PM, Akhilesh, Rahul: In last lap, their paths criss-cross Varanasi

LALMANI VERMA
VARANASI, MARCH 4

AS UTTAR Pradesh headed towards the seventh and final leg of a long-drawn election, leaders of three of the principal contenders — BJP leader and Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Samajwadi Party chief Akhilesh Yadav and the Congress's Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka Gandhi Vadra — led separate rallies and roadshows in a final burst of campaigning.

Campaigning in Varanasi and other districts that go to the polls on Monday, March 7, will conclude on Saturday.

On Friday, Modi led a roadshow in support of BJP candidates in Varanasi, his Lok Sabha constituency.

Modi, who arrived here after addressing a rally in neighbouring Mirzapur, began the roadshow after garlanding a statue of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel at Maldahiya crossing that's part of the Varanasi North Assembly constituency.

Among those in the crowd that had assembled at the crossing even before the PM could

ATTACK ON UKRAINIAN FACILITY, EUROPE'S LARGEST, REVIVES MEMORIES OF CHERNOBYL Global alarm bells after fire as Russia seizes n-plant; India flags safety concern at UNSC

Delhi disapproves: Regrettable that Ukraine situation has worsened

SHUBHAJIT ROY
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

SETTING OFF alarm bells across the world, Russian troops Friday attacked Europe's largest nuclear power plant in Ukraine, starting a blaze that revived memories of the 1986 catastrophe at Chernobyl.

As firefighters doused the flames and the world recoiled in horror and slammed Russian President Vladimir Putin, the UN Security Council met urgently where India said "it is regrettable that the situation in Ukraine has worsened further."

Signalling its disapproval of the Russian action, India said "any accident involving the nuclear facilities may have severe consequences for public health and the environment".

Speaking at the UNSC — on a day India abstained at the UN Human Rights Council in the latest vote on the Russia-Ukraine issue — T S Tirumurti, India's Permanent Representative at the UN, said, "An immediate cessation of violence and end to all hostilities are essential. We continue to carefully follow the developments regarding the safety and security of Ukraine's nuclear

Told to head to safe point outside Kharkiv, 500 wait there — unsure, hungry

ABHINAYA HARIGOVIND
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

TWO DAYS after they were told by the Indian embassy to leave Kharkiv immediately for three safe points nearby, around 500 Indians have been waiting outside Ukraine's second largest city — cold, hungry, unsure where to go next.

Many stranded at Pischyn — it was one of the places they were told to head to, the other two being Babai and Bezlyudivka — are students. Unable to board trains leaving Kharkiv, they walked 11 km to Pischyn.

The March 2 embassy advisory had said "students who cannot find vehicles or buses and are in railway station can proceed on foot. Proceed immediately.

Under all circumstances, Indians must reach these settlements by 6 pm Ukrainian Time today."

From Shivpuri in Madhya Pradesh, Himanshu Raj Maurya, a first-year student of Kharkiv National Medical University (KNMU), said: "We reached here two days ago, since Pischyn was one of the places on the advisory that was issued. We are

2000-3000 STUDENTS STILL STRANDED Putin's hostage claim has few takers; Delhi calls for 'local ceasefire' to help exit

SHUBHAJIT ROY & RITU SARIN
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

FOR THE second time in two days, India shrugged off Russian President Vladimir Putin's claim Thursday that more than 3,000 Indian citizens are being held hostage at the Kharkiv train station in eastern Ukraine by the Ukrainian military.

New Delhi countered there were no such reports even as it called for a "local ceasefire" that could help get the stranded students — estimated at 2,000 — in eastern Ukraine to buses waiting

Putin lied... more at stake than Russia ties: German Ambassador

Ambassador Walter J Lindner. Abhinav Saha

SOURAV ROY BARMAN
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE RUSSIAN invasion of Ukraine came as a surprise as "nobody would have thought that President Putin would brutally attack his neighbours. If one is to call a spade a spade, he lied to us, to everyone," German Ambassador to India Walter J Lindner told The Indian Express Friday.

