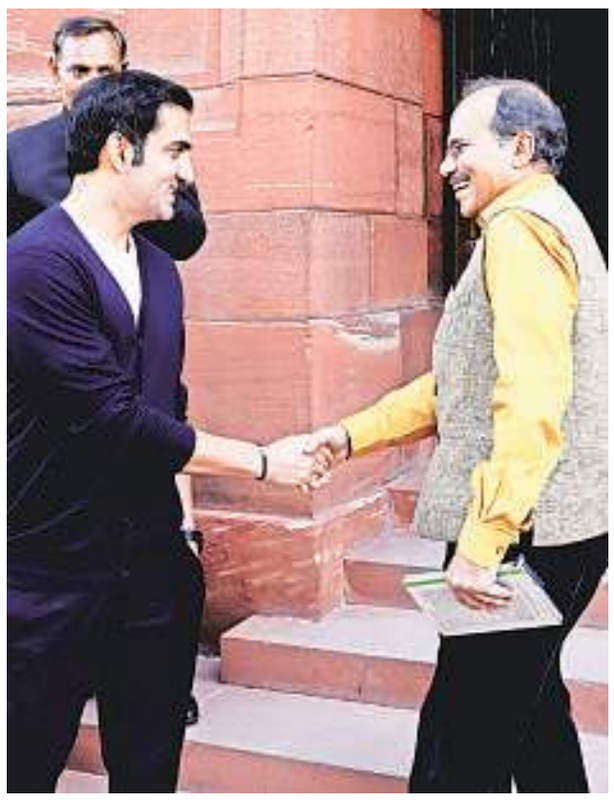

Backing Chowdhury, TMC's Sudip Bandyopadhyay asked the Chair when the government would allow a debate on the issue. Rajendra Agrwal, who was in the Chair, said the Business Advisory Committee will take a decision on it.

In Zero Hour, Sanjay Jaiswal, BJP MP and the party's Bihar unit president, said sale of spurious liquor is flourishing in Bihar but the CM is not taking any action. Claiming that 37 people have died in the Saran hooch incident, he said, "It is Bihar government-sponsored murder of 37 people. Spurious liquor is supplied to every household...with help and protection of police in the state, although prohibition is in place."

"More than 15 such incidents have taken place so far, but he (CM) says those who consume liquor will die or go to jail," he said. "I urge the Centre to take cognizance of the (prevailing) law and order situation and take immediate action against the Bihar government."

Referring to a different issue, BJP member from Aurangabad (Bihar), Sushil Kumar Singh, called the Saran deaths a "mass murder" and held Bihar government responsible.

Rudy urged the Union Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) to send a Central team "without any delay" to take stock of the situation.

Kalpakkam fast breeder reactor nearly complete, says minister

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE PROTOTYPE Fast Breeder Reactor (FBR) at the Kalpakkam nuclear power plant in Tamil Nadu is "nearly complete", Union Minister of State for Atomic Energy Jitendra Singh told the Rajya Sabha on Thursday.

FBRs are special kinds of nuclear reactors that generate more atomic fuel than they consume as they work.

During Question Hour, Shiv Sena MP Priyanka Chaturvedi asked Singh about the progress on the reactor, saying the MoS had informed Parliament during the last Winter Session that the reactor will be completed by October 2022.

"Kalpakkam is one of the oldest reactors. We have four units and it is totally indigenous. The reactor that you have mentioned is nearly complete…If I might add over here, only in the last about eight-and-a-half years, many of the units have been made functional," he said.

Bumpy Zero Hour in RS as Opp ruckus forces adjournments

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE ZERO Hour in the Rajya Sabha saw noisy scenes as Opposition MPs sought to raise a range of issues, including what they termed was the government's interference in appointment of judges and its misuse of Central agencies, leading to repeated adjournments.

As the Zero Hour proceedings began, Opposition MPs shouted slogans and protested in the well of the House.

Deputy Chairman Harivansh said he had received seven notices under Rule 267, which pertains to requests to the Chairman for suspension of listed business to raise other subjects.

The requests pertained to "concern over government's attempt to interfere in appointment in higher judiciary; misuse of CBI, ED and other government agencies; situation arising out of farmers' strike; and subversion of democratic system and threatening of electoral process", Harivansh said.

Harivansh said Rajya Sabha Chairman, Jagdeep Dhankhar, had on December 8, while considering similar notices, observed that the notices should refer to the relevant rule that is to be suspended.

"In none of the notices received today, there is any reflection as to which rule is sought to be suspended," Harivansh said and asked the MPs to allow the House to proceed.

The notices were filed by MPs Raghav Chadha, Pramod Tiwari, Akhilesh Prasad Singh, Dr. L Hanumanthaiah, Priyanka Chaturvedi, Jebi Mather Hisham and Syed Nasir Hussain.

TMC MP Derek O' Brien said the Chair had not accepted any notice under Rule 267 in the past six years and the last time such a notice was allowed was in 2016 on the topic of demonetisation and it was not linked to any other rule.

Elections costly, holding at same time will save money: Rijiju

New Delhi: Elections have become a "big budget affair" and holding simultaneous polls to Lok Sabha and state assemblies would result in huge savings to the exchequer, the government said on Thursday.

Law Minister Kiren Rijiju said the need for simultaneous elections to Lok Sabha and legislative assemblies has been felt as polls have become "big budget affair and expensive".

In a written reply to a question in Rajya Sabha, he said the Law Commission in its report on Reforms in Electoral Laws had suggested simultaneous elections to Lok Sabha and state assemblies for the sake of stability in governance. "Simultaneous elections would result in huge saving to the public exchequer, avoidance of replication of effort on part of administrative and law and order machinery in holding repeated elections and bring considerable savings to political parties and candidates in their election campaigns," Rijiju said. PTI

5 QUESTIONS

CONGRESS MP VIVEK TANKHA SPEAKS TO DAMINI NATH ABOUT HIS SUGGESTION THAT COURTS SHOULD NOT HAVE VACATIONS

'Sovereign function doesn't go on vacation'

What exactly is your suggestion?
My suggestion is that courts are a continuing activity…There's no question of courts being on vacation. This is a colonial concept. Judges and lawyers can go on vacations.

Why do you feel the need for this change?
Court can never stop functioning because people have bail applications and other important issues. Nearly 5 crore cases are pending in India. Judicial reforms should start from within…It's like the government, which never stops functioning. This (courts) is also a function, a sovereign function, and a sovereign function does not go on vacation.

In your experience, how do long vacations affect delivery of justice?
Out of 365 days, the Supreme Court works for about 210-215 days and High Courts work for 210 days. In addition, not in Delhi but in other High Courts, you have strikes and condolences, so at the end of the day, they may be working for 180 or 200 days. If I can work for 300 days, the system can work for 300 days, see the amount of cases that can be disposed of. Half the time, the judges don't even go for a vacation because how many times will you go to a hill station? They can go on vacation as per their need, the institution should keep functioning.

How is this issue handled in other countries?
There is no concept of vacations for the court in other countries. This was a concept that started with British judges as they used to go back to England. They don't have vacations in England, but had them in India.

Do you think it will be acceptable to the court? And is it appropriate for the Law Minister to make this suggestion to the court?
It is the sentiment of the nation and everybody is feeling the need for reform. We're not taking away their facility, not saying they will not get a vacation. They will get their vacation for one month or whatever number of days is decided. There is nothing wrong if the Law Minister makes the suggestion. Even the Parliamentary Standing Committee can make the suggestion. This is in public interest.

Against demolition of houses of homeless people, says Puri

LIZ MATHEW
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

Union Minister for Housing and Urban Affairs Hardeep Singh Puri speaks in Lok Sabha on Thursday PTI

UNION HOUSING and Urban Affairs Minister Hardeep Puri Thursday said in the Lok Sabha that he is against the demolition of the dwellings of disadvantaged and homeless people, and that there should be a humanitarian streak while dealing with such cases.

Responding to a supplementary question raised by Congress MP Ravneet Singh Bittu over demolitions in his Jalandhar constituency, Puri said he agreed with the member on the issue. "I will join that sentiment, and I will appeal to everyone concerned that people — who are placed in disadvantageous situations — should be provided relief."

The minister said that in the case of those who lost their houses in Punjab, there are people outside the country who are willing to help. "I will endorse that sentiment that, whether in any climatic condition, or in any part of the year — when it is cold or not so cold — you have no right to demolish the houses of those people."

"There are norms which have to be followed, and at the heart of that, there should be a humanitarian streak that people — who are without a shelter — should be provided shelter, rather than demolishing whatever their temporary locations are — if that word is used and appropriate in that incident — and then, sending them hundreds of kilometres away," the minister said.

When Opposition MPs asked him if he has the same view about the demolition drive in other states also, Puri said he holds the same view for everyone. When Congress MP Karti P Chidambaram asked if he held the same view for the demolition happening in Uttar Pradesh, Puri said: "I join it everywhere.. Well, I am talking about those humanitarian situations. I am not in a position to provide a guarantee on behalf of the state of Tamil Nadu. I am not in a position to do that. If some illegal activity is being carried out in a particular state."

The minister could not complete as Speaker Om Birla asked him why he was responding to the questions from others rather than those who were called to raise questions.

On the question on schemes for rehabilitation of homeless people, Puri maintained that "land and colonisation are state subjects and it is essentially the responsibility of the state government to provide facilities for homeless people. His own party colleague and former union minister Pratap Chandra Sarangi said a demarcation line between the Centre and states cannot be drawn. "The Central government should urge the state governments to do their services."

Speaker Birla asked Puri to speak to states to try to come out with a framework so that homeless could be housed.

Opp walks out over minister's fuel price reply

New Delhi: Petroleum Minister Hardeep Puri on Thursday put the onus of reducing fuel prices on the state governments, saying they should reduce the Value-Added Tax (VAT) on petroleum products to "join the mainstream celebration", even as the Opposition protested and staged a walk out in the Lok Sabha.

Responding to a question asked by K. Muraleedharan, a member from Kerala, on why the prices of petroleum products in India are not maintained or reduced corresponding with the international crude oil price, Puri said "for the last eight years, the increase has been the lowest since 1974".

Expressing unhappiness over his explanation, the Congress, DMK, NCP and Left parties walked out of the House. Sudip Bandyopadhyay of the Trinamool Congress also stood up and registered his protest before leading his MPs to stage a walk out. ENS

THE CENTRE spent more than Rs 3,700 crore on advertisements in the last five years, although there was no increase in spending on advertising of its policies and programmes, Union I&B Minister Anurag Thakur informed the Parliament on Thursday.

According to a written reply tabled by Thakur in the Rajya Sabha, the government, through the Central Bureau of Communication, spent over Rs 1,200 crore on advertisements in 2017-18.

In 2018-19, ahead of the 2019 general election, the government incurred an expenditure of around Rs 1,100 crore. In 2019-20, the government spent Rs 627.67 crore, while its spending on publicity in 2020-21 was Rs 349.09 crore, besides Rs 264.78 crore in 2021-22.

In the current fiscal, the government has spent Rs 154.07 crore on advertisements till December 9.

"As per the above data, expenditure on advertisement and publicity has not increased in the last few years," Thakur said in response to a question by Congress MP Syed Nasir Hussain, who asked whether the government was aware its spending on advertisement and publicity had increased manifold in the last few years.

In response to another question posed by CPM MP from Kerala, AA Rahim, on December 8, Thakur had said the CBC) releases advertisements through various media platforms "keeping in view the campaign requirement, the budget of the campaign, the target audience and the area and preferences indicated by client ministries/ departments".

Rahim has asked about "the details of the expenditure incurred by government on print, television, electronic and other forms of advertising over the last five years till date, year-wise and ministry-wise", besides the procedure by which advertisements are allotted to newspapers and channels.

'Scared for 2040': MPs urge check on global warming

MAHENDER SINGH MANRAL
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE MEMBERS of the Opposition in the Rajya Sabha on Thursday raised concern over the issue of climate change and asked the central government to coordinate with all ministries, agencies and private sector to take remedial steps to mitigate the effect of global warming.

Senior DMK leader Tiruchi Siva, CPI member P Sandosh Kumar and Congress MP Pramod Tiwari raised a short-duration discussion in the Upper House of Parliament on the serious effects of global warming.

Initiating the discussion, Siva said, "What is looming over our head is very alarming and threatening. I feel it is not just the responsibility of the Union government, but also of the states, private sector, civil society, yourself, myself and everyone in the country. We alone are not the cause, the whole world is the cause for it. But the effect upon us is more. India will be the seventh country to be affected because of this climate change."

Siva said, "The target of the union government is that by 2070, there will be zero carbon emission. It is around 50 years from now. I am scared for 2040. What was the situation in 2000 and what it is in 2020? We can see the variations. The threat has increased. The alarm bell is ringing like anything. I don't think that we can wait for 50 years."

The discussion was initiated by DMK leader Tiruchi Siva

The DMK member said the environment ministry has to coordinate with other ministries such as agriculture, urban development and industries so that a "holistic approach" is taken as activities in each of these areas have a consequence on the environment. "The emission of greenhouse gases by 10 countries amounts to two-thirds of the whole world's emission and we stand at the third place," he said.

"China is at number one – it emits 10.6 gigatonnes. Two years ago, it was 9.8 gigatonnes and now it is 10.6, United States emits 4.7 gigatonnes and India emits 2.8 gigatonnes. It is high time and we have to think about it," he said.

Amee Yajnik of the Congress reiterated the need to enhance India's usage of renewable and clean energy and reduce dependence on fossil fuels, while increasing forest cover to meet the net zero target set for 2070.

"People are using vehicles even for travelling 100 metres. Someday some government would need to impose a restriction that no more than this amount of petrol will be given to you in a day...Even knowing that this will lead to loss in elections, but in the interest of the nation such measures will need to be taken," he said.

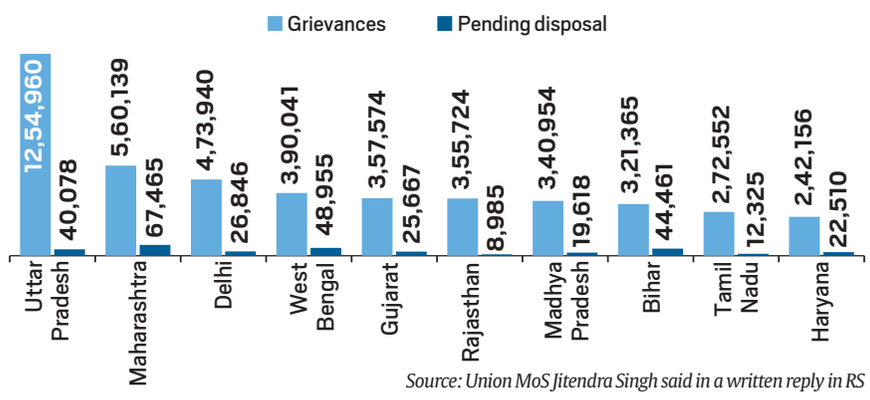

Jawhar Sircar of the TMC said: "West Bengal is a victim of this delayed monsoon like many other states...This is an effect of climate change and we better realise that we are all contributing to it," he said.

OFFER YOU CAN'T REFUSE

AS QUESTIONS were asked from his two ministries — Housing and Urban Affairs, and Petroleum and Natural Gases — in Parliament, Union minister Hardeep Puri on Thursday invited MPs to his office for a cup of coffee or tea to get more details. So, when TDP member Jayadev Galla asked Puri about the ministry's move to stop work on the masterplan for Amaravati as the capital of Andhra Pradesh, Puri said the question was "far removed" from what he had come prepared for but said he would be happy to invite him for a cup of tea or coffee and sit down with him. As Congress leader Adhir Ranjan Chowdhury chipped in to ask, "Sir, coffee or high tea?", pat came Puri's reply: "Whatever you prefer, and depending on the time of the day. If you like to come a little (late) in the evening, we can organise that, too." The response seemed to have cheered the Opposition benches, with members thumping desks in appreciation.

BIG SHOW

THE CONGRESS, it seems, is keen that its top leadership is in Delhi when the Bharat Jodo Yatra enters the national capital on December 24. The party has convened a meeting of all AICC general secretaries, leaders in charge of different states, state Congress presidents and CLP leaders on December 23 to review preparations of the "haath se haath jodo (join hands)" campaign to be launched as a follow-up to the yatra. The meeting will ensure that chief ministers of the three Congress-governed states, party's state unit chiefs and AICC office-bearers are in Delhi a day before. The yatra is scheduled to enter Delhi from Faridabad, Haryana, on December 24. Once in Delhi, the plan is to walk to Rajghat. The yatra will then take a break until January 2 or 3.

Agni-5 ballistic missile test-fired successfully

PUNE, DECEMBER 15

INDIA on Thursday carried out a successful night time flight test of the long-range surface-to-surface Nuclear Capable Ballistic missile, Agni-5, news agency ANI reported. The test comes amid increased tension with China following the recent clashes along the LAC in Arunachal Pradesh.

The Strategic Forces Command (SFC), which operates the Agni-5, carried out the successful test from APJ Abdul Kalam Island off the coast of Odisha. The nuclear capable missile, which uses a three-stage solid fuelled engine, has been developed by the Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO). SFC is a key tri-services formation that manages and administers all the strategic assets and falls under purview of the Nuclear Command Authority of India.

Quoting Defence Ministry sources, ANI reported that the test was carried to validate new technologies and equipment onboard the missile, which can strike targets at ranges of around 5,000 to 5,500 kilometers with a very high degree of accuracy. "The trial has proved the capability to enhance the range of Agni-5 missiles, if required," news agency ANI quoted defence sources as saying.

The Ministry of Defence has not released any statement regarding the test.

The last test conducted in October 2021 was also conducted at night. Days prior to the test, the Government of India had issued a Notice to Airmen NOTAM area warning for December 15 and 16 of maximum length of 5,400 km starting from the Odisha coast.

Agni-5 has been successfully tested multiple times since 2012. At the time of the last test in October 2021, the Ministry of Defence had highlighted the posture of 'credible minimum deterrence' and 'No First Use' that are pivotal points of India's nuclear doctrine, first published in 2003.