All countries should realise, he added, that there is "more at stake than just bilateral and emotional relations with Russia" because of Moscow's aggression against Ukraine sets a precedent, "any country could be under the same threat."

Qualifying his remarks saying he would not like to comment on India's position on the matter, Lindner said: "There is a powerful nation with a strong army which was not under threat, nobody was attacking it and the leader of this nation decides my weaker neighbour has no right to exist because this nation belongs to us. So let's create some pretext and invade, change the borders, violate the sovereignty and integrity just because we can,

Markaz case: Centre reverses its stand on reopening, wants curbs

SOFIAHSAN
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

DAYS AFTER conveying to Delhi High Court that the mosque at Markaz Nizamuddin can be reopened in accordance with Covid guidelines issued by the Delhi Disaster Management Authority (DDMA), the Centre on Friday opposed the re-opening of the entire premises — and said only a few police-verified persons may be permitted to offer prayers. The DDMA had last week ordered the lifting of all Covid restrictions in the national capital.

Advocate Rajat Nair, representing the Centre, told the court: "The locus of the petitioner (Delhi Waqf Board) is doubtful and this particular premises is part of a case property, which has been attached."

Nair was referring to the case registered by Delhi Police against the Markaz management for alleged violation of Covid curbs two years ago, leading to an outbreak among Tablighi Jamaat members. The High Court is

NEW DELHI, GUWAHATI, MARCH 4

MEGHALAYA HAS withdrawn consent to the CBI to investigate cases in the state, becoming the ninth state in the country to have taken this step in the last few years. However, unlike most of the other states, Meghalaya is ruled by Conrad Sangma's National People's Party (NPP) which is part of the BJP-led National Democratic Alliance.

"It is true that Meghalaya has withdrawn consent to the CBI. We do not know the reasons," said a government official.

Cricket's Maradona, bowling's Bradman, ultimate magician and a flawed genius

NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

AROUND 7.30 PM India time on Friday, the world of cricket lost not just one of its greatest cricketers but also one of its greatest characters. Australian leg-spinner Shane Warne was found dead in his hotel room at Koh Samui in Thailand of a suspected heart attack. He was 52, long-retired but active as a commentator, his insights on the game as rare and precious as his art.

That "there was no one quite like..." is often uttered as a formality at farewells and in obituaries. But the cliché could not have been truer in Warne's case. Few bowled leg-spin like him — 708 Test wickets and 293 ODI wickets are proof of that. Enough it would be to say that no one bowled like him, any bowler across any era.

He was the Donald Bradman of bowling. Apter perhaps, cricket's version of Diego

Maradona. Like the Argentine, he glowed in the gifts nature bestowed upon him, and his quest for the pleasures of life was insatiable. Like that flawed genius of football, he made mistakes in life and the game — both were banned for consuming drugs to aid weight loss — although Warne's trip never spiralled out of control.

Control, ironically, is perhaps power reactors and facilities.”

Alarm bells

“India attaches the highest importance to ensuring safety and security of nuclear facilities as any accident involving the nuclear facilities may have severe consequences for public health and the environment,” he said.
Stressing that India accords the “highest priority” to the discharge by the IAEA of its safeguards and monitoring activities, in accordance with its Statute in an effective, non-discriminatory and efficient manner, the Indian envoy said, “We have also noted the latest information available with regard to the nuclear power plants and facilities in Ukraine, including today’s updates provided by the DG, IAEA on the current situation.”

In a dramatic visual, IAEA chief Rafael Mariano Grossi briefed the UNSC from his aircraft as he was on his way to Iran.

Earlier, firefighters put out the blaze at the Zaporizhzhia plant, located near the city of Enerhodar in south-eastern Ukraine, and Russian troops occupied the site.

Ukrainian and UN officials said no radiation was released.

The nuclear power facility was targeted two days after Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov reminded the world of his country’s nuclear arsenal and warned that “a third world war will be nuclear, and devastating.”

The Associated Press quoted Grossi saying the building at the plant that had been hit was “not part of the reactor” but a training centre.

Grossi said the Ukrainians were in control of the reactor.

Facing worldwide indignation over the attack, Russia sought to deflect blame. According to the AP report, Defence Ministry spokesman Igor Konashenkov blamed arson rather than artillery fire. He claimed a Ukrainian “sabotage group” had occupied the training building at the plant, fired on a Russian patrol and set fire to the building as they left.

Ukraine’s state nuclear plant operator Enerhodar said three Ukrainian soldiers were killed and two wounded.

The attack led to calls between Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy and US President Joe Biden and other world leaders. The US Department of Energy, the AP reported, activated its nuclear incident response team as a precaution.

Zelenskyy said he feared an explosion that would be “the end for everyone. The end for Europe. The evacuation of Europe.”

In his remarks at the UNSC, Tirumurti said, “While we are discussing the nuclear dimension of an unfolding conflict, this Council must acknowledge that there is a pressing humanitarian crisis confronting us in Ukraine, where safety and security of innocent civilians including several thousand Indian nationals, in particular students are at stake.”

He expressed hope that the second round of talks between the two sides contributes to the immediate establishment of a safe humanitarian corridor.

“Commitment to the principles of the UN Charter, to international law and respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all states are key principles in this regard,” he said, flagging India’s concerns on Russia’s move against Ukraine.

Unsure, hungry

here now, but there’s very little food... a single slice of bread or a bowl of soup for the entire day. Buses are being arranged from here, but these are buses that we need to pay for. We were asked to pay $500 for buses, but I don’t have a single dollar with me.”

“We were staying in the bunker at the hostel. On March 2, we headed to the railway station on foot. There were around 1,000 of us from the hostel. When we reached the station, the Ukrainians did not let us get on the train. We were told that only girls and children will get on the train, and no men would be allowed. But even the Indian girls were not allowed. There was an attack near the railway station, we panicked and went to the nearby metro station. Then the advisory to walk to Pischyn came, and we decided to walk,” he said.

Sagar Kumar Gupta, a first-year student at KNMU, pegged the number of students at Pischyn at around 500.

Ayaan Faiz, a fourth-year student at KNMU, who is from Bhopal, said a few people had paid and taken private buses, and around 900 people are likely to still be at Pischyn.

Himanshu and Ayaan said the private buses are being arranged by agencies that help students secure admission. “For now, students are at a shelter of sorts, a campus. But how do we get to the borders with Hungary or Poland?” Ayaan said.

A first-year student at KNMU, who asked not to be named, said, “When we reached the railway station, there was panic. Very few people were able to board the train, some students were hurt. We walked to Pischyn and we had no food with us. There are around 500 to 600 people here now. The agencies arranging the buses are saying they will take us to Lviv or the border with Poland, but we are being asked to pay cash. We are closer to the Russian border than to the others.”

The Ministry of External Affairs said around 300 Indians are stranded in Kharkiv and 700 in Sumy, where fierce fighting is on. Some of the over 900 Indians in Pischyn are being taken out from there in five buses. And, on the western borders near Lviv, there are less than 1,000.

Putin claim

statement yesterday. I clarified it again... I’m not aware of any Indian being held hostage. I mean, unless you have some information that I don’t, they are having difficulty getting out because of the security situation in some places, particularly, I would say in Sumy and in Kharkiv town. But I haven’t heard anybody being held hostage.”

Pressed, he said: “You should always ask the person who makes the statements. Why us?”

Senior officials said Putin’s hostage remark is more war-rhetoric than reality. Speaking to The Indian Express, a top official in the security establishment said that almost all Indian students there had active mobile phone connections and were in touch with their parents, representatives of the Indian Government and in many cases, the media.