The pointers from the doctrine are: Building and maintaining a credible minimum deterrent. Posture of 'No First Use', meaning nuclear weapons will only be used in retaliation against a nuclear attack on Indian territory or on Indian forces anywhere. The nuclear retaliation to a first strike will be massive and designed to 'inflict unacceptable damage'.

While the DRDO has not officially declared, Agni-6 is also said to be under development with much longer range starting 8000 km and has Multi Independently Targetable Re-entry Vehicle carrying capabilities.

The development of Agni missiles started in early 1980 under Integrated Guided Missile Development Programme spearheaded by Dr APJ Abdul Kalam, the central figure in India's missile and space programmes.

EXPLAINED

Agni missiles and their range

MEDIUM TO Intercontinental versions of Agni missiles systems 1 to 5 have varying ranges, starting from 700 km for Agni-1 to 5000 km and above for Agni-5. In June last year, DRDO had successfully tested Agni P, a canisterised missile with range capability between 1,000 and 2,000 km. Agni-6 is also said to be under development with a range starting 8000 km.

AT UNSC, INDIA ATTACKS PAKISTAN AND CHINA

Contemporary epicentre of terror still active: Jaishankar

YOSHITA SINGH
UNITED NATIONS, DECEMBER 15

External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar Thursday told the United Nations Security Council (UNSC) that the "contemporary epicentre of terrorism" remains active as he lamented that evidence-backed proposals to blacklist terrorists are put on hold without adequate reason, in a veiled attack on China and its ally Pakistan.

Jaishankar, who presided over the 'UNSC Briefing: Global Counterterrorism Approach: Challenges and Way Forward', described terrorism as an existential threat to international peace.

"The threat of terrorism has actually become more serious. We have seen the expansion of al-Qaeda, Da'esh, Boko Haram and al-Shabab and their affiliates," he said in his address to the 15-nation Council.

External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar with Indian officials at the UN. PTI

Jaishankar, speaking in his national capacity, said: "At the other end of the spectrum are 'lone wolf' attacks inspired by online radicalisation and biases. But somewhere in all of this, we cannot forget that old habits and established networks are still alive, especially in South Asia. The contemporary epicentre of terrorism remains very much active, whatever gloss may be applied to minimise unpleasant realities." He was seen as referring to Pakistan, which is accused by its neighbours of harbouring terrorists and providing havens to terrorist groups.

"Uniform criteria are not applied to sanctioning and prosecuting terrorists. It would seem sometimes that the ownership of terrorism is more important than its actual perpetration or its consequences," he said.

"We have seen protections that come close to justification. Then, there are evidence-backed proposals that are put on hold without assigning adequate reason. Conversely, there has even been recourse to anonymity to avoid taking ownership of untenable cases," he added. PTI

INDIA ANNOUNCES UNSC CANDIDATURE FOR 2028-29

UN: India has declared its candidature for non-permanent membership of the UN Security Council for 2028-29, External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar said Thursday. India on December 1 assumed the monthly rotating UNSC Presidency. "We have declared our candidature for our next tenure at the Security Council for 2028-29," Jaishankar said. India, whose 2021-2022 term on the Council ends December 31, has been at the forefront of efforts calling for urgent reform of the UNSC, which has remained divisive in dealing with current challenges. PTI

IAF carries out mega exercise in NE; gets last of 36 Rafale jets

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

AMID A fresh spike of border tension with China along the Line of Actual Control (LAC) in Arunachal Pradesh, the Indian Air Force, bolstered by its full complement of Rafale combat jets, on Thursday launched a major exercise covering the Northeast region.

The two-day mega exercise involves almost all its frontline fighter jets and other assets deployed in the region, said people familiar with the drill.

In a tweet, the IAF said the last of the 36 Rafale jets joined the force. The IAF inducted the Rafale aircraft into its 101 Squadron of the Eastern Air Command at the Hasimara in July last year. The first Rafale squadron with around 18 jets is based in Ambala air base.

"FEET DRY! 'The Pack is Complete'. The last of the 36 IAF Rafales landed in India after a quick enroute sip from a UAE Air Force tanker," the IAF said.

The last of the 36 Rafale jets joined the Air Force in the drill. File

Sources said the French-manufactured jet joined the second Rafale squadron in Hasimara, which increased its strength to 18 aircraft.

They said the second squadron of Rafale jets was to be part of the mega exercise along with other key assets, such as Sukhoi-30MKI aircraft under the Eastern Air Command.

An IAF official said the exercise was planned in advance and was not associated with recent developments in the Tawang sector.

On Monday, the Indian Army said troops from the two sides clashed along the LAC in the Tawang sector and the face-off led to "minor injuries to a few personnel from both sides". Defence Minister Rajnath Singh on Tuesday told the Parliament that the Indian troops bravely thwarted the attempt by Chinese PLA from "unilaterally" changing the status in Yangtse area of the Tawang sector and there were no fatalities or serious casualties to the Indian troops in the scuffle.

All frontline air bases and some key Advanced Landing Grounds in the Northeast are set to be involved in the exercise, said a source.

The Army and IAF have been maintaining a high state of operational readiness along the LAC in the Arunachal Pradesh and the Sikkim sectors for over two years following the eastern Ladakh row.

After decades, CPM veteran gets a house with help from party

SHAJU PHILIP
THIRUVANANTHAPURAM, DECEMBER 15

VETERAN CPI(M) leader P K Gurudasan has long lived out of rented premises provided by his party. On Thursday, the 87-year-old, who has served as a member of the Central Committee, moved into a house of his own — constructed with a some help from the party.

The 1,700 sq ft, two-bedroom house at Karette in Thiruvananthapuram district was constructed by the Kollam district committee of the CPI(M). It mobilised Rs 35 lakh from senior members across the district.

It was built on 10 cents of land owned by his wife, C Lilly.

A prominent leader of the CITU, the CPI(M) trade union wing, Gurudasan had been a legislator for 10 years and had served as excise and labour minister in the government led by V S Achuthanandan from 2006 to 2011. While serving as party district secretary in Kollam for 25 years, Gurudasan had lived in a rented house near the party office.

P K Gurudasan has been a legislator for 10 years

"It is a day of happiness. Party work is not to make money, but for carrying forward work. A house can be built only with one's own wealth. As I don't have that kind of money, the Kollam committee has constructed the house for me. I never felt I should own a house. I have lived in many rented houses, barring the time I was a minister, when I lived in an official residence," he told the media.

Delhi HC reserves order on Thackeray challenge to plea dismissal

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE DELHI High Court Thursday reserved its order after former Maharashtra chief minister Uddhav Thackeray challenged the dismissal of his plea against the freezing of Shiva Sena's name and election symbol.

A Bench of Chief Justice Satish Chandra Sharma and Justice Subramonium Prasad, after hearing arguments of counsels for both the parties, said, "We will pass appropriate orders."

Thackeray and Eknath Shinde's factions approached the Election Commission with competing claims on the party name and the bow and arrow symbol.

The panel, in an interim order on October 8, restrained both factions from using the name and symbol.

On November 15, a single-judge bench of Justice Sanjeev Narula dismissed Thackeray's plea and directed the ECI to decide the issue in an "expeditious manner". The court also observed that expeditious disposal would be in the interest of the parties as well as the public, noting that there was no "interdict" on the matter by the SC. The judge said that the objection on maintainability of the petition will be examined by the EC on its own merits while reaching a final decision.

Senior advocate Kapil Sibal, appearing for Thackeray, submitted that the EC did not hear him while passing the freezing of symbol order. He submitted that a single judge could not have passed an order making observations on how the EC should proceed.

Out in the cold, BSY flip-flop on BJP event signals chill before polls

BENGALURU, DECEMBER 15

IN THE run-up to the Karnataka Assembly elections slated for May next year, one of the key questions doing the rounds in state political circles is about the level of investment of veteran BJP leader and former chief minister B S Yediyurappa in the polls after having been forced to relinquish the CM's post for Basavaraj Bommai last year.

Some recent developments in the BJP have reinforced the perception that the 79-year-old Lingayat stalwart Yediyurappa has continued to be upset with the state of affairs in the ruling party since he was ousted as the CM on account of the age factor.

Yediyurappa wields considerable influence over the Lingayat community, which is the largest caste group in Karnataka.

Over the week Yediyurappa declared his plan to skip the BJP's major pre-election event, Vijay Sankalp Yatra, in the Koppal region involving the party's national president J P Nadda, in what was widely seen as a sign of his "unhappiness" with the BJP at both the state and national levels.

It took much persuasion by senior BJP leaders – including the state party in-charge Arun Singh, a meeting between Bommai and Amit Shah in Delhi, and a separate meeting between Shah and Yediyurappa's son Vijayendra in Delhi on Wednesday – for Yediyurappa to finally head to Koppal on Thursday to attend the party's event.

The signs of Yediyurappa's resentment first emerged Tuesday when he announced that he would not attend the Vijay Sankalp Yatra event due to his prior commitments. His declaration was reportedly prompted by the party's invite for the event downplaying his name.

"I have spoken to Yediyurappa. It was confirmed on December 12 that the BJP national president will be attending the event at Koppal. In this regard, I have met him. He has said he will not be participating in the Koppal event. The reason is that he has another programme already," BJP general secretary N Ravikumar said Tuesday after being sent as an emissary to persuade Yediyurappa to attend the event.

"There is no intention to lower his dignity or standing in the party. The decision has been taken suddenly to have the programme at Koppal. He has conveyed that he is not upset," Ravikumar claimed.

On Wednesday the BJP general secretary however offered a different explanation, saying that there were "some mistakes in the planning of the event" and that Yediyurappa agreed to attend the event. "He (Yediyurappa) will go on a special flight to Koppal. All the leaders will attend the event," Ravikumar said.

On Thursday morning, Yediyurappa himself announced that he had changed his plan and would attend the BJP rally with Nadda. "Nadda is coming to Koppal and I will be attending the programme. Earlier I was not going to attend the event due to some reasons. Now there is a situation where it is imperative that I attend the event. So I am going. The CM will also be attending the event. We will participate together. There are no differences between us," he said. "The party has not neglected me. There is no truth in the matter. I am attending all the party programmes."

Yediyurappa further said, "There is no truth in rumours that the BJP is attempting to finish me off. Nobody can finish anybody in politics. I have my own strength. I have built the party and will continue to do so."

According to BJP sources, Yediyurappa's initial decision to skip the Koppal rally was because of an "insignificant mention" of him in the party's official invitation. "It was made to seem that he was just another leader," sources said. FULL REPORT ON www.indianexpress.com

Toll at least 26: Struck by biggest hooch tragedy since liquor ban, Bihar forms SIT

CM says you will die if you drink; BJP's Sushil Modi says Nitish's responsibility to make prohibition a success

MASRAKH (SARAN), DEC 15

AS SARAN district recovers from grief after 26 hooch-related deaths were reported — officially — since Tuesday night from three blocks, the administration on Thursday decided to form a special investigation team (SIT) to crack the state's biggest tragedy involving alleged consumption of spurious country liquor since prohibition was imposed in April 2016.

The deaths took place between Tuesday and Thursday at Masrakh and Isuapur and Amnour blocks of Saran — the spurious country liquor was allegedly sold from the same tanker in all these areas.

Local residents said since several bodies are cremated without a postmortem — families often do not inform police and get an autopsy conducted under pressure from the "liquor mafia" — and the administration does not count those as hooch deaths. At Bahrauli panchayat of Masrakh, which reported 12 deaths, mukhiya (village head) Ajit Kumar Singh explained why cremation is often done with sending a body for autopsy: fear. "Bodies of three people — Chandeshwar Sah, Dudhnath Tiwari and Anil Thakur — were cremated without postmortem," he said. "We live under tremendous fear of the liquor mafia; their agents are everywhere..."

Superintendent of Police, Saran, Santosh Kumar said four suspects have been arrested and an SIT has been set up to probe the matter.

Confirming 26 deaths, Saran district magistrate Rajesh Meena said: "Postmortem of 17 people have been done so far. We have prima facie found dereliction of duty on part of Marhaura sub-divisional police officer Indrajit Baitha and recommended departmental action against him, as also his transfer. Masrakh police station in-charge Ritesh Kumar Mishra and thana chowkidar Vikesh Tiwari have been suspended."

The DM also said, "We have conducted intensive raids across the district in the last 48 hours and nabbed 126 hooch traders. More than 4,000 litres of illicit liquor have also been seized," he said.

Outside the state Assembly in Patna, Chief Minister Nitish Kumar told reporters, "Strict action is being taken in Chhapra (Saran) case."

Nitish also said, "I have been warning people against drinking spurious liquor by repeating that piyoge toh maroge (if you drink, you will die). But I want to know if people were not dying because of drinking spurious liquor before prohibition."

Hitting back, Sushil Kumar Modi, BJP Rajya Sabha MP and Nitish's former deputy before he split from NDA, said that crores of people drink liquor in the country, and should all of them die. Modi told PTI, "Nitish Kumar imposed prohibition. So, it is his responsibility to ensure that it is successful. The entire government machinery is working on this one issue and still cannot do it."

The BJP leader also said, "We (BJP) are not in favour of ending it (prohibition)."

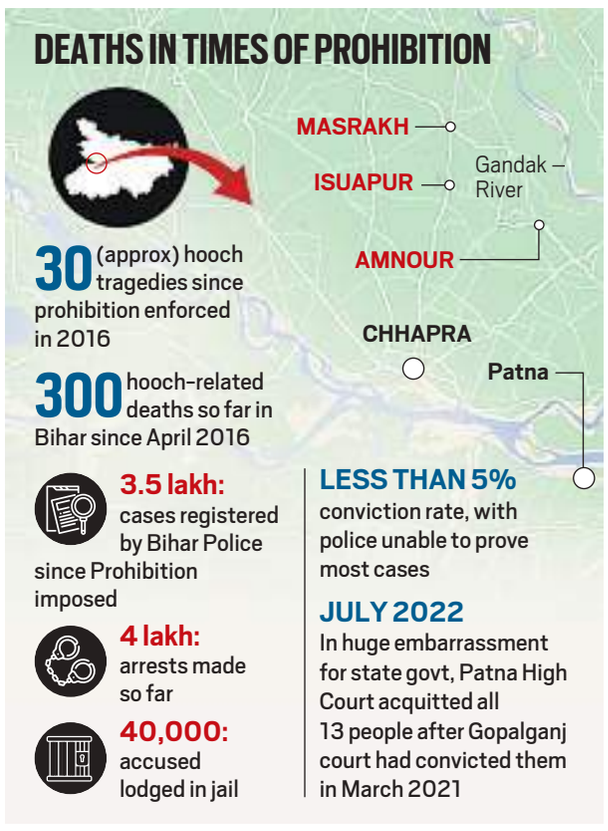

At Bahrauli, Phulmati Devi lost her two sons to the tragedy — Kamlesh Sah (40) and Suraj Sah (25). The "younger boy", she said, worked at a factory in Gujarat's Surat and had stayed back after coming home for Chhath festival in October.

Amravati Devi's husband, Chandeshwar Sah (60), who was "declared dead on arrival at a local hospital on Wednesday", was cremated without a postmortem due to "pressure from some neighbours", she said.

Asked about the supply channel, village head Ajit Singh said: "Countrymade liquor is not brewed locally. They are usually brought from UP in tankers, and liquor pouches are dropped at different locations." Local suppliers, he said, make the last-mile delivery.

SANTOSH SINGH
SARAN/PATNA, DECEMBER 15

A DAY after leaving Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar enraged in the Assembly by demanding his apology to families of Saran hooch victims — and in return being told, "chup raho (keep quiet)" — Leader of Opposition Vijay Kumar on Thursday led a 30-member BJP delegation to Masrakh, where most of the hooch-related deaths were reported from. Sinha has been leading BJP's offensive against the "failure of prohibition" in and outside the Assembly.

On Thursday, the BJP kept up the heat on the government by disrupting House proceeding with its demand for the CM's apology for not keeping decorum of Parliamentary behaviour with the Leader of Opposition. In turn, Nitish told reporters outside the Assembly, "Aren't there cases of hooch tragedies in BJP-ruled states? Didn't hooch deaths take place in Bihar before prohibition?"

Deputy CM Tejashwi Prasad Yadav asked: "Didn't hooch tragedies take place when BJP was part of the government with Nitish Kumar? Several hooch cases were reported in the last one year. Where were they (BJP) then?"

Tejashwi was referring to 20 or so hooch incidents reported over the last one year from East Champaran, West Champaran, Gopalganj, Nalanda, Saran, and Nawada districts. In most cases, it was consumption of spurious country liquor that led to deaths.

Asked why BJP did not lead any such delegation to sites of hooch deaths in the past, BJP spokesperson and national general secretary its OBC Morcha, Nikhil Anand, said: "As an ally, we could not have attacked the government directly. But we were never comfortable with the manner prohibition was being implemented. Our state unit president, Sanjay Jaiswal, had often asked for its (prohibition policy's) revision, especially finding ways to check inter-state liquor smuggling."

WHO drew early link between kids' deaths in Gambia, Haryana firm's syrups: DCGI

ANONNA DUTT
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

TWO MONTHS after the World Health Organization (WHO) raised an alert on four India-manufactured syrups, the country's apex drug regulator has written to the intergovernmental body and stated that it made a "premature deduction...regarding the cause of death" of the children, and that all its further communications were a "reaffirmation of this deduction, without waiting for independent verification".

The WHO medical alert in October linked four syrups manufactured by Haryana-based Maiden Pharmaceuticals — Promethazine Oral Solution, Kofexmalin Baby Cough Syrup, Makoff Baby Cough Syrup and Magrip N Cold Syrup — with the death of 70 children due to Acute Kidney Injury in the Gambia.

In the letter (dated December 13) to Dr Rogerio Gaspar, Director (Regulation and Prequalification), WHO, Drug Controller General of India (DCGI), Dr V G Somani, pointed out that the WHO backtracked from its initial commitment of providing granular details by stating that the responsibility of establishing the causal link between the deaths and syrups lies with the country in question — the Gambia. The letter noted that the statement issued by WHO adversely impacted the image of India's pharmaceutical products and caused irreparable damage to the supply chain "over an assumption that has not been substantiated by the WHO or its partners on ground".

Citing media reports, the letter also stated that the Gambia has said that no direct causal relationship has been established between the deaths and the cough syrups, with some of the children not even having consumed the syrups in question.

With no information shared by WHO or the Gambia, the drug controller wrote, "we believe WHO would now allow the technical committee...to arrive at the conclusion based on the facts and evidence available". After the alert was raised, the Union Health Ministry had set up a four-member expert panel to review the data sent by WHO, which has since sought details of initial signs and symptoms, treatment offered, investigations done, and clinical presentation after consumption of syrups.

This technical committee, the letter mentioned, has met several times, sought information from the WHO at least thrice, but never received any data.

In what appears to be a clean chit for the manufacturer, Somani in the letter stated that an independent investigation by DCGI found that the control samples — samples from the same batch exported to the Gambia maintained by the company for quality control purposes — did not contain diethylene glycol or ethylene glycol.

The drug regulator also tested the propylene glycol and glycerine — both used as solvents in manufacturing of syrups — available at the manufacturing facility at the time of inspection and found that they did not contain di-ethylene glycol or ethylene glycol over the permissible limit, the letter stated. The propylene glycol had been sourced from a South Korean company and the glycerine from Adani Wilmar via a Delhi-based firm. The solvents were thought to be the most likely source of diethylene glycol or ethylene glycol contamination, which is known to cause acute kidney injury.

ADITI KHANNA
LONDON, DECEMBER 15

Modi remains behind bars at Wandsworth Prison in London

NIRAV MODI, the fugitive diamond merchant wanted in India to stand trial on fraud and money laundering charges, on Thursday suffered another setback in his legal battle against his extradition as the High Court here denied him permission to appeal against the move in the UK Supreme Court.

In a judgment order pronounced at the Royal Courts of Justice in London, Lord Justice Jeremy Stuart-Smith and Justice Robert Jay ruled that "the Appellant's (Nirav Modi) application for permission to appeal to the Supreme Court is refused".

In a ruling delivered speedily within just over a week of the UK's Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) submitting its response to the 51-year-old diamantaire's permission to appeal application on behalf of the Indian government, the judges also ruled that the "certification of a point of law be refused" that would have allowed his plea to progress to the higher court.

An appeal on the grounds of a point of law of general public importance is a high threshold that is not met very often and this refusal significantly limits Modi's remaining legal options in the UK against extradition to India.

The latest HC order also directs Modi to pay the legal costs related to the latest application, assessed in the sum of GBP 150,247.00. Last month, Modi lost an appeal on mental health grounds when the same two-judge HC bench ruled that his risk of suicide is not such that it would be either unjust or oppressive to extradite him to India to face charges in the estimated $2 billion PNB loan scam Modi remains in jail at Wandsworth Prison, London, since arrest on an extradition warrant in March 2019. PTI

Apex court grants bail to convict in 2002 Godhra train burning case

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

THE SUPREME Court on Thursday granted bail to one of the convicts in the Godhra train burning case in which 59 persons were charred to death inside a coach of Sabarmati Express on February 27, 2002.

A bench of Chief Justice of India D Y Chandrachud and Justice P S Narasimha noted that the convict, Faruq, who was sentenced to life imprisonment, had spent 17 years in jail and his role was that of a "stone pelter".

"The applicant has sought bail on the ground that he has been in custody since 2004 and has undergone imprisonment for about 17 years. In view of the facts and circumstances of the case and the role attributed to the applicant, we direct the applicant to be granted bail subject to such terms and conditions as may be imposed by the sessions court," the bench said in its order.

Opposing the convict's plea for bail, Solicitor General Tushar Mehta, appearing for Gujarat, said his act was not merely of "stone pelting" and that it prevented people from escaping the burning coach.

Terming it "one of the most heinous offences", the SG said, "He instigated the others, pelted stones and injured the passengers. Under normal circumstances, pelting of stones may be a less grave of an offence, but this is different."

In March this year, the court had granted six-month interim bail to another convict in the case, taking note of his plea that his wife was suffering from terminal cancer and there was no one to look after his daughters who were mentally challenged. Later, the court extended the period of interim bail until March 31, 2023 on the same terms and conditions.

To curb hooch sale, Punjab's substitute: Light country liquor

Chandigarh, New Delhi: The Punjab government will soon introduce a country liquor having 40 per cent alcohol content as a "healthy substitute" for illegally brewed homemade liquor as a measure to prevent sale of hooch, especially in rural areas, the Supreme Court was informed Thursday. The move to manufacture and sell the light country liquor is part of the Punjab government's new excise policy.

"This liquor is going to be a healthy substitute for illegally brewed homemade liquor. The field officers have been entrusted with the task of giving their requirement of 40 degree country liquor based on ground inputs so that the same can be made available in illicit liquor prone areas in near future," read an affidavit filed by the state excise and taxation department in the top court.

The SC bench of Justices M R Shah and C T Ravikumar was hearing a plea arising out of a September 2020 order of the Punjab and Haryana HC that had disposed of a petition seeking transfer of some FIRs registered in Punjab in relation to distillation of spurious liquor, its sale and interstate smuggling to the CBI. ENS

Students thrash headmaster for 'harassment'

Bengaluru: A government school headmaster in Karnataka's Mandya district was thrashed by students after he allegedly misbehaved with a minor girl at a hostel. ARTISTS SAY LAST-MINUTE POSTPONEMENT HAS LEFT THEM IN THE LURCH

Staff crunch, venue delay: Kochi Biennale scrambles to get its act together

VANDANA KALRA
KOCHI, DECEMBER 15

AFTER THE Kochi-Muziris Biennale was postponed hours before it was to open for the public on December 12, it was not just visitors who were distressed but also participating artists.

While organisers cited "organisational challenges, compounded by external factors" for the last-minute postponement -- from a delay in gaining access to the main venue to shortage of staff -- several participants feel the announcement could have been made earlier.

"I was really excited to show my work and interact with viewers but it won't be possible to be here so close to Christmas, as it now opens on December 23," said French artist Massinissa Selmani. Like some other participants, he did not attend the inaugural ceremony attended by Kerala Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan on December 12. "Why should we go? The biennale hasn't opened," Selmani asks.

Scheduled to take place in 2020, this edition of the biennale was postponed twice due to the pandemic. This time, the satellite exhibitions, invitation projects and Students' Biennale have opened, but the main biennale venues -- Aspinwall House, Pepper House and Anand Warehouse -- will open together later.

"What has happened is terrible and is an organisational responsibility, it was not the fault of the curator," says Bose Krishnamachari, president of Kochi Biennale Foundation. He adds that till it started raining over the weekend, the organisers believed that most of the works would be up by December 12.

"We have been wanting to start work for months but there was a huge delay in getting the main venue, Aspinwall House. The Kerala government has been negotiating to acquire it from DLF, which owns a part of it, and those talks were going on. We finally got the venue on November 4, but gained only partial access initially... a lot of repair work could not be done or rooms prepared, and the works could not be installed. When it rained and we realised that there were leaks, we had to push it back by 10 days as we felt that was a realistic date to open as fully as possible," says Krishnamachari.

The 10th anniversary of Kochi-Muziris Biennale was inaugurated by Pinarayi Vijayan, others. Instagram/@kochibiennale

Delhi-based Asim Waqif, whose installation "Improvise" is one of the outdoor projects at Aspinwall House, describes working for this biennale as one of his most "frustrating" experiences. "I could anticipate three-four months back that there were going to be serious problems," he says.

Waqif recalls how he had approached the biennale team for assistance for ground research for his installation that uses bamboo, coir and pandanus leaves, and was informed there was a staff shortage. "Everything has been delayed, from my on-site visit earlier this year, to the time when bamboo arrived in Fort Kochi for me to start work. I am yet to sign a contract with the biennale and haven't received my artist fee," he says.

According to Krishnamachari, organisational changes were also made in recent months, and new trustees appointed closer to the opening date. Several problems of the biennale are also tied to its financial troubles.

"The funds during this edition are better than other years. We have government funding, private patrons and sponsors but the total funds garnered aren't sufficient and we hope tickets sales and a charity auction may help further. Also, the funds need to come on time... The biennale can't accept foreign funding either, we don't have FCRA (clearance)," he says.

Retail deposit rates up but should you park funds in bank FDs?

GEORGE MATHEW & SANDEEP SINGH

SAVERS, PENSIONERS and depositors have a reason to smile, as banks have started hiking retail deposit rates by up to 65 basis points following the Reserve Bank of India's move to increase the repo rate by 35 basis points last week.

Real interest rates — rates adjusted for inflation — have turned positive for many deposit tenors after nearly three years. However, post-tax returns on FDs are still in the negative.

Quantum of hike

SBI has raised interest rate on retail term deposits between one year to less than two years to 6.75% from 6.1%. On deposits maturing between two years to less than three years, the bank has increased the interest rates to 6.75% as against 6.25%. Kotak Mahindra Bank has hiked interest rates to 7% for different tenors between 390 days and 23 months since December 13. HDFC Bank has hiked the interest rate on deposits of one year to less than 15 months to 6.5% from 6.1 % earlier.

Competition heats up

With credit offtake rising by 17.2%, banks are in an intense race to mobilise deposits to support the credit growth. "Deposit rate war is clearly brewing up… we have been saying that the gap between deposit growth and loan growth is very high and it's just a matter of time before deposit rates start inching up rapidly," Macquarie Research said in a recent report.

Will rates go up further?

Deposits rates are expected to go up due to rising policy rates, competition between banks for sourcing deposits, elevated credit offtake, widening credit deposit gap, lower liquidity in the market, and inflation, according to Care Ratings.

In the last seven months, the RBI has hiked the repo rate by a cumulative 225 basis points. With retail inflation declining to 5.88% in November, the RBI is likely to reduce the Repo rate hike to 25 bps or even pause at the current level of 6.25% in the next policy review.

Deposit market size

Deposits stood at Rs 172.9 lakh crore for the fortnight ending November 18, 2022, registering a growth of 9.6% year-on-year. Meanwhile, in absolute terms, bank deposits have increased by Rs 15.2 lakh crore over the last twelve months.

Looking at the FD option

In a situation of high inflation, even as interest rates have risen, fixed deposits (FDs) should not be the first choice for investors, especially for those in the highest marginal tax bracket.

While senior citizens and conservative investors derive comfort from bank FDs, this comfort has been shaken over the past few years after their money got stuck — first in PMC Bank and then in Yes Bank, as RBI imposed a moratorium/cap on withdrawals. Investors were also reminded that in case of default in FD maturity payments, their deposit insurance would cover only up to Rs 5 lakh.

Also, many feel that FDs do not serve the purpose they did 20-25 years ago, when rates were in double digits. As the aim of any investment is to grow assets' value, experts say high inflation and negative post-tax real interest rates make FDs unattractive for someone in the highest tax bracket.

For individuals falling in this tax bracket and looking to build a retirement corpus or save for children's higher education etc., FDs are not the best option. While CPI inflation may be around 6% for now, experts say lifestyle inflation and education inflation are much higher at around 7-8%. It is therefore important to go for financial instruments that generate above-inflation returns.

For an investor falling in the highest tax bracket, a 10-year investment of Rs 10 lakh in a bank FD offering 6.5% will generate a post-tax return of close to Rs 6.1 lakh. This means the investment of Rs 10 lakh would grow to Rs 16.1 lakh after 10 years. However, if inflation is 5% in the same period — which will be actually around 7% taking into account lifestyle and education inflation — the investor will lose money. This is because the investor's Rs 10 lakh needed to have grown to Rs 16.28 lakh in 10 years just to cover for the 5% inflation. Since the FD grows to only Rs 16.1 lakh, in real terms the investor would be poorer by close to Rs 20,000.

However, there is a category of investor that can continue to park their fund in FDs. Investors whose income is non-taxable or falls in the lowest tax bracket may consider FDs, which will give them around 6 per cent post-tax return. Even high net worth individuals can park a part of their assets in FDs as a diversification strategy.

EVERYDAY HEALTH

THORACIC AORTIC ANEURYSM: CONDITION THAT KILLED GRANT WAHL

AMERICAN FOOTBALL writer Grant Wahl, 49 and seemingly healthy, suddenly died last week with some suspecting foul play. However, his autopsy found that Wahl had an "ascending thoracic aortic aneurysm", The New York Times reported.

The condition

An aneurysm is a localised weakening of the wall of a blood vessel, causing the vessel to bulge in that area. It increases in size over time, and the wall of the blood vessel affected gets progressively weaker. The vessel may ultimately burst or separate, triggering a bleeding rush that can be potentially lethal.

An aortic aneurysm is a weakening and bulging in a portion of the aorta, the main artery that ships blood out from the heart; "thoracic" refers to the chest region.

Causes and symptoms

Among the possible causes of thoracic aortic aneurysm, a Johns Hopkins note lists (i) degenerative disease breaking down the aortic wall tissue; (ii) genetic disorders; (iii) family history; (iv) inflammation of the arteries; and (v) plaque build-up on the artery walls.

The NYT report said doctors are exploring whether Wahl had Marfan syndrome, a genetic disorder that increases the risk of this type of aneurysm. According to the CDC, the syndrome presents in around 1 in 5,000 individuals, and limits the body's ability to make the proteins needed to build connective tissue.

Symptoms of thoracic aortic aneurysms may depend on the location, size and speed of growth of the bulging; often, there are no symptoms at all.

Symptoms, if they appear, may include (i) pain in the jaw, neck, chest, or upper back; (ii) wheezing, coughing, or shortness of breath (due to pressure on the trachea); (iii) hoarseness (due to pressure on the vocal cords); and (iv) trouble swallowing due to pressure on the oesophagus.

Wahl's sudden death has shocked the footballing fraternity. Reuters

Since these symptoms are not unique to this condition, medical attention is often delayed. For instance, Wahl had complained of a "cold" in the days before he passed away.

Diagnosis and treatment

According to the Johns Hopkins note, a doctor looks at the patient's medical history and carries out a detailed physical examination, including a CT scan, an MRI, an echocardiogram, a chest X-ray, and an arteriogram (angiogram).

Treatment includes monitoring the size and rate of growth of the bulge, and managing risk factors such as quitting smoking, controlling blood sugar, losing weight, and eating healthy. Medicines may be prescribed for high cholesterol or high blood pressure.

Surgical intervention is needed when an aneurysm is large and causing symptoms. This may include thoracic aortic aneurysm open repair or endovascular aneurysm repair (EVAR). Surgeries can remove the aneurysm, or insert a stent to support the blood vessel against possible rupture. ENS

EXPLAINED DIPLOMACY, FOREIGN POLICY, STRATEGY

LAC: past tense, present uncertain

China views Tawang in Arunachal as an area of strategic importance for its control over Tibet and its Buddhist leadership. For India, the road is slippery and unpredictable

NIRUPAMA SUBRAMANIAN

"THE SITUATION is stable but unpredictable," Army chief General Manoj Pande said on November 12 about the Line of Actual Control with China, while speaking at a Delhi think tank. "We need to very carefully calibrate our action on the Line of Actual Control to be able to safeguard both our interests and our sensitivities, and yet be prepared to deal with all kinds of contingencies".

Such a contingency came up almost exactly a month later, in the early hours of December 9, when Chinese troops arrived at an Indian post on the LAC in the Yangtse area of Tawang in Arunachal Pradesh. Four days later, in a brief statement to Parliament, Defence Minister Rajnath Singh said their intention was to alter the status quo in the region.

The facts of the incident are still unclear. Broadly, Chinese soldiers crossed over into the Indian side at 3 am. The number of soldiers is said to have been in the hundreds, with 600 the highest estimate and 200 the lowest, indicating serious intent. There was a fierce clash, both sides using sticks, canes and clubs wrapped with barbed wire. On the Indian side, some 40 soldiers were injured.

Anticipating the unpredictable

A little over a third of the 3,488-km LAC — 1,346 km —falls in the Eastern sector. Ever since the stand-off in eastern Ladakh, trouble in some other sector of the contested border was anticipated, specially in Arunachal, where China claims virtually the entire state, and particularly Tawang, an important centre of Tibetan Buddhism.

Gen Pande's use of the word "unpredictable" to describe the situation at the LAC was accurate of the reality that anticipation is one thing, but knowing exactly where the PLA might precipitate a situation is another.

India and China have differing perceptions of the LAC at many places, and some 16 such points are listed in mutually agreed-upon documents. Unlike in Ladakh, where there had been no overlapping Chinese claims in three places where the incursions took place in 2020 — Gogra, Hot Springs and Galwan — the trouble in Tawang, the western-most district of Arunachal, erupted at an "agreed" disputed point.

In 2021, Gen Pande, then the GOC-in-C of the Eastern Command, told a press contingent, which was flown by the Army to Arunachal Pradesh for a media tour of the eastern sector, that while there had been little spillover of the Ladakh standoff in the eastern sector, a "marginal increase" had been noticed in patrolling by the PLA in some areas. He also said that the Chinese were building housing infrastructure close to the LAC on their side, and that had led to higher troop presence.

Counter measures

In the last two years, India has taken several steps to beef up its own infrastructure. The Border Road Organisation's Sela Pass tunnel project, which could be ready by January 2023, will provide crucial all-weather connectivity between Tezpur in Assam and Tawang. A 1,500-km Frontier Highway project, shadowing the LAC in Arunachal, is also coming up. It will run from Tawang in the west to Vijaynagar in east Arunachal along the state's frontier with China.

The visiting journalists were told that infrastructure expansion in Arunachal was taking place along five "verticals": habitat, aviation, road infrastructure, operational logistics and security infrastructure.

A significant intervention was an increase in surveillance, "both close to the LAC as well as depth areas" on the Chinese side, Pande disclosed. A number of "niche technologies" had been deployed for this, he said. Other than regular satellite imagery, he listed ground-based cameras with night vision ability, surveillance drones, long distance surveillance UAVs, and better communication systems. All the imagery and information from these sources is transmitted to a surveillance centre at Rupa in Arunachal Pradesh, which is monitored 24/7. The media team visited the centre.