“None of them described any situation of them being in captivity or being held hostage or being detained against their wishes,” said the official. “Yes, they may have said some Ukrainian authorities are uncooperative and we are trying our best to work on that.”

More importantly, the official said, no price has been put for the “release” of Indian students. “No Indian student has said that even Rs 500 has been demanded for their safe travel to evacuation sites. No demands for ransom have reached the Government. So how can we describe this as a hostage situation?” the top official said.

Meanwhile, as per Bagchi’s break-up of stranded students, there are 2000-3000 in all: 300 in Kharkiv; 700 in Sumy, where fierce fighting is on; over 900 in Pischyn, a Kharkiv suburb, from where some were being evacuated in five buses to the western border either to Lviv or Moldova where there’s another batch of under 1,000.

“The (core) problem is how to get these students from their location in Kharkiv, Sumy, and other areas to the eastern border sharing with Russia... there are buses waiting there, but that route is about 50 to 60 km away through the conflict zone. They are too far away and can’t walk that distance. We want safe passage for the students through that area... without a local ceasefire between the Russians and Ukrainians, it is difficult to take these students to the buses. We don’t want to cross the stretch where it is risky... We appeal and urge the parties to have a local ceasefire,” the spokesperson said.

On the assurance yesterday that Russia and Ukraine agreed to created humanitarian corridors to help civilians exit, Bagchi said: “We have not seen anything further to that in terms of implementation... if that happens, it will certainly help our process.”

Around 20,000 Indian nationals have so far crossed the borders of war-torn Ukraine to safety, the MEA said, as reports emerged about a Delhi student getting shot multiple times but miraculously surviving the assault.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi chaired another meeting to review the unfolding situation in Ukraine amid the evacuation. External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar, Union Minister Piyush Goyal and National Security Adviser Ajit Doval were among those who attended the meeting.

As India’s efforts to rescue its citizens gathered steam, it transpired that Harjot Singh, a student from Delhi’s Chhatrapur, was hit with four bullets, including one on his chest, as he attempted to flee Kyiv. The spokesperson said he was in hospital and the government is in touch with his doctors and will bear his medical cost.

Bagchi said India has evacuated a Bangladeshi national as part of its mission to bring back the stranded Indians. He said 15 flights landed in India as part of the evacuation mission during the last 24 hours, bringing back more than 3,000 people, and 16 more are scheduled over the next 24 hours.

German envoy

because we are stronger. We don’t care about UN charter, bilateral agreements.”

“If this sets a precedent, any country could be under the same threat and most of the countries in the world have a strong neighbour and there are a lot of border disputes around the globe and I think, since decades, we have agreed in the United Nations and in different regional fora that peaceful solutions of disputes is the thing to do,” said Lindner, who took over as Germany’s envoy to India in April 2019, said. He was speaking at The Indian Express’s Idea Exchange (a detailed transcript will be published March 7).

So far, India has abstained on two resolutions on Ukraine in the Security Council and one in the 193-member General Assembly. On Friday, India also abstained in a vote in the UN Human Rights Council that decided to set up an independent international commission of inquiry as a consequence of Russia’s aggression against Ukraine.

Significantly, Germany, in a departure from its cautious approach on display even during Moscow’s annexation of Crimea, has sharply reversed its stand.

On February 26, Germany announced it will supply arms to Ukraine, with German chancellor Olaf Scholz underlining that “the Russian invasion of Ukraine marks a turning point.”