Earlier this week, The Indian Express reported that due to the cloud cover during the December 9 incident, there were gaps in the satellite imagery. Radio Frequency (RF) signal geolocation equipment was being used to pin-point the location of the troop build-up and send signals from different antenna positions to satellites for a high resolution reconstruction of images.

It is not clear if the other surveillance measures said to be in place, including in the "depth" areas on the Chinese side of the LAC, picked up advance signs of the Chinese incursion. The 532-word statement by Rajnath gave no indication of this.

Tawang, McMahon Line and LAC

China claims Arunachal Pradesh as part of the Tibet Autonomous Region, and describes it as south Tibet. It views Tawang as an area of strategic importance for its control over Tibet and its Buddhist leadership. The Buddhist monastery in Tawang is India's biggest, and in 2017, the Dalai Lama spent over a month there, amid Beijing's angry remonstrations.

The dispute over Tawang and Arunachal goes back to the India-China dispute over the McMahon Line. For India, this is the settled boundary in the eastern sector — from the eastern trijunction in Bhutan to the Myannmar trijunction. But China rejected it as a "colonial" line imposed by the British Indian administration after an agreement with Tibet, never a sovereign entity in its view.

In 1959, Premier Zhou Enlai wrote to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, suggesting both sides withdraw 20 km from a so-called Line of Actual Control (which was when the term was first used) along which Chinese forces had captured some Indian outposts, marking its own territory as per the McMahon Line. Zhou wrote that the LAC in the east would be the "so-called McMahon Line", and in Ladakh, the line up to which each side exercised control.

In his book Choices, Inside the Making of India's Foreign Policy, former National Security Adviser Shivshankar Menon details how during his visit in 1960, Zhou suggested to Nehru that China might accept the McMahon Line if India accepted the Chinese control of Aksai Chin. India rejected the offer.

In the 1962 war, Tawang was where India suffered its worst defeat, the psychological scars of which the Indian Army still carries.

The Chinese ceasefire and withdrawal to 20 km behind its 1959 "LAC" was unilateral. While the LAC in the east is broadly aligned to McMahon Line, that is not so at all places, as became evident in the 1986 military standoff at Sumdorongchu, east of the trijunction with Bhutan, that took seven years to resolve.

According to Menon, Zhou's offer to recognise the McMahon Line in exchange for India accepting the Chinese claims in Ladakh was last reiterated by Deng Xiaoping in 1982 in a conversation with G Parthasarathi, PM Indira Gandhi's emissary. Since then, Beijing has demanded concessions in the east for reciprocal concession in the west. In 1985, China specified the concession it wanted was Tawang.

Such a concession is now extremely unlikely. Unlike Aksai Chin, of which Nehru famously said that "not a blade of grass grows there", Tawang is a thriving Buddhist pilgrimage centre. It is one of 33 assembly segments in the West Arunachal Pradesh parliamentary constituency, which has been represented in every Indian parliament since 1950.

For India, there is no easy way out of its border quagmire with China. General Pande said on November 12 that it was "through talks, through negotiations and dialogue that we hope to find resolution" but it is also clear that India needs to be prepared, in his words, for "all kinds of contingencies".

Bangladesh reaches out to IMF: What's wrong with its economy?

UDIT MISRA
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

LAST MONTH, Bangladesh reached out to the International Monetary Fund (IMF) seeking help. According to an IMF press release, Bangladesh will receive economic assistance worth $4.5 billion (around Rs 37,000 crore).

This is a significant reversal for an economy that overtook India's in terms of per capita income in 2020 on the back of robust economic growth for the better part of the last two decades, and especially since 2017.

Wanting to capitalise on the growing economic distress, the principal opposition party, the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP), has organised several protest rallies across the country. It hopes to corner the Awami League government and its leader Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, who has dominated Bangladeshi politics for well over a decade now.

What's wrong with Bangladesh's economy?

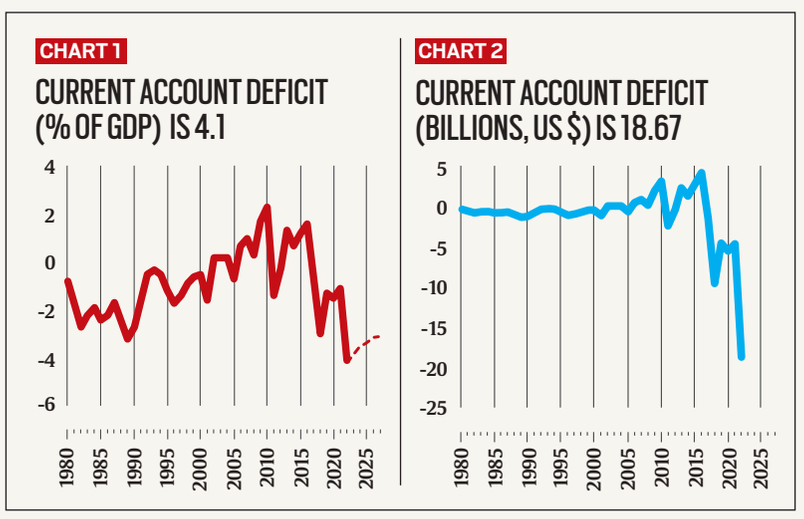

If one looks at the growth of Gross Domestic Product or GDP, Bangladesh continues to post very impressive numbers. For one, unlike many countries including India that saw their GDP contract in 2020 following the Covid-19 pandemic, the economy of Bangladesh actually grew during this period. Its GDP grew by 3.4% in 2020, by 6.9% in 2021, and it is expected to grow by 7.2% in 2022.

However, Bangladesh's problems lie elsewhere.

The IMF states that "Bangladesh's robust economic recovery from the pandemic has been interrupted by Russia's war in Ukraine, leading to a sharp widening of the current account deficit, rapid decline of foreign exchange reserves, rising inflation and slowing growth."

In other words, while it is true that Bangladesh has posted very impressive economic growth numbers, the Russian invasion of Ukraine has meant four things:

- Inflation spiked to uncomfortable levels as all kinds of commodities such as crude oil became costlier. The inflation rate in November was 8.85% as against 5.98% in November 2021. For the 12 months ending November, inflation grew at 7.48% — much higher than 5.48% in the 12 months ending November 2021.
- Bangladesh's current account balance has gone deep into a deficit — both in absolute terms as well as a percentage of the GDP (see charts; source IMF). The current account balance looks at the gap between the money coming into a country on account of earnings via the export of goods and services and the money going out of the country via the import of goods and services. Bangladesh has typically been hugely dependent on its export earnings, but as the western economies slow down and their consumers put off their demand for a later date, Bangladesh suffers.
- Bangladesh's currency, the Taka, weakened partly under the pressure of the surge in the US dollar and partly on account of the worsening current account deficit. A weaker Taka further aggravated the inflationary spiral because all imports become costlier still. In December 2021, it took 86 Taka to buy a US dollar. As of today, the exchange rate has worsened to 105 Taka — a loss of more than a fifth of the currency's value in less than a year.
- The weakness in the external front also resulted in Bangladesh's foreign exchange reserves getting depleted. Last December, the forex reserves were valued at $46,154 million. As of now, they are just $33,790 million — a fall of more than one-fourth of its total valuation.

How will IMF's assistance help?

"Bangladesh's request is part of the authorities' measures to cushion its economy from the economic disruptions caused by the ongoing war in Ukraine and to manage macroeconomic risks posed by climate change," states the IMF.

But that is not the only goal.

"Even as Bangladesh tackles these immediate challenges, addressing long-standing structural issues remains critical, including threats to macroeconomic stability from climate change. To successfully graduate from Least Developed Country status and achieve middle-income status by 2031, it is important to build on past successes and address structural issues to accelerate growth, attract private investment, enhance productivity, and build climate resilience," states IMF.

Overall, the IMF's programme hopes to achieve the following goals:

- Creating additional fiscal space through higher revenue mobilisation and rationalisation of expenditures. This will allow the government to increase growth-enhancing spending as well as mitigate the impact on the vulnerable through higher social spending and better-targeted social safety net programs.
- Containing inflation with increased exchange rate flexibility so that the country can buffer external shocks better.
- Strengthening the financial sector by enhancing governance and regulatory aspects.
- Boosting growth potential by creating a conducive environment to expand trade and foreign direct investment among other things.
- Strengthening institutions to create an enabling environment will help meet climate change objectives.

US Fed hikes rates, signals more will follow. Policymakers in India must be mindful of risks to macroeconomic stability

ON WEDNESDAY, IN its last meeting of the calendar year, the US Federal Reserve raised interest rates by 50 basis points. The federal funds rate now stands at 4.25 to 4.5 per cent. The projections accompanying the policy statement point towards a strong possibility of another 75 basis points of interest rate hikes over the course of the next year as the central bank continues its fight against inflation. This would take the federal funds rate to 5.1 per cent, up from the earlier expectations of 4.6 per cent. While the quantum of the rate hike in the December meeting was lower — the previous four consecutive rate hikes were of 75 basis points — the tone of the policy remained hawkish as the central bank sought to dismiss any doubt over the trajectory of monetary policy. "The historical record cautions strongly against prematurely loosening policy. We will stay the course, until the job is done," noted Fed chairman Jerome Powell.

Data released a day prior shows that inflation has in fact moderated, though it continues to remain well above the central bank's target of 2 per cent. In November, consumer prices rose at the slowest pace in the last 12 months. Core CPI, which excludes the volatile food and fuel components, rose 6 per cent in November, easing from 6.3 per cent in October. The sequential month-on-month momentum also suggests a softening of price pressures in the economy. As per the projections accompanying the policy statement, inflation (as measured by the price index for personal consumption expenditures) is expected to fall from 5.6 per cent in 2022 to 3.1 per cent in 2023. However, the projections on economic growth and unemployment underline the pain that the economy is likely to go through during this period. The economy is now expected to grow only at 0.5 per cent next year, down from the earlier assessment of 1.2 per cent, while the unemployment rate has now been pegged higher at 4.6 per cent in 2023 and is likely to remain around that level for some time. In his statement, Powell acknowledged the pain, noting that "reducing inflation is likely to require a sustained period of below-trend growth and some softening of labour market conditions."

The revised projections also suggest that the central bank is, as of now, unlikely to cut interest rates any time soon. Rates are only expected to start falling in 2024. In fact, in his comments after the statement, Powell is reported to have said that it is too soon to talk about cutting rates. India will not be unaffected by tighter global financial conditions and slower growth in advanced economies such as the US. In fact, recent data indicates that the sharp slowdown in the advanced economies is already beginning to impact India's export and industrial performance. Policymakers in India must thus be mindful of the risks to growth and macroeconomic stability as they attempt to steer the economy through this uncertain period.

KOTA, AGAIN

Student suicides point to growing mismatch between rising aspirations and shrinking opportunities

THERE IS A sobering familiarity to the news of the suicide of three students, in separate incidents, in Kota, Rajasthan. It is possible to imagine Ankush Anand, 16, Ujjwal Kumar, 18, and Pranav Verma, 17, arriving in the coaching institute hub, nursing dreams of a shining academic career. It is possible, too, to imagine the stress to which they finally succumbed. In the coaching centres of Kota, the 14-hour days, with tests even on Sundays, relentless pressure to ace a tough curriculum, shame and guilt of experiencing the very human need for a break, fierce competition, and the fear of failure -- not to mention the loneliness of being far away from home — have taken a toll on many young lives over the years.

But this is a larger problem that goes beyond Kota and the pressure cooker atmosphere created in coaching centres. The combination of a large population of young people with rising aspirations and an economy with shrinking opportunities has created a public health crisis that requires urgent attention. The National Crime Records Bureau's Accidental Deaths and Suicide in India report 2021, released in August this year, shows that the number of students' deaths by suicide rose by 4.5 per cent in 2021, with Maharashtra bearing the highest toll with 1,834 deaths, followed by Madhya Pradesh with 1,308, and Tamil Nadu with 1,246. According to the report, student suicides have been rising steadily for the last five years.

Various solutions have been proposed — some bordering on the ludicrous, like the Indian Institute of Science's reported move last year to replace ceiling fans in hostel rooms with those that are wall-mounted. Others have addressed only part of the problem, like the guidelines issued by the Board of Intermediate Education in Andhra Pradesh in 2017 to ease the pressure on students, including yoga and physical exercise classes and maintaining a healthy student-teacher ratio. It is painfully evident that the failure to address the larger issue of a punishing education system that is simply not designed to support young minds or prepare them for today's economic realities continues. The vision contained in the New Education Policy 2020, offering greater academic flexibility to reduce the pressure on students, will take time to be fully realised. The need of the hour is to learn from past failures to address the growing crisis and take urgent steps that involve all stakeholders — students, parents, teachers, institutes and policy makers.

MOROCCO!

The biggest story at the World Cup was about a nation smashing football's crusty stereotypes

MOROCCO IS THE only nation that can boast of a two-tier football league, both levels professional, financially supported by the Royal Moroccan Football Federation, for women. It was no surprise, then, that Sofiane Boufal celebrated goals dancing with his mother and Achraf Hakimi was hugged and kissed by his mum in iconic images of the 2022 Qatar World Cup. It brought authenticity and warmth to a sport jaded by a mix of global politics, financial funk, corporate coldness, racial bullying and social media hysteria. Morocco making the semifinals of the World Cup as the first Arab and African nation to do so is easily the most heartwarming story of this World Cup. An unfraid team packing off Belgium, Portugal and Spain, and keeping France on edge, this was a bona fide breakthrough performance for the African nation.

Playing with pace and passion, Morocco's march into the semifinals played out with a professionalism that matched the sophisticated systems of Europe. The country's top football facility boasts of eight state-of-the-art fields, and all the sports science toys made available to their national teams. In Walid Regragui they had a coach who was second to none in his tactical convictions nor lacking in confidence to take on the big football powers. French-born, he comfortably straddled the two identities and helped the rest of the squad, where just 12 of the 26 were born in Morocco, blend in and buy into a dream.

More than anything else, the Morocco story was about a nation smashing football's crusty stereotypes of masculinity, social orthodoxy and third-world bashfulness that seemed to hold back Asian and African countries at World Cups. Shakira's 'Its time for Africa' might've come a dozen years too early, but Morocco ensured Africa would forever now be viewed as unstoppable. That all five African teams had home coaches made this feat even more organic. They shattered glass ceilings, and even when they lost the semifinals, the shards of Morocco's dreams glowed with pride in how far they had come.

Speaking of China

While there is great effort to focus attention on China's challenge, there is also an attempt to disguise its gravity

PRATAP BHANU MEHTA

THE RECENT CLASHES between India and China on the Tawang border are a reminder of the continuing strategic challenge of dealing with China. In geo-political terms this is the biggest challenge India faces, and it is now acquiring unprecedented dimensions. The risks of military confrontation have clearly escalated. Practically the entire border with China is now open to moves and counter moves from both sides. Diplomatic relations with China are at their lowest ebb. The fact that there is no strategic dialogue between India and China at the highest levels of leadership ought to be a matter of concern under any circumstances. It has long been clear that the impasse at the border cannot be managed purely by tactical-level talks. The modus vivendi that India and China had created from the mid-Eighties to the beginning of this century is clearly not surviving growth in both countries and their changing strategic orientations.

Third, there is, at least from an Indian point of view, a sense of the fundamental opacity of Chinese intentions and thinking on India. It is easy to list out the frameworks that China might use to frame its relations with India. As Ambassador Vijay Gokhale, in his paper, "A Historical Evaluation of China's India Policy: Lessons for India-China Relations", has brilliantly reminded us, China has always viewed the relationship with India in the context of its global strategy. Indeed, one palpable incommensurability in the diplomatic management of this relationship that is now apparent is this: India uses a bilateral frame, whereas for China it is India's relationship with other countries that is the test of where India stands. In particular, India's alignment with the United States has always been central to the Chinese framing of this relationship.

There is a lot of speculation that India's increasing engagement and military exercises with the US are a proximate cause of concern. But here is the puzzle. If the concern is to keep India out of US ambit, then surely China's position on India is the surest way of achieving that goal. After all, even Nehru was, according to S Gopal, forced by the Chinese actions in late 1962 to say that "there was no non-alignment vis-a-vis China." In a way, the needle India is trying to thread, that it has an independent foreign policy (which it does), but it is one that does not preclude taking whatever steps necessary for its security, seems to cut no diplomatic ice with the Chinese. In short, if China's view of India in relation to the US is over determined, the possibility of any manoeuvring on the strategic level becomes zero.

> It is important to ensure that India's domestic politics does not diminish our policy options. In framing these options, this truth must be acknowledged: Both China and Pakistan have not been wrong in thinking that India's domestic politics makes the possibility of India offering anything other than consolidation of the status quo very slim. It is clear that we need a new equilibrium with China. India can argue, justifiably, that the onus is not on India to make concessions. But if we reflect on our 75-year history, we also have to understand that we have seldom been in no position to offer any deals that move beyond the status quo.

It is also the case that India's growing size and power will eventually collide with the status quo in the relationship with China. It has happened, in a literal sense, on the border, with infrastructure development. But there are three other parallels with the Sixties that come to mind. The Galwan clash predates the war in Ukraine. But in the Sixties the sense that the West was distracted with Russia was seen as providing cover for China. India's bid to position itself as a kind of leader of the developing world, its old Vishwaguru ambitions that Nehru pursued more assiduously than this regime can even imagine, was always a threat to China's global positioning. It is hard to imagine the Chinese regime, in its current context, comfortable with an India triumph on the global diplomatic stage in the context of G-20. Its strategy is to keep the world on edge. But finally, regime type matters. Democracies can often engage in their own imperial overreach. But it is also the case that as power gets more personalised in China, nationalism is a greater source of legitimacy, and paranoia about the outside world's intentions gathers steam, the temptation to keep the world off kilter and guessing grows.