Explaining this shift, Lindner said: “Our experience with a brutal Nazi dictatorship, misuse of military, misuse of weapons, we had a very reluctant approach towards arms exports because we know how arms can be misused... We have decided to increase our military budget by over 2 per cent. It was a decision taken with consensus. We never exported weapons, we always said no. But we have said it in the UN and elsewhere that democracy has its price and we are willing to pay it, which means inflation might go up, prices might go up. But you cannot get freedom and democracy for nothing... Putin has opened our eyes that to keep peace, (there) might have a price so we will do that,” Lindner said, describing Russian aggression as “Putin’s war”.

arrive was Prakash Gautam, 21. A BSc student at a college in Babatpur, on the outskirts of Varanasi district, Gautam travels 22 km every day to his coaching class because “there are no good teachers in our college”. Yet, as he stood with his backpack, waiting for the PM, Gautam didn’t complain about unemployment or jobs — two of the hot button issues among youths this election.

“Things will improve when India becomes atma nirbhar (self-dependent). We should have patience when it comes to issues of national interest. It’s not true that recruitments have not been done in this government; yes, maybe a little slower.”

Soon after, as Modi arrived, the crowds surged on either side of the road. After garlanding the Sardar Patel statue, the road show began with Modi emerging through the sunroof and waving to the crowds as the vehicle inched forward.

Youths on motorbikes wearing saffron helmets and some others on skating wheels brought up the front end of the cavalcade. The crowd chanted “Jai Shri Ram” and “Har Har Mahadev” and showered the PM and his cavalcade with rose petals as the vehicle inched forward.

The road show covered the three assembly segments of Varanasi North, Varanasi South and Varanasi Cantonment. The BJP had won all three seats in 2017 and the party has repeated the sitting MLAs this time around. But none of the candidates were in any of the vehicles that were part

India’s reliance on Russia for arms

NEW EPISODE EVERYDAY

In this episode, Krishn Kaushik joins host Snigdha Sharma to discuss how much India depends on Russia for its defence requirements of the cavalcade. Varanasi North candidate Ravindra Jaiswal was seen walking alongside the cavalcade.

Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath was not part of the road show but his photographs were displayed prominently along with photos of the bulldozer to highlight his government crackdown on alleged criminals.

The road show ended at Godowliya near Kashi Vishwanath Dham temple, over 3 km away.

Modi will wind up his trip — and the party’s campaign — on Saturday with a public meeting in support of BJP candidates in the rural part of the district.

Later in the evening, SP’s Akhilesh Yadav too conducted a road show in Varanasi, a little after Modi wound up his campaign for the day. Yadav’s ‘Samajwadi Rath’ started from the Rath Yatra roundabout in Varanasi, before proceeding to cover the three Assembly seats — Cantonment, Varanasi North and Varanasi South.

Yadav was accompanied by the Opposition alliance’s candidates — Pooja Yadav, Ashfaq Ahmad Daboo and Kishan Dixit.

Congress leaders Rahul Gandhi, accompanied by his sister and AICC General Secretary Priyanka Gandhi Vadra, addressed a rally for party candidate Ajay Rai in Pindra Assembly constituency of Varanasi.

Meghalaya

While Meghalaya Home Minister Lahkmen Rymbul said he was “not in a position to comment” on the development, calls to Chief Minister Sangma went unanswered.

However, speaking to local reporters outside the Meghalaya Assembly on Friday, Sangma termed the development a “normal procedure.” “The decision was made quite a long time ago. I can’t remember the date,” he said.

Mizoram was the first state to withdraw consent in 2015, when it was ruled by the Congress with Lal Thanhawla as the chief minister. In 2018, the Mizo National Front (MNF) under Zoramthanga came to power. Although the MNF is an NDA ally, consent to the CBI was not restored.

The other states that have withdrawn consent — Maharashtra, Punjab, Rajasthan, West Bengal, Jharkhand, Chhattisgarh, Kerala — are all ruled by the Opposition. They have alleged that the CBI has become the Centre’s tool to target Opposition leaders.

The withdrawal of consent means the CBI will not be able to investigate any case in the state without the state’s nod.

In Meghalaya, which goes to polls next year, the decision comes in the backdrop of corruption allegations against the Chief Minister’s brother, James P K Sangma. He has been accused of corruption in the implementation of the ‘Soubhagya Scheme’ — for providing electricity connections to all households — with the Congress demanding a CBI probe.