At the moment, China is, in some senses, like a diplomatic stonewall. Dealing with China will require far-reaching political, military and economic changes, and a move away from the current incremental status quo. If we are in the long haul with no prospect for reciprocity from China, then our trade and development choices have to reflect reality. The ground will have to be prepared. On the other hand, if we are engaging diplomatically at some point, there will also have to be thinking beyond the current status quo. India is also moving diplomatically in its relations with other countries. But we need a clearer assessment of how many of our new initiatives are about political symbolism rather than actually securing the foundations of our power and security.

It is important to ensure that India's domestic politics does not diminish our policy options. In framing these options, this truth must be acknowledged: Both China and Pakistan have not been wrong in thinking that India's domestic politics makes the possibility of India offering anything other than consolidation of the status quo very slim. It is clear that we need a new equilibrium with China. India can argue, justifiably, that the onus is not on India to make concessions. But if we reflect on our 75-year history, we also have to understand that we have seldom been in no position to offer any deals that move beyond the status quo. Defending ourselves so that we negotiate from a position of strength is vital. But in a fluid context, not building a national consensus on what deals we could live with if the opportunity arises, will disable India from taking the diplomatic initiative.

But this will require a different style of domestic politics that is oriented to building a consensus based on truth. While there is a great effort to focus everyone's attention on the China challenge, there is also a curious attempt to disguise the gravity. For one thing, the government has itself not been very forthcoming on the degree to which the Chinese might have altered the status quo on the border, and what our tactical accommodations have entailed. One can sympathise with the temptation to think that making these matters subject to open debate in Parliament might not only politicise them, but also cut down the room for diplomatic manoeuvre. But in this case, there is a suspicion that the government is more concerned about admitting any possible loss of territory or patrolling rights, because it might make it look politically weak. The government should proceed on the assumption that the greater forthrightness it shows, the more it will have the ability in the long run to carry the country with it.

BEING INDIAN, THE SRK WAY

RINKU GHOSH

HE DIDN'T QUITE grab headlines or make the noise that's called the 9 o'clock news. But Shah Rukh Khan, who did the umrah at Mecca and a darshan with tika at Vaishno Devi, made more than a statement. He reclaimed the syncretism that's our civilisational DNA and showed how it can be practised with ease from a conviction of belief. As for those who felt that he was genuflecting to political correctness and "right"-sizing his image, know this: A one-man empire, who pretty much defined the hunger of our post-liberalisation years, cannot be seen as being hungrier for a compromise in his mellowing years. If anything, he was asking people like himself to stand up and be counted in the normal flow of everydayness. SRK's spiritual sojourn is never meant to be screamed out as an exception, simply because he showed it is the only rule.

The larger question is why should anybody cede the right to define religion in an individual way, as it is meant to be, and let political power usurp the grammar of how it should be practised. It is for the same reason why Arvind Kejriwal's Hanuman bhakti or Rahul Gandhi's temple visits during the Bharat Jodo Yatra should not be seen as just peddling soft Hindutva or a me-too ritualism. They should be seen as attempts to prove that Hinduism is about cooperative ownership rather than a tool for proselytising an electorate, and that it should remain personal. This is what SRK exactly did.

> Be it an Aamir Khan and Kiran Rao doing puja at their office, a Sara Ali Khan and Janhvi Kapoor doing the all-girl's trek to Kedarnath or a Kareena Kapoor doing Ganesh puja with Saif Ali Khan in attendance, the images have at least positioned religion in its all-embracing benevolence rather than being just a reductionist trope. And since perceptions these days are built on a series of images, it is time the liberal intelligentsia stopped feeling apologetic about being Hindus too.

The politics of otherisation has finally cemented as an accumulation of prejudices, both latent and overt, simply because it now has a stamp of officialese, courtesy a regime which predicates religion as not only proof of identity but loyalty. You cannot blame the fundamentalist fringe like the Bajrang Dal or the Vishwa Hindu Parishad anymore. For their thinking is mainstream now, accepted by the educated elite in drawing rooms. Had the Hindu liberal intelligentsia not chosen to be co-opted by or accepted the prevalent discourse, Hinduism wouldn't have become Hindutva.

Mainstream acceptance is the most dreaded monster, for it means obeying handed-down guidelines and abdicating your responsibility towards nation-building. Swami Vivekananda, who kept Hinduism relevant as a world religion, is sadly only quoted for superficial purposes while his vision of plurality gets trampled.

That's why what we call the soft power of Bollywood is actually muscular. Be it an Aamir Khan and Kiran Rao doing puja at their office, a Sara Ali Khan and Janhvi Kapoor doing the all-girl's trek to Kedarnath or a Kareena Kapoor doing Ganesh puja with Saif Ali Khan in attendance, the images have at least positioned religion in its all-embracing benevolence rather than being just a reductionist trope. And since perceptions these days are built on a series of images, it is time the liberal intelligentsia stopped feeling apologetic about being Hindus too. This is precisely why Kejriwal's reply to a question on why he visited temples and talked about Hindu gods, becomes relevant: "Are gods to be hijacked for political agenda? Why should Hinduism be seen from one prism only? Take that away and then it wouldn't be their plank anymore."

SRK embodies this realism and inclusivity of Indic culture, both on and offscreen. Through his many characters, he has defined the idea of completeness, battling his fears and insecurities, flashing his honest brown eyes, a heart full of good intent, sometimes comedic in his bravado and without muscular pretensions. These made him more endearing as the man you want to fall in love with. And when he got that acceptance, he spoke India's truths. As the restrained and quiet emperor in Asoka (2000), the homebound NRI in Swades, or the inspirational hockey coach in Chak De (2007), nobody could have articulated the idea of nationalism better than the pop patriotism of propagandists.

Many on social media described SRK's recent shrine trips as truly secular acts. That would be labelling them and setting up an obvious polarity that the other side would play up. No. In his own way, SRK simply showed that the Ganga-Jamuni tehzeeb can still withstand a rough tide or two.

Violence continues in Baroda; toll 11

DECEMBER 16, 1982, FORTY YEARS AGO

BARODA VIOLENCE

THE LAW AND order situation continued to be critical in riot-hit Baroda for the third day as the toll in violence rose to 11. The police fired eight rounds to disperse mobs indulging in stone throwing and group clashes. At least two persons received injuries in the police firing, hospital sources said.

CONGRESS REBELS

THE ELECTION COMMISSION has taken a serious view of a telex message sent by the Director-General of Police, Karnataka, to all police stations in the state instructing the officers to ensure that only official Congress (I) candidates file their nominations for the assembly poll. According to reports emanating from Bangalore, the DGP flashed his instructions on the police teleprinter to superintendents of police in all districts following panic in the Congress (I) camp that a large number of rebels would jump into the fray. It was also feared that angry party workers would prevent some official candidates from filing their nominations.

YEMEN QUAKE TOLL

THE NORTH YEMEN earthquake toll might be well over 2,500 according to reports. The Gulf News Agency quoted a Yemen high official as saying in Sanaa that rescue squads were meanwhile recovering bodies from the rubble of houses, schools and mosques in scattered locations across North Yemen.

UP LEADER DIES

YADUVENDRA SINGH, DEPUTY Speaker of the Uttar Pradesh Vidhan Sabha, died in Lucknow at the age of 54. A state funeral was declared and government offices in Lucknow and Gorakhpur were closed as a mark of respect to his memory. He had suffered food poisoning in Patna and had not fully recovered. He was rushed to the Medical College hospital when his condition deteriorated.

WHAT THE OTHERS SAY

"For the sake of the thousands of people stuck in limbo, waiting for their claims to be processed, it must be hoped that Rishi Sunak's renewed focus on this issue [asylum] will bring some beneficial effects, however limited." — THE GUARDIAN

Lionel Messi 2.0

He has internalised Diego Maradona's criticism and unleashed his fiery best while displaying silken skills and extraordinary footballing IQ

SRIRAM VEERA

C R Sasikumar

IT'S NEVER BEEN a matter of ego with Lionel Messi. Yet, this World Cup, he has bared his fangs for the first time to the footballing world. He has argued with referees, picked fights with opposing coaches, stared down opponents with piercing glares, mouthed off to them and repeatedly stirred fans to get behind him. This is Messi 2.0, where he has internalised Diego Maradona and unleashed his fiery best.

For years, Argentina has lamented that Messi is too nice a guy — he doesn't take ownership in an ugly fight. Perhaps stirred that this is his last dance on the world stage — and egged on by the presence of several young fan-boys around him in the team who need a leader — Messi has moved around the field like a boss who is aware of and comfortable with his stature. After Maradona's death, he is now the best living Argentine footballer. The world has trembled so far.

And yet, Messi has not been consumed by ego as his spectacular goal-assists reveal. It would have been understandable had he tried to be the showman and try solo goals. But that wouldn't be Messi — even in his new version. The snarling face is for the opponents and also for his inexperienced teammates to know they have a saviour, who is willing to get his hands dirty. His goal assists still show the playmaker, the artist in him.

Consider this moment from the semi-final against Croatia. Messi is in the part of the field where opponents would be happy to have him: On the far right, with one of the best defenders in the World Cup, Josko Gvardiol, to his left, cutting off Messi's favourite left foot. He can't now dribble with his preferred side, and there is no space to his right with the sideline looming. It was a sight out of a fantasy movie: A 20-year-old powerful warrior in a mask (Gvardiol wears one after a face injury) towering to the left of a 35-year-old ageing hero. What does Messi do? He plunges headlong towards the goal. At this moment, Gvardiol must be fairly confident and doesn't even try to shoulder-barge him. After all, Messi was in his most uncomfortable space.

The veteran doesn't hare down. At this age, he knows that's not his strength. He throws off Gvardiol by stopping, stuttering, throwing him off-kilter. Gvardiol knows it of course, but can't be sure if the stutter is for Messi to do his spin-around and pivot or if he is trying to cut into the left by creating space. So Gvardiol stays beside him. Messi taps the ball straight, once with his left, the other time with his right, until they are now in the box. Then he does the spin-around, and Gvardiol's axis turns too. But it's a double turn by Messi and he is back waddling away towards the goal. The defender scrambles after him, resisting the urge to foul and concede a penalty, but perhaps hopeful in the knowledge that he is still beside Messi to his left. There is no space to cut in. But Messi isn't after solo-magic shows. He hurtles on and then uses his non-preferred right foot to caress a cross for the simplest of goals for his partner Julian Alvarez, a boy who when 12 years old said Messi was his hero and who can't believe he is living his dream of playing with the GOAT.

Messi turns towards his fans, holding his arms aloft but doesn't soak it in. Sensing his greatest fan is right behind him, he turns quickly to embrace his teammate.

Or rewind to that magic assist against the Netherlands a few days ago. Now, he is in his favourite space, shimmying to his left across the goal outside the box, threatening to cut in, but it's just a feint. He carries on, sucking the defenders towards him; even the experienced Dutch captain Virgil van Dijk, who is inside the box, is still moving to his right expecting Messi to carry on a touch further for the heroic curler into the net.

But unexpectedly, Messi sprinkles his magic. The left foot hooks the ball to send it plummeting at a scarcely- believable acute angle to Alvarez, who has glided unnoticed by the Dutch into the box to find the target. Messi, on his celebratory run towards the corner flag, senses his young teammate's shyness. He repeatedly gestures to Alvarez to come to him. Even then, Alvarez seems a tad shy as if debating if he can touch his hero or let him have his moment under the sun. And so, Messi jumps into his arms to cradle him.

Once, frustrated by what he saw as Messi's weakness, Maradona had blurted out: "He's a great player but he's not a leader. It's useless trying to make a leader out of a man who goes to the toilet 20 times before a game... We shouldn't deify Messi any longer. He's Messi when he plays for Barcelona. Messi is Messi when he wears that shirt, and he's another Messi with Argentina."

Messi has not been consumed by ego as his spectacular goal-assists reveal. It would have been understandable had he tried to be the showman and try solo goals. But that wouldn't be Messi — even in his new version. The snarling face is for the opponents and also for his inexperienced teammates to know they have a saviour, who is willing to get his hands dirty. His goal-assists still show the playmaker, the artist in him.

That has changed this World Cup.

"What are you looking at, fool? Go away," Messi snapped at Dutch striker Wout Weghorst after their game — a quote that's already part of football pop culture after being adorned on coffee mugs and T-shirts in Argentina with the original words in Spanish, "Qué mirás, bobo? Qué mirás, bobo?…Andá para allá".

People in Argentina are gleefully lapping up Messi 2.0. It's as if they sense that Messi is extending himself, going beyond his character, for them.

Perhaps, the headline in a Brazilian newspaper on the morning of Argentina's win over Croatia captured it best: Football is ready to hand over the World Cup to Messi. Not the other way around. The sport itself is ready to honour its greatest artist. Just as it did for Sachin Tendulkar in the 2011 world cup. Destiny is calling; Messi seems not only ready but is saying, "Que Miras, Que Miras, give the cup to me".

The key is exports

India's current account deficit shows that it's demanding more dollars than it has access to

RAJESWARI SENGUPTA

THERE SEEMS TO be considerable optimism about India's near-term growth prospects now that the major global energy and commodity shocks have subsided. But how will this growth be sustained? And even if these shocks have subsided, India still faces one big problem — its large current account deficit (CAD). How will this be managed? It turns out that the answer to both questions lies in one word — exports.

Let's start with the second problem. Over the past year, the post-pandemic normalisation has caused the current account deficit to swell to exceptional proportions. At home, normalisation has spurred a renewed demand for imported inputs. But abroad, it has had the opposite effect, leading to a decline in demand. Foreign households are no longer demanding so many goods now that the lockdowns that kept them in their houses and the fiscal stimuli that gave them the money to spend have both ended. So, India's imports have soared just at a time when its merchandise exports have started to fall.

Looking ahead, the situation seems set to worsen. Foreign demand will slow further as advanced countries slip into what now seem like inevitable recessions. In that case, India's CAD could widen even further, possibly to four per cent of GDP in 2022-23 — double the level that the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) traditionally regards as "safe". How should India respond?

One possibility would be to attract foreign capital inflows worth at least four per cent of GDP. But is this realistic? The world is currently facing unprecedented levels of uncertainty. After two years of the pandemic, we are witnessing a land war in Europe, the highest inflation in the developed world in the last four decades, the fastest pace of interest rate hikes in the history of the US Federal Reserve, an energy crisis in Europe, and a slowdown in China that continues to struggle with Covid-19.

In such an uncertain environment, foreign investors prefer to invest in safe assets such as US government bonds rather than emerging markets like India. This trend has become all the more acute now, since the persistent rate hikes by the Fed have made US financial assets even more attractive. As a result, India has witnessed large outflows of foreign capital in 2022-23.

If India cannot attract the required amount of capital inflows, the RBI's foreign exchange reserves could be deployed to pay for imports. But this strategy is neither appropriate nor sustainable. The country's reserves are meant to tide the country over short-term problems, such as commodity price spikes. The large CAD, however, is not a short-term problem: It is a long-term problem requiring a long-term solution. In particular, India's merchandise exports have been structurally weak, stagnating for the past decade, until the pandemic induced a short-lived boom.

This means that something fundamental needs to change. Ultimately, India's CAD reflects a mismatch between the demand and supply of foreign exchange; we are demanding more dollars than we have access to because we are importing more than we are exporting. To restore balance, first and foremost, the price needs to adjust, that is, the rupee needs to depreciate. When this happens, exporting becomes more profitable, inducing more and more firms to explore foreign markets. Meanwhile, foreign demand improves, because the rupee depreciation makes India's products more price-competitive. As a result, exports increase — and the CAD falls.

Exchange rate depreciation is helpful for another reason. It can help sustain growth. The recovery of the Indian economy from the pandemic was largely fuelled by exports. In the April-January period of 2021-22, India's merchandise exports grew at a staggering rate of 46 per cent compared to the same period in the previous year. But with exports now declining, this crucial source of growth has now become uncertain for India.

This is deeply worrisome since prospects for the other drivers of long-term growth seem cloudy. Private sector investment continues to be sluggish and is unlikely to pick up in an uncertain economic environment. Nor is there room for fiscal stimulus, since the high levels of government deficits and debt need to be reduced. And even though the Indian economy is regarded as consumption-driven, private consumption by itself cannot sustain a growth rate of 7 per cent, especially when all other sources of growth are underperforming.

Strengthening the export sector is, therefore, critical for sustaining growth. True, the task will be difficult, since the global economy slowing down. But it is still feasible, since India's share in global exports is very small and there is ample scope to expand this share.

Over and above rupee depreciation, this will require structural policies — indeed, a fundamental shift in India's economic strategy. Policy needs to become significantly more export-oriented and less protectionist. Over the last few years, average import tariffs have gone up. In a world where manufacturers are dependent on global supply chains, levying stiff import duties hampers exports. And this obstacle cannot be overcome by providing subsidies to a selected few producers.

In sum, the need of the hour is fourfold: Allow the rupee to depreciate, encourage foreign firms to produce in India by letting them access their supply chains, encourage domestic firms to step up to the competition, and create a level playing field for all players.

By adopting this strategy, India could potentially solve its two most important macroeconomic problems — reducing the large CAD and securing rapid, sustained growth. Will this change come about? Unfortunately, there are no such indications so far.

An accessible law

New Data Protection Bill protects privacy, simplifies matters for small players

RHEA RAO AND JANAY JAIN

INDIA'S QUEST FOR a comprehensive data privacy law began in 2010 with the constitution of the Justice Srikrishna Committee. The Committee's report led to a string of data privacy bills in 2018, 2019 and 2021, each of which presented itself as a slightly modified version of its predecessor. However, in their language and length, these bills scarcely differed. In August 2022, the government withdrew the bill and about three months later — on November 18th — released the fourth iteration of the data privacy legislation: The Digital Personal Data Protection Bill, 2022 (Bill).

A social media debate ensued and the proposed legislation was subjected to threadbare analyses. A few days later, after matters had cooled down somewhat, we conducted an independent study of the legislation. To begin with, the inclusion of the word "digital" in the Bill's title speaks to India's longstanding goal of being a digitally forward society.