Earlier, the Chief Minister divested James Sangma of the Home portfolio following more allegations that he had allowed syndicates to carry out illegal mining and transportation of coal.

In November 2018, the West Bengal government withdrew general consent, hours after Andhra Pradesh, then ruled by TDP, did so. After the government was replaced by that of YS Jagan Mohan Reddy in 2019, Andhra restored consent. Chhattisgarh withdrew consent in January 2019, followed by Punjab, Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Kerala and Jharkhand in 2020.

right choices. However, you know companies like us... we have a lot of data. We are data-driven and we have a lot of data and sometimes all the data cannot be put in public domain because there are monthly differences in the numbers, there are reasons for those differences, or, you know, investors may not understand what are the reasons for those differences,” Nayar said at the The Indian Express e-Adda on Thursday.

She was responding to a question on some new-age tech companies deviating from the practice of conducting quarterly analyst meetings and sharing profitability metrics after listing on the bourses.

“There is information that may be very competitive. I do not justify what others are doing. I think our own effort is going to be more about sharing as much as we can share in a safe manner so that investors who have chosen to invest or may choose to invest can make reasonable decisions based on that information,” she said.

Nykaa went public last year and its IPO was oversubscribed nearly 82.5 times, fetching a valuation of more than Rs 95,000 crore at its listing debut in November.

Along with her son Anchit, who looks after the beauty e-commerce business, and daughter Adwaita, who heads the fashion vertical, Nayar was interacting at the e-Adda with Anant Goenka, Executive Director, Indian Express Group, and Anil Sasi, National Business Editor, The Indian Express.

When asked if policy and regulatory intervention was required for new-age tech companies going public, Nayar said: “I can’t speak for them, I think SEBI is quite vigilant or you know they want to be quite on top of it at least with what we saw with our own document. They were quite thorough and I would have expected them to be similarly thorough for other companies.”

Last year, in addition to Nykaa (FSN E-Commerce Ltd), several tech start-ups, such as Zomato, Paytm (One97 Communications Ltd), PolicyBazaar (PB Fintech Ltd) and Cartrade, hit the market with IPOs. While most of them saw an overwhelming response from the public markets, the share prices of a number of them have witnessed sharp corrections over the past three months.

Responding to a question on the valuations of tech companies in the absence of profitability, and whether there was room for corrections, Adwaita said: “Businesses have to transition to delivering meaty profitability and so I think, just being in the trenches of trying to build Nykaa, we found that it is actually so difficult to build a business at scale with reasonable profitability. My own opinion is some of the valuations for start-ups, where there is clearly no business model and no path to profitability, do require a correction.”

To a question on the beauty and personal care consumer’s profile in India, Anchit said: “You look at all the data, it tells you that India is very early in its consumption journey. The per capita spend on BPC in India is only $14 annually. That number is close to $300-$400 in the West and it’s somewhere around $75 to $100 in China. So if you look at the data, it tells you that today where India is in terms of its consumption journey in BPC is where China was exactly 15 years ago in 2006.

“So there’s a total difference in terms of the purchasing power, the awareness, the education for a small town consumer in India versus that in LA in the US. I think that is what excites us so much that we’ve been able to build a business of our scale when we’re so early on in our journey as a country. The opportunity is massive and the addressable market is growing leaps and bounds.”

the last trait you would attribute to his bowling; it was all about the magic. And yet, at the heart of it all was immaculate, often preternatural, control of cricket’s most difficult art — a wrist spinner with the control of a finger spinner. There was a calm purpose and the precision of a surgeon in every step. Within that three-stride run-up, he would read the batsman like a psychoanalyst, his bright blue eyes picking little clues.

And the smooth action that followed was but a ruse for the impending doom he would wreak. As he broke into the run-up, anticipation would brim. The showman that he always was, he wouldn’t rush the drama. Rather, he would slow it down. His shoulders slightly slouched, the curled tip of the tongue jutting out, a smear of zinc cream on the tip of his nose, he would let those leg-breaks rip with an action seemingly bereft of any visible strain on his body. As if this was a natural sequence of motion for him, like walking or running for the rest.

After such minimalism, would kick in the sorcery. The ball would leave his wrists as if he had, like a magician, whispered life into it. Probably, only Wasim Akram could cajole so much life from a piece of dead leather. The ball whizzed and fizzed in the air with a magnetic drift that lulled the batsman into making a final mistake.

Half of the batsmen would be caught in the hypnotic trance of the ball’s flight. The rest would be bedevilled by the illusion after pitching. Few turned the ball as precociously as Warne did. The faces of some of the master batsmen who were reduced to wrecks tell the story which, in this day and age, would have been meme-troll gold. The shock on Mike Gatting’s face after the Ball of the Century. Or the awe in the eyes of Andrew Strauss, or Shivnarine Chanderpaul, or Michael Atherton.

Warne was the ultimate magician of cricket’s ultimate magic. And he had all the tools that a merely good bowler could only dream of — leg-break, googly, flipper, skidder, bouncer and even some that he named himself, like the zooter, to spook the batsmen, mostly English.

Often, the tease would begin before he had bowled the first ball. Like a boxer, he would land verbal punches to soften up batsmen, make them react, assert his onepmanship, and it mostly worked. Before every series, especially Ashes, he would announce the launch of a new variation; during warm-ups, he would train in the farthest corner of the ground, as though he were working secretly on it.

But frequently forgotten in his bowling virtuoso was that he was a terrific fielder at slips and a free-wheeling batsman, too, with a Test highest of 99. His incredibly astute cricket brain, capable of spotting technical and mental weakness, prompted many down under to consider him the greatest captain Australia never had. Warne finally ended up the greatest captain Rajasthan Royals ever had, as he plotted their fairy-tale triumph in IPL-1.

The blond hair, the beach-bum persona and off-field antics embellished his halo. He was caught smoking secretly after he had signed an anti-smoking campaign; fined for providing information to a bookmaker in 1994; suspended for 12 months in 2003 for taking a banned diuretic. He dated several women, including celebrities such as Liz Hurley. He trash-talked, infuriated and incensed different people at different times, but the flaws did not diminish his aura, only bumished it.

Warne was 52 when he died, but in the eyes of the cricketing world, he would remain ever youthful, ever Mr Hollywood. He did his bit to keep up that image, sweating in the gym to get fitter than ever before, and undergoing hair-transplants and cosmetic surgeries. Somewhere deep inside, he seemed unwilling to part with his long-parted youth. But in the end, for once, he had to leave in the middle of an unfinished spell, a glorious spell that only he hearing the Waqf Board’s petition to ease restrictions at Markaz Nizamuddin, where public entry was banned after that outbreak.

Nair informed the bench of Justice Manoj Kumar Ohri — the case was being heard until last week by Justice Mukta Gupta — that on the occasion of Shab-e-Barat last year, authorities had permitted the offering of namaz by 50 people on the mosque’s first floor.

“I have no dispute. I don’t say that those people cannot continue this time at Shab-e-Barat as well as during the holy month of Ramadan. If my learned friend (lawyer on opposite side) accepts that order, I have no dispute about that but if he is asking for reopening of the entire premises, then I have some submissions to make,” Nair said.

When the court asked the counsel whether he had seen the latest DDMA order, he responded that it “was subsequent”. Nair submitted that authorities had initially opposed the reopening of the site but later, considering its religious nature, permitted five people to offer namaz five times a day and on occasions like Shab-e-Barat and the month of Ramadan, permitted more people “pursuant to their verification by the local SHO”.

Submitting that the same arrangement can be made this time, he argued: “There is no person who has come forward placing documents as to who is the rightful owner of this particular property... to whom Waqf has granted lease”.