Simply put, the Bill has two major stakeholders — the Data Principal and Data Fiduciary. Data Principal refers to the subject whose data is being processed and Data Fiduciary is an entity that processes this data. The use of the term, "fiduciary" whilst referring to a data processor is significant. This term originates from the Latin word fiducia, or trust. In different spheres of the law, when one party owes a "fiduciary" duty towards another — a trustee, beneficiary, guardian or ward — the relationship between the two is guided by trust, assurance and good faith. The drafters of the Bill, therefore, seem to be affirming that the Data Fiduciary is responsible for safeguarding the interests of Data Principals.

In line with this philosophy, the rest of the Bill describes the obligations of the Data Fiduciaries towards Data Principals, the rights and duties of the latter and the regulatory framework through which data will be processed. While the Bill lists the "duties" of the Data Principals, these have no bearing on the realisation of the rights provided by the Bill. It marks new ground in Indian legislative history by using "she/her" pronouns.

Two aspects of the Bill are noteworthy. First, in addition to the general obligations to prevent the misuse of the personal data of individuals, the Bill has outlined a category of Significant Data Fiduciaries – entities that are required to comply with additional measures to safeguard the personal data of individuals. This distinction is essential as only companies that process vast amounts of data or have a potential impact on the country's sovereignty and integrity need to take such stringent measures. Such measures reduce the compliance cost of companies that are at a nascent stage.

Second, onerous provisions on "data localisation" in the previous versions of the Bill, which mandated companies to store user data only within India, have been omitted. The reworked Bill permits the government to notify countries to which data transfers may be permitted. This is a major respite for several tech companies, who have long talked about the infeasibility of the data localisation provisions. A balance has now been struck between the legitimate concerns of businesses and the protection of personal data of individuals.

While the Bill is, by and large, comprehensive. Section 25 and Schedule I, that deal with penalties, require elaboration. Section 25 refers to the quantum of financial penalty that must be imposed on a person guilty of non-compliance in matters related to detail. The focus remains only on the nature and gravity of the violation. The proposed legislation does not consider the financial ranking of a company before imposing penalties.

The Bill must ensure that the penalties imposed are proportionate to the size and operations of a company – to be effective, fines must not drive companies into economic loss. A leaf can be taken from the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), amongst other similar regulations, which levies penalties in accordance with the total turnover of companies.

The Bill safeguards individual data, whilst also promoting cooperation between data fiduciaries and the government. While it draws upon the best practices of foreign jurisdictions, such as Europe and Australia, it has been drafted in a manner that is tailor-made to India's requirements. Even the exemptions granted to the Centre are extremely restrictive and in sync with past judicial precedents and Article 19(2) of the Constitution.

The Bill marks a significant shift in the manner of drafting legislation. Historically, comprehending a piece of legislation in India has usually been akin to the membership of an exclusive club — only legal practitioners, policy professionals and a handful of politicians are able to understand and interpret laws. This Bill marks a transition from legalese to legal simplification. It realises that it is in our best interests to ensure that all laws — especially legislation that have a significant impact on citizens — are made accessible to all individuals irrespective of their professional or educational standing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE FLIGHT PATH

THIS REFERS TO the editorial, 'Scenes from an airport' (IE, December 15). Long queues, flight delays, congestion, no staff support and security check systems going haywire led to total chaos at Terminal 3 of New Delhi's IGI airport. The problem is not limited to the Delhi airport. After most countries lifted Covid-19 caps on domestic and international air travel, traffic at airports has spiked. Many airports are facing problems because their expansion plans came to a halt during the pandemic. Another reason behind traffic congestion is "bunching" of flights during peak hours. More counters, expanding infrastructure and making new technology more efficient can ease the burden.

MESSI'S SWAN SONG

THIS REFERS TO the editorial, 'Fairytale ending' (IE, December 15). As expected, Messi has brought his magic to the World Cup, dazzling on the field when it was most needed. His assists are being talked about more than the goals themselves. With the Moroccans' unbelievable run over, the spotlight on the final day will be on Messi. The match should be one for the books, given that the famous footballer would want to end his swan song on a high.

EQUALITY & GROWTH

THIS REFERS TO the article, 'A silent revolution' (IE, December 15). The difference between words and action in India concerning women's position in society is well known. The policy response to the spike in women voters — providing amenities such as cooking fuel, water, sanitation — are empowering. Challenges outside the home like safety, social security and pay parity have not become relevant topics for voters yet. Women also need greater space in the political sphere.

UNITED FRONT

THIS REFERS TO the report, 'Even as border chill deepens, record surge in imports from China' (IE, December 15). The Opposition's criticism of the government over the Tawang clash is a result of the hypernationalism propagated by the latter. India's imports from China crossed $100 billion in recent months. We need Centre-Opposition cooperation to chalk out a nuanced foreign policy to resolve India's border differences with this wealthy and powerful neighbour.

FORESHADOWING SHUTDOWN

MUSK'S TWITTER COULD TUSSLE WITH EU RULES

Officials have warned that the more unfettered version of the social media company will have to comply with EU's Digital Services Act. A strict set of laws against toxic content, it doesn't fully take effect until 2024, EU officials are scrambling to recruit enough workers to hold Big Tech to account.

ISI spacewalk cancelled due to coolant leak

Moscow: A spacewalk by two Russian astronauts aboard the International Space Station was cancelled at the last minute after mission controllers noticed a spray of white particles leaking from an attached spacecraft. The astronauts, Sergey Prokopyev and Dmitriy Petelin, had already suited up and depressurised an airlock when their mission was called off on Wednesday night. They were preparing for a six-and-a-half hour spacewalk before flight controllers in Moscow and Houston observed the "significant leaking of an unknown substance" from the Soyuz MS-22 spacecraft, NASA said. The problem, NASA said later, was a coolant leak. NYT

CHRISTMAS TRUCE RULED OUT

Ukraine resorts to heaviest shelling in its Russia-held East

REUTERS
DONETSK, DECEMBER 15

UKRAINIAN FORCES staged their heaviest shelling attack in years in the country's Russian-controlled east on Thursday, Moscow-installed officials said, as both sides ruled out a Christmas truce in the nearly 10-month-old war.

Alexei Kulemzin, the Russian-backed mayor of Donetsk city, said 40 rockets were fired from BM-21 Grad multiple rocket launchers at civilians in the city centre in the early hours.

Meanwhile Russian forces kept up shelling and air strikes along the entire eastern front line, killing one person, while two were killed in the southern city of Kherson, Ukrainian officials said.

Moscow and Kyiv are not currently holding talks to end Europe's biggest conflict since World War Two, raging mainly in Ukraine's east and south with little movement on either side.

"The Kremlin... is seeking to turn the conflict into a prolonged armed confrontation," a senior Ukrainian officer, Brigadier General Oleksiy Gromov, told a briefing, also dismissing the possibility of Christmas truce.

On Wednesday, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov had said a Christmas ceasefire was "not on the agenda".

Kulemzin cast the Donetsk attack as a war crime and said it was the biggest on the city since 2014, when pro-Moscow separatists seized it from Kyiv's control. Preliminary estimates showed five people had been hurt, including a child, he said.

Ukraine did not immediately respond to his comments.

Ukraine's military General Staff said Moscow's focus remained on the eastern cities of Bakhmut and Avdiivka, and that Ukrainian forces had repelled Russian attacks. adding that Russian forces continued to strike Ukrainian troops and civil infrastructure in Donetsk and in Zaporizhzhia and Kherson.

"The Russians fired at different areas along the entire front line all night and in the morning," the Ukrainian governor of Donetsk region, Pavlo Kyrylenko, said on the Telegram messaging app.

One person was killed near Bakhmut, he said, adding: "It is dangerous to stay in the Donetsk region! Evacuate in time!"

The global supply trail that leads to Russia's killer drones

STEPHEN GREY, MAURICE TAMMAN AND MARIA ZHOLOBOVA
DECEMBER 15

THE HUNDREDS OF Russian drones hovering ominously over the Ukrainian battlefield owe their existence to an elastic, sanctions-evading supply chain that often runs through a shabby office above a Hong Kong marketplace, and sometimes through a yellow stucco home in suburban Florida.

The "Sea Eagle" Orlan 10 UAV is a deceptive, relatively low-tech and cheap killer that has directed many of the up to 20,000 artillery shells that Russia has fired daily on Ukrainian positions in 2022, killing up to 100 soldiers per day, according to Ukrainian commanders.

An investigation by Reuters and iStories, a Russian media outlet, in collaboration with the Royal United Services Institute, a defence think tank in London, has uncovered a logistical trail that spans the globe and ends at the Orlan's production line, the Special Technology Centre in St. Petersburg, Russia.

The Special Technology Centre, which once made a variety of surveillance gadgets for the Russian government and now focuses on drones for the military, was first targeted by U.S. sanctions after President Barack Obama said it had worked with Russian military intelligence to try to influence the 2016 U.S. presidential election.

The sanctions, which took effect in 2017, barred any American citizen or resident, or any U.S. company from supplying anything that might end up with the Special Technology Centre. In March of this year, the U.S. government tightened those restrictions by blocking all sales of any American products for any military end user, and effectively blocked all sales to Russia of high-technology items like microchips, communications and navigation equipment.

None of that has stopped the production of the Orlan drone. REUTERS

Consequences if US missiles go to Ukraine: Russia

JAMEY KEATEN
KYIV, DECEMBER 15

RUSSIA'S FOREIGN Ministry warned Thursday that if the United States confirms reports that it plans to deliver sophisticated air defense missiles to Ukraine, it would be "another provocative move by the U.S." that could prompt a response from Moscow.

Ministry spokesperson Maria Zakharova said in a weekly briefing that the U.S. had "effectively become a party" to the war in Ukraine, following reports that it will provide Kyiv with Patriot surface-to-air missiles, the most advanced the West has yet offered to help repel Russian aerial attacks.

Growing amounts of U.S. military assistance, including the transfer of such sophisticated weapons, "would mean even broader involvement of military personnel in the hostilities and could entail possible consequences," Zakharova added.

U.S. officials said Tuesday that Washington was poised to approve sending a Patriot missile battery to Ukraine, agreeing to request from their leaders for more robust weapons to shoot Russian missiles.

An official announcement is expected soon. AP

EU nations have another go at Russia sanctions amid Polish, Baltic concerns

REUTERS
BRUSSELS, DECEMBER 15

EUROPEAN UNION countries will make another push to agree on a ninth package of sanctions against Moscow on Thursday after Poland and Lithuania blocked a deal over concerns it might benefit Russian oligarchs in the fertilizer business.

The two countries rejected the package saying it would offer Russian oligarchs loopholes to evade EU sanctions, Lithuanian Foreign Minister Gabrielius Landsbergis told reporters in Vilnius.

Fresh sanctions on Moscow have been held up by disagreement over whether the EU should make it easier for Russian fertilizer exports to pass through European ports, even when the producers are owned by blacklisted oligarchs.

Some say EU restrictions pose a food security threat to developing countries, while others argue that relaxing them would allow Russian oligarchs who own fertilizer businesses to dodge EU sanctions against them.

As EU leaders gathered for the last summit of the year in Brussels, an EU diplomat said countries had moved closer to a deal and that a new sanctions draft was expected to be circulated on Thursday evening.

US to double the training of Ukrainian forces

Washington: THE PENTAGON is expanding the training that the U.S. military provides to Ukrainian troops, with plans to more than double the number of forces it instructs at a base in Germany, according to two U.S. officials.

The expanded training, which officials said President Biden had approved this week, would enable American instructors to train a Ukrainian battalion — about 600 to 800 troops — each month, beginning early next year, the officials said.

That is a major increase in the overall number of Ukrainians the United States trains outside the country — now averaging about 300 troops a month.

Since the war started, the United States has trained 3,100 Ukrainian soldiers, in smaller groups, on specific weapons like artillery systems, according to the Defense Department statistics. NYT

Emergency declared in Peru amid protests

REGINA GARCIA CANO
LIMA, DECEMBER 15

PERU'S NEW government declared a national emergency Thursday as it struggled to calm violent protests over President Pedro Castillo's ouster, suspending the rights of "personal security and freedom" across the Andean nation for 30 days.

Acts of vandalism, violence and highway blockades as thousands of Peruvians are in the streets "require a forceful and authoritative response from the government," Defense Minister Luis Otarola Peñaranda said.

The declaration suspends the rights of assembly and freedom of movement and empowers the police, supported by the military, to search people's homes without permission or judicial order. Otarola said it had not been determined whether a nightly curfew would be imposed.

Peru has been wracked by nearly a week of political crisis and unrest.

The defense minister said the declaration was agreed to by the council of ministers.

It didn't mention Peru's new president, Dina Boluarte, who was sworn in by Congress last week hours after lawmakers ousted Castillo.

Referring to demands for immediate elections, she suggested they could be held a year from now, four months before her prior proposal, which placated no one.

Boluarte floated the possibility of scheduling general elections for December 2023 to reporters just before a hearing to determine whether Castillo would remain jailed for 18 months while authorities build a rebellion case against him. AP

GERMAN TENNIS star Boris Becker, 55, has been freed from a British prison, the government said on Thursday, meaning he is now expected to be deported from the country.

In April, Becker, a six-times Grand Slam champion, was jailed for two years and six months by a London court for hiding hundreds of thousands of pounds of assets after he was declared bankrupt.

SAJJAD HUSSAIN
ISLAMABAD, DECEMBER 15

A PAKISTANI court on Thursday asked Imran Khan to appear next month after accepting a plea filed by the country's Election Commission, seeking criminal proceedings against the former premier for not revealing the proceeds of sale from the state gifts.

The Islamabad district and sessions court deemed the petition for criminal proceedings against the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf chairman in the Toshakhana (state depository) case as maintainable and summoned him on January 9.

The Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP) last month filed a case against Khan in the district court after disqualifying him on October 21 in Toshakhana case.

The plea asked the court to proceed against Khan under criminal law for allegedly misleading officials about the gifts he received from foreign dignitaries during his tenure as the prime minister. Khan has been saying thr case is a witch hunt to disqualify him. PTI

In Netflix series, Harry accuses William of yelling at him, his aides for leaking stories to the media

LONDON, DECEMBER 15

PRINCE HARRY and his wife Meghan piled fresh criticism on the British royals in new episodes of their documentary series released on Thursday, accusing his elder brother Prince William of screaming at him during a summit to discuss his future.

In the final three episodes of the Netflix series, Harry also said aides for William, now heir to the throne, had been complicit in negative stories appearing about the couple in the media and blamed the press for Meghan having a miscarriage.

"I would far rather get destroyed in the press than play along with this game, or this business of trading," Harry said. "To see my brother's office copy the very same thing that we promised the two of us would never ever do, that was heartbreaking."

As strikes expand, Britain faces a new 'winter of discontent'

MARK LANDLER
LONDON, DECEMBER 15

WITH A TRIPLE-whammy of frigid weather, an early snowfall and crippling strikes across multiple industries, Britain appears headed into what the London tabloids, perhaps inevitably, are labeling another winter of discontent.

Postal workers and railway employees have walked out, holding up Christmas packages and disrupting the travel plans of millions two weeks before the holiday. On Thursday, they will be joined by as many as 100,000 nurses in a one-day work stoppage that could slow treatment in hospitals and clinics across England.

Driving-test examiners at motor-vehicle departments are going on strike, as well as baggage handlers, bus drivers, road crews and energy-company employees. The newspapers have taken to publishing color-coded calendars to help readers keep track of which services will be interrupted on what date.

The proliferating labor unrest has drawn comparisons to the original winter of discontent, in 1978 and 1979, when public and private-sector strikes paralyzed the country. That cemented a sense that the Labour prime minister, James Callaghan, had lost control, and ultimately toppled his government.

Much has changed since then, of course, not least the power of trade unions in Britain, much diminished since the 1970s. But the political danger to the Conservative government of Prime Minister Rishi Sunak is still acute. Critics have seized on the chance to blame him for a country that seems broken.

"History is a really big warning sign for Sunak and company," said Matthew Goodwin, a professor of politics at the University of Kent. "It was the industrial chaos of the late '70s that paved the way for a decade of Thatcher. This is compounding a sense in the country that nobody is really in control."

UK PM Rishi Sunak faced biting criticism from opposition on handling of strike threats in Britan. NYT

Sunak said in an interview with The Daily Mail published early Thursday that he planned to introduce anti-strike legislation next year. "I would really hope that union leaders can see that it's not right to cause such misery and disruption to so many people, particularly at Christmas time," he told the outlet.

The prime minister was already grappling with a surfeit of other problems: double-digit inflation, rising interest rates and a recession. On Wednesday, he surpassed the number of days that his ill-fated predecessor, Liz Truss, survived in office — a period marked by less drama than Truss's tenure but scarcely fewer challenges.

The deepening labor unrest dominated Sunak's last appearance of the year at prime minister's questions in Parliament. He and his chief antagonist, the Labour Party leader Keir Starmer, recycled lines that could have been used by Callaghan and his rival, Margaret Thatcher. But this time, their roles were reversed.

"After 12 years of Tory failure, winter has arrived for our public services, and we've got a prime minister who has curled up in a ball and gone into hibernation,"

Sunak countered that the government had made good-faith wage offers to workers in several sectors, and accused the Labour Party of "protecting their paymasters" in the unions. The prime minister claimed, somewhat implausibly, that the strikes were "Labour's nightmare before Christmas."

But for now, the Conservatives are in power, and Labour is portraying the government's failure to settle the unrest as part of a broader failure to manage the economy — just as Thatcher accused. Callaghan more than 40 years ago. NYT

Airtel partners TechM for private network at M&M's Chakan plant

JATIN GROVER
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

BHARTI AIRTEL on Thursday stole a march over Adani Group in bagging an external contract in the private 5G network space.

The company did so by entering into an agreement with Tech Mahindra wherein the two would deploy the new technology solution at Mahindra and Mahindra's auto plant at Chakan in Maharashtra. This will make the Chakan plant the country's first 5G-enabled auto manufacturing unit.

Adani Group was the only non-telecom firm to have participated in the auctions in July to acquire 5G spectrum for building private networks. It has both the options – build the networks for its own firms as well as for other enterprises.

The partnership will make Chakan plant India's first 5G-enabled auto unit

The natural advantage which Adani Group had over telcos like Bharti was in bagging contracts for private networks of enterprises, as it would be one of the mainstay of its 5G business. Further, since telcos are opposed to direct allocation of spectrum to enterprises, it was felt that latter would opt for a non-telecom firm to build their private networks.

However, Bharti-Tech M partnership surprised observers by not only being the first to cement an alliance but by also laying the roadmap for a wholly new nature of partnerships which are possible between telcos and other enterprises to deploy private 5G networks in the days to come.

So far, the speculation was that enterprises would either lease spectrum from telcos and build such networks themselves or wait for the government to directly allocate spectrum to them.

According to sector analysts, the partnership is likely to put to rest the strong opposition voiced by telcos against direct allocation of 5G spectrum to enterprises for building private networks as there would be possibilities of collaboration in such cases also. While the two sides did not disclose the commercial aspects relating to this partnership, industry experts said that since Bharti Airtel will be providing the spectrum to build the private network, its share of the contract fee would be higher than Tech Mahindra's.

"This is just the beginning, and I am certain we will showcase many more innovative use cases that will help redefine manufacturing in India," Ajay Chitkara, director and CEO, Airtel Business, said.

"We are confident that this partnership will help unlock opportunities across industries to improve productivity, drive intelligent network-led enterprise digitalisation, and spur innovation," Manish Vyas, president, communications, media and entertainment business, and CEO, network services, Tech Mahindra, said. FE

US FED RAISED POLICY INTEREST RATE BY 50 BPS

Markets fall 1.4% as Fed signals more rate hikes

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU
MUMBAI, DECEMBER 15

DOMINO EFFECT

- The 30-share BSE Sensex tanked 878.88 points, or 1.4 per cent, to close at 61,799.03.
- The broader NSE Nifty shed 245.4 points, or 1.32 per cent, to end at 18,414.09.

THE DOMESTIC equity markets fell 1.4 per cent on Thursday tracking weak global cues after the US Federal Reserve signaled of more rate hikes in the future to tame inflation even as it slowed the pace of its rate increases.

The 30-share BSE Sensex tanked 878.88 points, or 1.4 per cent, to close at 61,799.03. The broader NSE Nifty shed 245.4 points, or 1.32 per cent, to end at 18,414.09.

In its policy announced on December 14, the US Federal Reserve raised the policy interest rate by 50 basis points to 4.5 per cent. This was a slower rate hike after four consecutive hikes of 75 basis points in previous meetings. The US inflation eased to 7.1 per cent in November compared to 7.7 per cent in the previous month.

"The Fed has startled the market by maintaining its hawkish tone, as investors were expecting a softer approach after the release of better-than-expected inflation numbers," said Vinod Nair, head of research, Geojit Financial.

Kotak Securities Ltd head of equity research (retail) Shrikant Chouhan said markets were disappointed after the Fed indicated that the rate hike regime would continue next year, which further accentuated the already fragile market sentiment prompting investors to trim their equity exposure. The US Fed effect led to a massive sell-off in the markets as banking, IT, metal and realty stocks received severe pounding at the hands of investors, he said.

The stock of Infosys closed 2.59 per cent down at Rs 1,539.4 apiece and that of Tata Consultancy Services ended at Rs 3,304.55 apiece, down 1.79 per cent, on BSE. Tech Mahindra's shares closed 3.98 per cent down at Rs 1,022.7 apiece.

Meanwhile, the Bank of England and the European Central Bank on Thursday raised policy rates by 50 basis points in their fight against inflation. Both the central banks have also indicated to increase rates further.

On Thursday, foreign institutional investors (FIIs) net sold Rs 710.74 crore of shares in the domestic capital market, the BSE's provisional data showed. So far in December, FIIs have pumped in Rs 9,017 crore into the domestic equities. Last month, the overseas investors net bought Rs 36,239 crore from the stock market.

Global investment bank Credit Suisse in a report said FPI flows can be constrained, given pressured risk-appetite in CY23 can impact equity flows in emerging markets (EM) Asia funds. DII inflows, on the other hand, are now more meaningful than FPI flows, rolling 12 months at a record high $ 40 billion as against $ 20 billion (around Rs 165,000 crore) of FPI outflows.

Tracking the equity market, the rupee also fell by 27 paise to close at 82.76 against the US dollar as against the previous close of 82.49.

"Rupee continues to remain one of the weakest currencies as demand for dollars remains strong in the onshore market and lack of exporters selling and carry trades, keep supply low. A hawkish Fed also helped USD," said Anindya Banerjee, vice president (currency derivatives & interest rate derivatives), Kotak Securities Ltd.

He expects a range of 82.25 and 83.00 on spot, in near term.

Meta takes down Indian firm's phishing network

SOUMYARENDRA BARIK
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

EXPLAINED
Surveillance-for-hire firms

SURVEILLANCE-FOR-hire industry targets people across the internet to collect intelligence, manipulate them into revealing information and compromise their devices and accounts.

META HAS taken down a network of fake accounts on Facebook and Instagram that were being operated by an Indian firm called CyberRoot Risk Advisory. This network, consisting of around 40 accounts, primarily engaged in social engineering and phishing, often intended to trick people into giving up their credentials to various online accounts across the Internet.

CyberRoot Risk Advisory is the second Indian firm that Meta has cracked down on for allegedly operating fake accounts used in suspected efforts to hack people's phones, computers and online accounts such as their social media or emails. The firm's hacking actions were focused on business executives, lawyers, doctors, activists, journalists and members of the clergy in countries like Kazakhstan, Djibouti, Saudi Arabia, South Africa and Iceland.

CyberRoot is part of the global surveillance-for-hire industry that targets people across the internet to collect intelligence, manipulate them into revealing information and compromise their devices and accounts.

These firms are part of a sprawling industry that provide intrusive software tools and surveillance services indiscriminately to any customer, and are typically used against opposition politicians, journalists, human rights activists, and rival businesses.

Meta said that since late last year, it has taken action against spyware vendors around the world, including in China, Russia, Israel, the United States and India, who targeted people in about 200 countries and territories.

While Meta did not provide specific information about the expanse of CyberRoot's activities, it said that the firm used fake accounts to create fictitious personas tailored to gain trust with the people they targeted around the world.

"To appear more credible, these personas impersonated journalists, business executives and media personalities. In some cases, CyberRoot also created accounts that were nearly identical to accounts connected to their targets like their friends and family members, with only slightly changed usernames, likely in an attempt to trick people into engaging," Meta said in a report Thursday.

The network operated by CyberRoot spoofed domains of major email providers, video conferencing and file sharing tools, including Gmail, Zoom, Facebook, Dropbox, Yahoo, OneDrive and targets' corporate email servers. These domains were used for stealing login credentials to the victims' online accounts on these services.

"Our investigation found CyberRoot target people around the world, working in a wide range of industries including cosmetic surgery and law firms in Australia, real-estate and investment companies in Russia, private equity firms and pharmaceutical companies in the US, environmental and anti-corruption activists in Angola, gambling entities in the UK, and mining companies in New Zealand," Meta said.

DIIs inflows to equity may sustain around $40 billion in 2023, says Credit Suisse

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU
MUMBAI, DECEMBER 15

DIIs now own a record 15% of the BSE-500 shares, just 3.3 percentage points below the share of FPIs

DOMESTIC INSTITUTIONAL investors (DIIs) inflows to the Indian equity markets are likely to sustain at around $ 40 billion (around Rs 330,000 crore) in calendar year 2023, global investment bank Credit Suisse has said.

Credit Suisse said foreign portfolio investment (FPI) flows can be constrained, given pressured risk-appetite in CY23 can impact equity flows in emerging markets (EM) Asia funds.

DII inflows, on the other hand, are now more meaningful than FPI flows, rolling 12 months at a record high $ 40 billion as against $20 billion (around Rs 165,000 crore) of FPI outflows, the firm said.

Of the major contributors to DII flows, Credit Suisse expects insurance ($12 billion a year), Employees' Provident Fund Organization (EPFO) ($ 7-8 billion) and Systematic Investment Plans (SIPs) ($ 18-20 billion a year) to sustain, even as non-SIP retail flows continue moderating due to higher rates and improvement in real estate. "This should keep valuation multiples supported," said Neelkanth Mishra, Co-Head of Equity Strategy, Asia-Pacific and India Head of Research at Credit Suisse. FPI investors net sold $ 32 billion of Indian equities from October 2021 to July 2022, and have net bought $ 15 billion since then.

"We found that despite heavy selling, India's weight remained unchanged, suggesting the outflows were mainly due to redemption pressure at global, EM or APAC equity funds, via which most FPIs invest in India," Mishra said at a media roundtable conference.

DIIs now own a record 15 per cent of the BSE-500 shares, just 3.3 per centage points below the share of FPIs, which has now declined to nine-year lows.

"Non-SIP retail flows are likely to moderate further, due to higher deposit rates and an improving real-estate providing alternative opportunities," Mishra said. Full report on www.indianexpress.com

Centre to set borrowing limit for states at 3.5% of GSDP in FY24

PRASANTA SAHU
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

COMMISSION RECOMMENDATION

- For states, the 15th Finance Commission had recommended a fiscal deficit limit of 4 per cent for FY22, 3.5 per cent in FY23 and 3 per cent during FY24-26.
- If a state is unable to fully utilise the sanctioned borrowing limit during the first four years, it could avail the untilised borrowing amount in subsequent years

THE CENTRE will set the borrowing limit for states in FY24 at 3.5 per cent of gross state domestic product (GSDP), including 50 basis points linked to power sector reforms. This is in sync with the fiscal path recommended by the 15th Finance Commission (FC).

While some states have demanded a higher ceiling for next year, officials said the Centre would rather stick to the fiscal consolidation path, as the Covid-induced higher borrowings under by states under increased limits in FY21 and FY22, raised their debt levels. Of course, all states did not exhaust the additional borrowing space even during the Covid period.

In the pre-budget meeting with union finance minister Nirmala Sitharaman on November 25, Bihar Finance Minister Vijay Kumar Choudhary said the borrowing limit for states should be at 4 per cent of GSDP for another year. The Centre has set the borrowing limit at 3.5 per cent of GSDP for FY23 with another 50 bps window if states carry out reforms in the power sector, taking the total space to 4 per cent. Tamil Nadu has also sought a higher borrowing limit for the next fiscal.

For states, the FC had recommended a fiscal deficit limit of 4 per cent for FY22, 3.5 per cent in FY23 and 3 per cent during FY24-26. If a state is unable to fully utilise the sanctioned borrowing limit during the first four years (FY22-FY25), it could avail the unutilised borrowing amount in subsequent years (within FY22-FY26). Extra annual borrowing worth 0.5 per cent of GSDP was recommended for states during the first four years (FY22-FY25) upon undertaking power sector reforms.

The reforms include a reduction in operational losses, revenue gap, payment of cash subsidy by adopting direct benefit transfer and tariff subsidy as a percentage of revenue.

The objective was to aid states to bridge the resource gap due to the adverse impact of coronavirus on their revenues as well as to improve the quality of expenditure.

Except in FY10, FY16 and FY17, states had maintained their combined gross fiscal deficit below the Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management (FRBM) ceiling of 3 per cent of GDP till FY20.

The overshooting of the deficit in FY10 was due to the response to the global financial crisis, whereas the implementation of Ujwal DISCOM Assurance Yojana (UDAY) was responsible for higher deficit in FY16 and FY17. FE

RANJI TROPHY

How Ishan bounced back from T20 World Cup snub

PRATYUSH RAJ
NEW DELHI, DECEMBER 15

PRANAV KUMAR Pandey never talks to his son Ishan Kishan when he does well, not even when he scored a double-century against Bangladesh, a few days ago. "Jab century maarta hai mai jyada kuch nahi bolta, puri duniya se shabaashi mil rahi hoti hai (When he scores runs, I don't say much to him because he receives the congratulatory message from everyone)," Pandey Sr tells The Indian Express from Patna.

"He called me after the match and I told him 'next match you will again start from zero. Don't let this double hundred get into your head," he says.

Pranav Pandey shares how his son was very disappointed after he was not picked for the T20 World Cup and that was the time he had that father-son moment.

"He was dejected, he was tense and I have never seen him like that ever. He is a fun-loving kid but when he was not picked he was sad. At home, he would not sleep, he would walk on the terrace at night.

"So one day, I sat him down and told him to stop feeling sorry for yourself. From now onwards, your job should be to make sure that they don't get an excuse to drop you. Let your bat do the talking, you are still very young, there is a 50 over World Cup next year, prepare for that and make all the opportunities count," shared Pramod Pandey.

From Bangladesh, Ishan took a flight to Kolkata and then another one to Ranchi and joined Jharkhand's Ranji Trophy squad. Five days after scoring his ODI double-century, the 24-year-old slammed his 6th first-class hundred against Kerala.

He walked in when Jharkhand were 114/4 and struck 132 off 195 and was involved in a 202-run partnership for the fifth wicket with Saurabh Tiwary (97). But Jalaj Saxena triggered the collapse dismissing Tiwary and Kishan off successive overs en route to his five-wicket haul as Jharkhand folded out for 340, conceding a lead of 135. Kerala extended the lead to 195 at Stumps, finishing on 60/1.

Training drill at team hotel

Ishan's childhood coach Uttam Majumdar shared an interesting incident on how he fixed the technical flaw in Ishan's batting as he was facing trouble with the short-pitch deliveries.

"It has been tough for him since he made his India debut. He has been in and out from the side. He is a compulsive puller and hooker but he was getting out to the short pitch deliveries," says Mazumdar.

In June earlier, this year, India was playing a five-match T20I series against South Africa at home. Prior to that series, Ishan was hit on the head by a bouncer from Sri Lankan pacer Lahiru Kumara and suffered a concussion. There were questions about his technique against the fast bowlers. India were in Delhi for the first match when Ishan called up Majumdar.

Ishan Kishan hit eight sixes and nine fours in his 132 against Kerala. PTI

"He was a bit worried that he might not get picked for the T20 World Cup because of his shortcomings against the short pitch bowling," says Majumdar, who had spotted the six-year-old Ishan at Patna's Moin-ul-Haq Stadium.

The team hotel became a net for Ishan, where Majumdar spent five hours just working on his head position and body balance.

"He practised shadow pulling for around four or five hours. The next day, he scored 76. He scored 206 runs in that series," says Mazumdar. "It was a mental thing. There was nothing wrong with his technique. He was hit on the helmet once and it got stuck in his mind. And it can happen to any batters," he adds.

Against Bangladesh, Ishan scored the fastest ODI double hundred, but against Kerala, he displayed the other side of his game.

"I was unhappy when he got out again at 210. Fifteen overs were left, he could have scored a triple century.

"Today's knock shows how far he has come as a cricketer. He is more mature now and hopefully from here onwards, he will go from strength to strength."

Kuldeep shows no rust on return

VENKATA KRISHNA B
DECEMBER 15

FROM THE time he walked into the side as a left-arm wrist-spinner, Kuldeep Yadav's career has been a start-stop. There were days when he played ahead of R Ashwin in Tests. There have been matches where he has continued to warm the bench while a replacement player played ahead of him. In a T20 format, where bowlers of his ilk are sought after, he has spent match after match sitting in the dugout.

From being a regular in white-ball formats, he has missed successive T20 World Cups – one because of injury and left out of the other.

In the BCCI annual contracts, he has been demoted from Grade A to C. With Ashwin, Ravindra Jadeja, Axar Patel, Washington Sundar all being all-rounders, even when India have gone in with three spinners, they have chosen to leave Kuldeep out. During India's home series against England, played on spin-friendly conditions, Kuldeep was dropped mid-way through the series. And this year, during the home series against Sri Lanka, he was dropped once again to accommodate Axar.

But at the end of the second day's play at Chattogram, Kuldeep's all-around efforts helped India take control of the first Test on Thursday. In his first Test in nearly two years, Kuldeep proved his value

Wrist-spinners tend to crave for their captains and team management to show more confidence than they would do for others. So when KL Rahul threw the ball to Kuldeep in the 24th over of the Bangladesh innings – even ahead of Axar, whose left-arm spin could have done a lot more damage thanks to the variable bounce and turn – it must have given a massive lift to Kuldeep's confidence.

Having made a crucial 40 and shared an 87-run partnership for the eighth wicket with Ashwin in the morning and afternoon session, Kuldeep couldn't have asked for more. He was beaming with confidence.

Kuldeep has been waiting for the moment. And he was up against Shakib Al Hasan and Mushfiqur Rahim – two good players against spin. After a single off the first ball to Rahim, his second delivery to Shakib left the Bangladesh captain in the middle of nowhere.

Having jumped down the track to unsettle the wrist-spinner, the southpaw had no answer to the one that had proper flight, dip and turn. As Shakib tried to work him towards mid-wicket, he ended up edging it to the first slip. That started a spell, where with each ball Kuldeep looked like picking a wicket.

His load-up and slow hand-speed (arm-rotation) have been an issue in the past. But not anymore.

Kuldeep Yadav made a crucial 40 and shared an 87-run partnership for the eighth wicket with Ravichandran Ashwin. He later returned to bag four wickets. PTI/BCCI

Kuldeep found the rhythm and Bangladesh found the going tough. On a pitch where finger spinners were doing the maximum damage, Kuldeep showed what he could offer with his variations. Relying mostly on his stock delivery – one that cuts into the right-hander, he used the googly and the straighter one to good effect and kept the batsmen guessing. Of course, these have always been in his armoury.

So where was it going wrong? "The rhythm," said Kapil Pandey, who has been coaching Kuldeep since childhood. "Rhythm for spinner is all about hand and body coordination. Run up, action and what length you are bowling," Pandey added. While Pandey helped Kuldeep find the rhythm, especially the hand speed, there was something else Kuldeep had to do.

According to Pandey, who converted Kuldeep from a fast bowler to spinner, they had modelled his action similar to that of Shane Warne.

"Warne never bowled that quick, there used to be spin and drift in his bowling. I told him to work on his loop and flight, and once you will get the rhythm back, the speed will also increase. He has worked on his hand rotation, it is a bit quick now," Pandey added.

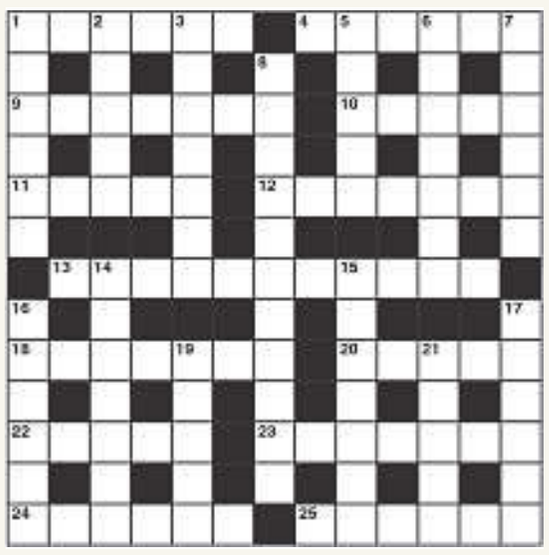

With rhythm in place, the other area Pandey and Kuldeep worked on is consistently landing the deliveries in good length areas. On Day 2, out of the 10 overs Kuldeep sent down there was not a single short delivery. The majority of it was around the good length area, which fetched him three wickets.

"We have practised spot bowling a lot. It was done so that he doesn't bowl short. You have to cut down on the freebies and that is important for a wrist spinner because it tends to release pressure. A wrist-spinner will always go for runs, sometimes they will bowl too full or sometimes half-trackers. It is part of their game and you got to manage them well by giving proper support," Pandey added.

With homework in place and back to full fitness, Kuldeep left Bangladesh reeling on Day 2 with his four wickets as the hosts ended the day at 133/8, still 271 runs short of India's first innings total of 404.

DAY TODAY

BY PETER VIDAL

ARIES (Mar 21 - Apr 20)
It is said that although you were born a fighter, you have the heart of a peacemaker. In other words, although you naturally take command, you long for co-operation. Today is a good time to find it. It all looks very complicated though, so there really aren't any easy answers.

TAURUS (Apr 21 - May 21)
It's an excellent moment to get on with work that has been delayed for too long. If you face a mountain of chores, don't despair. Start at the beginning and you'll be surprised at just how little there really is to do. It's all a matter of arranging everything in a logical order.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21)
Mercury's challenge to your sign should be teaching you the value of what great mystics call non-attachment. In this case it is your attitudes and opinions which should be abandoned, even if you've held them since time immemorial. A little more belief in the future would come in handy.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23)
Seldom have you needed so much guidance and support. You probably won't let on, but inside it feels as if much of what you have striven for is unravelling. It isn't, of course, but your feelings still cry out for reassurance. You should get it in the next few days.

LEO (July 24 - Aug 23)
There are increasingly strong signals that you're about to receive a series of welcome invitations. Rather than sitting next to the phone, waiting for it to ring, though, how about getting the ball rolling yourself? You never know - you might get the response you're hoping for.

VIRGO (Aug 24 - Sep 23)
A superficial reading of your chart reveals this as an extravagant moment. On deeper examination what is revealed is that you are now well on the way to a remarkable breakthrough which could guarantee your security for a very long time to come indeed.

LIBRA (Sep 24 - Oct 23)
One particularly encouraging aspect is setting you up for an emotional whirlwind. The main proviso is that you initiate new enterprises and adventures yourself, taking advantage of Jupiter's confidence-building influences. Also, keep a very close eye on cash opportunities.

SCORPIO (Oct 24 - Nov 23)
You will probably be completely unaware of what is being planned at home or within your family. At the very least you can afford to be the recipient of welcome generosity. What makes more sense to you, though, is the old adage that it is nobler to give than to receive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 24 - Dec 22)
You'll soon be able to strike out on your own, mainly because you have your own ideas. You'll no longer have to pay lip-service to employers, or anyone in authority for that matter. The fact is that you probably know more than they do, so it's up to them to make the compromises.

CAPRICORN (Dec 23 - Jan 20)
You should let it be known that any new financial arrangement must take your feelings into account. This makes for a complex situation in which debts of honour are as important as monetary ones. Plus, of course, there's the little question of a friend, who owes you a favour, to be considered.

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 - Feb 19)
You hold a full set of emotional trump cards at the moment. Whether you choose to play them today or save them until next week is another matter, but in general it's a case of the sooner the better. In fact, what's good for you might just be good for others, too.

PISCES (Feb 20 - Mar 20)
Secret feelings still seem to dominate your life, and deciding which way to jump may be putting quite a strain on your emotional reserves. Don't worry if you now have to sort out a major financial proposal - it should be fairly straightforward.

France is the 5th defending champion to reach the FIFA World Cup Final and 1st since Brazil in 1998

4 France have now reached the World Cup final four times in the last seven editions. They won the title in 1998 and 2018 and finished runners up in 2006.

4 Since 1966, no country has had more semifinal goals scored by defenders . Theo Hernández added to (Lilian Thuram ('98, 2 goals) & Samuel Umtiti (2018).

Deschamps is the 4th manager to lead a nation to back-to-back finals. Vittorio Pozzo with Italy ('34, '38), Carlos Bilardo (Arg, '86, '90), Franz Beckenbauer (W. Ger, '86, '90) are the others.

Griezmann (21) overtook Messi (18) in the number of chances created in this World Cup. Griezmann is the 1st Frenchman to create at least 20 chances since Youri Djorkaeff in 1998.

26 France have never lost a World Cup game they've led at half-time , including this semifinal. They've won 25 and drawn one.

France struck by cold virus, 3 players ill

Doha: A cold virus is running through the France squad ahead of the World Cup final against Argentina on Sunday, affecting at least three players in the squad. Coach Didier Deschamps said two players with symptoms, defender Dayot Upamecano and midfielder Adrien Rabiot, were isolated earlier this week and didn't play in France's 2-0 semifinal win over Morocco. Rabiot wasn't in the lineup in Wednesday's match at Al Bayt stadium. Upamecano was in the lineup as a substitute but didn't play. Deschamps said Upamecano was recovering from "three difficult days" since playing in the quarterfinals against England on Saturday. "However, we have four days until the next game, so he should be available for Sunday," the coach said, adding back-up winger Kingsley Coman had also felt feverish.

Argentina near full-strength for final

Doha: Argentina made a statement in their 3-0 World Cup semi-final win over Croatia and will head into Sunday's showpiece with two players back from suspension and Angel Di Maria fit and ready to face France. Defenders Gonzalo Montiel and Marcos Acuna missed the semi-final as they were suspended after accumulating two yellow cards. Left back Acuna was the biggest loss for Argentina in that game as he has been a critical part of coach Lionel Scaloni's set-up during the tournament, playing in all of their previous five games and starting four times. In their quarter-final against the Netherlands, he was arguably one of Argentina's best players, winning nine of his 13 duels, completing 100% of his dribbles and earning the penalty from which Lionel Messi scored their second goal.

Portugal coach Santos set to quit

Lisbon: Fernando Santos is set to leave his job as Portugal coach after his team lost to Morocco in the World Cup quarter-finals. The Portuguese suffered a shock 1-0 defeat by Morocco in Qatar on Saturday, after Santos started with the country's all-time record goalscorer Cristiano Ronaldo on the substitutes' bench. Santos, who has been widely criticised for his tactics, became Portugal coach in 2014 and led the country in 109 matches. They won the European Championship in 2016 and UEFA's inaugural Nations League in 2018-19. Portuguese media reported an agreement has been reached between the country's football federation and Santos and that an announcement would be made soon.

EXPRESS AT WORLD CUP

SANDIP G
DOHA, DECEMBER 15

THE MOMENT sank in slowly, but deeply. When the final whistle blew, ending one of the most stirring World Cup stories, the Moroccan players gazed pensively into the turf, their faces covered in their shirts, as though they wanted to flee the clutches of reality.

Some of them slumped to the turf, soaked in their sweat and tears, some wandered aimlessly, before they staggered to the edge of the ground and offered their prayers. They scrambled back to their feet and slowly raised their hands to acknowledge the resounding support of the crowd. Their supporters, still weeping, plastered smiles on their faces and bade the heroes a rousing farewell.

Beside the dugout, shaven-headed manager Walid Regragui put on a stoic smile and consoled his men who had left behind a bunch of warm memories on the field and made history by becoming the most successful African team ever in the tournament, who had become the darling of the masses.

Later, his eyes about to burst into a flood of tears, he said: "I told the players I was proud of them, His Majesty is proud, the Moroccan people are proud, the whole world is proud. We worked hard, we were honest, and we showed the values we wanted to show."

SCORELINE

FRANCE	2	MOROCCO	0
Hernandez	5'
Muani	79'

The Moroccan batch of 2022 would not be forgotten, their giant-scalping spree is unlike any the World Cup had ever witnessed. But unlike previous Cinderella stories of the World Cup, stories that ended with an edition and never surfaced again, Morocco's is a story that would have a broader resonance and a more sustained continuity.

In most cases, fairytale teams just vanish, unable to script another chapter in their story. Like the Cameroon of Italia '90 or Senegal and South Korea of 2002. All those teams flickered and faded. None could match, let alone improve, and emerge as a genuine footballing powerhouse for several reasons, be it dearth of talent, lack of planning or administrative chaos.

But Morocco's case, at least in the present tense, looks irrepressibly different. Primarily because they have a young nucleus who could be around for another World Cup cycle. The average age of this squad is 26; several key players are still quite young. Achraf Hakimi is 24; Nayef Aguerd 26, Youssef En-Nesyri 25, and Azzedine Ounahi 20, though some of them like Hakim Ziyech and Sofyan Boufal would be in their early to mid-30s.

However, Morocco needn't worry about talent depth. There are 45 players, the most from any African country, playing in the top five leagues of Europe. There are 10 times as many Moroccans in the lower leagues of the continent as well as in the first division football teams of the Balkan region and Russia. Their brand of football is more European than African, reliant more on compactness and tightness, technique and physicality, whereas most African sides, with the notable exception of Senegal, are skill-obsessed, individual- fixated.

Distraught Moroccan fans.

The football culture among Moroccans, living in Morocco as well as abroad, is strong as well to ensure that even if there is a slight plunge in consistency, the sport would not vanish. "Everyone plays football in Morocco, from kids to grandfathers. It's the most popular sport in the country and an obsession. There are clubs, grounds and stadiums, and I can only see the sport grow from here," says Amir Badr, a journalist.

It was not like Morocco was a footballing backwater earlier; they have featured in six World Cups, bid to host it as many times, and won the African Nations Cup as well. There is history, though they couldn't match it with performance until this World Cup. Even if there indeed were few that kept away from the game, the performance of their country would have captured their imagination. "It would become massive, it already is. Everyone would want their child to play football, to be Hakimi, or Ziyech," Badr says.

The support for the game is massive, as was evidenced in the number of Moroccan fans arriving from all over the world. No other country, even though South Korea were co-hosts in 2002, could boast of such an overwhelming fanbase.

In Le Monde, French-Moroccan writer Tahar Ben Jelloun dwelled on the significance of the achievement: "In my life, I will have experienced two historic moments of utmost importance: the return to Morocco of King Mohammed V (1909-1961), on November 16, 1956 – a return that led to the independence of Morocco – and the qualification, on December 10, 2022, of the Atlas Lions for the semi-finals of the football World Cup. The two events have nothing in common, but they both had an exceptional effect on the entire Moroccan people."

Focus on grassroots

The achievement was no happenstance or merely a sequence of fortunate incidents. It was a result of concerted planning and infrastructure building. In 2009, the Moroccan King, devastated at the state of football in his country as they did not even qualify for the African Nations Cup, launched the Mohammed VI Football Academy in Rabat, shelling out an estimated 15 million dollars on 18 hectares.

"It's the backbone of our football culture and has put a lot of means to advance soccer in Morocco," Regragui said before the quarterfinals. Among the 12 home-bred players, four are from the academy including mainstays Azzedine Ounahi, Youssef En-Nesyri and Nayef Aguerd (Reda Tagaouti being the fourth).

The brain behind the academy was Nasser Larguet, now the technical director of the Saudi Arabia football team. In 2009, Nasser, with his experience of managing French clubs like Rouen, Cannes, Caen and Strasbourg, was given absolute charge of setting up an academy, scouting and nurturing players. He travelled all around the country, watched tens of thousands of players and brought those he found worthy to the academy. He would keep an eye for Moroccan players playing abroad as well, and is widely credited for cajoling many of them to represent the country of their descent rather than birth. For instance, he told Hakimi: "In Spain, there are so many full-backs, you might not get a chance. But in Morocco, you are a hundred percent starter."

After two years, he returned to managing in France, after he was hired as head of the academy of Marseille. But he never cut the ties. In fact, he catalysed the appointment of Hervé Renard as their first high-profile coach before anointing Regragui as the future coach. It is unlikely, thus, that Morocco's story would be a one-off. Perhaps, these were the first signs of the sprouting of the first football powerhouse from Africa. And the tears they shed in Al Bayt might turn into the smiles of tomorrow.

Scandal-hit, injury-laden France revel in ethos of Deschamps-ism

MIHIR VASAVDA
DECEMBER 15

DIDIER DESCHAMPS is a lot of things: a tenacious and tactically-astute defensive midfielder, a pragmatic, uncomplicated coach, and a world champion as both. Turns out, he's also a great crisis manager.

He remained calm when Kylian Mbappe was embroiled in a feud with the French football federation, which saw the face of Les Bleus boycott the official photo shoots. He then brushed aside reports that Paul Pogba hired a witch doctor to put a spell on Mbappe. And he remained quiet when, days later, the national federation's president was accused of sexual harassment.

As French football got swirled in all types of scandals and controversies in the weeks leading to the World Cup, Deschamps saw his players drop out of the tournament one by one due to injuries – Ngolo Kante, Pogba, Karim Benzema, Christopher Nkuku… and when Lucas Hernandez was ruled out after the opening match against Australia, it felt like the 54-year-old himself might've to step out of retirement. "There is a climate out there that is not serene and calm," Deschamps told The Athletic days before the World Cup. "But all is well."

Les Bleus may have been Les Miserables off the field heading into Qatar but here they are, within touching distance of becoming only the third team to defend the World Cup after Brazil did it six decades ago.

'Black, blanc, beur' spirit

Togetherness has been a key pillar of Deschamps-ism. The France coach, having been a central figure in the 'black, blanc, beur' team (black, white, beur, a French term for North African immigrants) that won the World Cup in 1998, Deschamps realises the importance of team spirit in the four weeks of competition.

And that's been one of their strengths. He took the focus off the negativity around his group and ensured the players travelled to the Gulf without the toxicity that scripted their downfall in the previous tournaments, most notably in 2010. A master in the art of managing egos, not a small feat in the world of inflated egos, he's ensured harmony in the group even when his starting 11 has been rigid.

Fixing the selection jigsaw

The injuries to key players meant those who expected to warm the bench in Qatar suddenly found themselves in lead roles. Four years ago, Adrien Rabiot refused to be a reserve player in the World Cup squad. This time, he took Pogba's place in midfield. Theo Hernandez, always on the fringes, was thrust into the limelight after his brother Lucas' tournament ended due to an injury. Jules Kounde, a regular centre-back, blossomed in the role of a makeshift right-back while Antoine Griezmann has emerged as a contender for the player of the tournament playing as a midfielder.

It took incredible imagination and courage for Deschamps to fix the jigsaw and form a playing 11 after more than half of the regular starters were rendered unavailable.

Shedding possession

Another layer of Deschamps-ism – the low-risk philosophy entails that the more you hold possession, the chances of errors increase.

Morocco coach Walid Regragui conceded his team walked right into France's trap. "It was not our game plan (to have so much of the ball)," L'Equipe quoted Regragui as saying, referring to the 61 per cent possession his team 'enjoyed'. "I had told the players before the match: 'they are going to leave the ball for us and we have to leave it for them'. In the end, we were fooled." Throughout the campaign, France have absorbed pressure and defended in numbers; playing conservatively but doing just enough to win.

Winning critical moments

France, in most of their matches, haven't been authoritative but were better during critical moments, match-defining moments.

Against England, France were second best for most parts of the match. But 12 minutes from time, Olivier Giroud swung the momentum in France's favour with an incredible header. It was a half-chance, at best, but the goal – which came out of nowhere – ultimately proved to be the difference.

Morocco, too, experienced France's mental and physical strength during key situations. For instance, in the 53rd minute, Yahya Attiatt-Allah found himself in space on the left side of the box and tried to find Youssef En-Nesyri in front of an open goal. With Hugo Lloris out of position, Ibrahima Konate threw himself in front of the attackers and cleared the danger.

Konate is France's third-choice centre-back after Rafael Varane and Dayo Upamecano, who didn't feature in the semis due to illness. But when the moment came, he stepped up.

In-game management

The contribution of Konate, who came on as a second-half substitute in the semifinals, is also a testimony to Deschamps' ability to make timely interventions to change the flow of the match. Deschamps has stuck to the same playing 11, more or less, as well as the structure. But whenever his side has been found wanting, he hasn't hesitated to change things.

For instance, the left flank against Morocco was thoroughly exploited with Mbappe and Hernandez barely doing any defensive work. In the earlier matches, Rabiot plugged the gaps left by an adventurous Mbappe, who ventures out of position, but since he was unavailable, Hernandez was time and again found in a 2v1 situation against Ziyech and Hakimi.

So, Deschamps introduced Marcus Thuram just after the hour mark, pushed Mbappe forward and ordered his substitute to shore up the left flank. Then, around the 73rd minute, the coach could be seen having a word with Hernandez. The substitution proved timely since Thuram ended up winning more duels (8) in the 25 minutes he was on the pitch than any other player in the entire match.