Advocate Wajeeh Shafiq, representing the Waqf Board, submitted that the court was being misled by the Centre. He argued that when 50 people were permitted, there were certain DDMA guidelines in place, which now stand withdrawn completely.

“They are only keeping it locked. Admittedly, it is a mosque. It is a gazette-notified mosque. We have the statutory right to control, manage and administer these properties. They are interfering with our rights,” submitted Shafiq.

Observing that the DDMA’s Covid guidelines would apply to Markaz Nizamuddin as well, the court had in November 2021 ordered a joint inspection of the religious site. The inspection report, which is on record, states that the madrasa, mosque and hostel at Markaz Nizamuddin are separate from each other.

On February 22, the Waqf Board sought the reopening of the mosque and told the court that the month of Ramzan begins around April 2 and that Shab-e-Barat is March. In response, the Centre and Delhi Police had told the court that key areas at the site were earmarked during the inspection and that the only question was on the number of people to be allowed inside to offer prayers.

Justice Gupta had then recorded in her order: “Learned counsel appearing for Union of India states that as regards opening of the Masjid is concerned, the same will have to be in terms of the orders of the District Disaster Management Authority (DDMA) and he will file a status report in this regard before the next date.”

On Friday, Justice Ohri asked the Waqf Board to place on record the latest DDMA order and listed the matter for next hearing on March 11.

The Delhi Waqf Board in the petition filed in February 2021 has submitted that Masjid Bangley Wali, Madarsa Kashif-ul-Uloom, and the attached hostel situated at Basti Hazrat Nizamuddin have been locked since March 2020.

The Centre earlier had told the court the premises have been kept “under lock and key” in view of the fact that the Markaz management is itself under investigation in the case registered last year by the Delhi Police Crime Branch.

New Delhi: Police have lodged an FIR against four persons for allegedly attacking a Class X student outside a school on Monday. "We received a complaint from the girl's father that she was assaulted outside the school. A case under relevant sections was registered on Thursday," DCP (North) Sagar Singh Kalsi said. During investigation, police found that the girl had written something on social media against another girl. "The second girl, along with her brother and her friends, later confronted the victim, and also allegedly beat up the victim's peer," a senior police officer said. Kalsi said legal action has been taken against the four under CrPC section 41(A).

Police said the victim's family alleged that his former roommates had been harassing him for some time and falsely accused him of stealing a phone.

Huge discounts on liquor not in larger public interest, Delhi govt tells HC

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

STATING THAT responsible drinking and prohibiting illicit trade of liquor is its primary objective, the Delhi government Friday told the High Court that the huge discounts offered by a few liquor stores was leading to "distortions in the market" as people were being driven and lured to purchase liquor from them while other licensees were running into losses. The huge discounts are not in larger public interest, said the government.

In a written reply to the petition challenging its decision to prohibit the issuance of discounts or rebates by retail liquor sellers, the government submitted data relating to sales made in December, January and February and informed the court that there was "almost double increase in February 2022 as compared to the three-year monthly average sale."

"For the year 2018-19, the average monthly sales in lakh litres was 136.7 (lakh litres). For the year 2019-20, the average monthly sale of liquor was 132.11 (lakh) litres. However, for the month of February 2022, the sale was 245.08 lakh litres," said the government.

In February 2018, a total of 132.22 lakh litres were sold; in February 2019, the number stood at 107.35 lakh litres but in February 2022 it rose to 245.08 lakh litres, as per government data. It said the increased sales can't be attributed to only an increase in consumption and that it cannot be privy to such behaviour "which is contrary to the reforms" brought by it.

"The chances of bootlegging cannot be ruled out as the consumption pattern cannot increase manifold on account of individual consumption as overnight people cannot start drinking double their usual capacity," said the government.

It further said that ethical and social responsibility of the government towards its citizens is as important as securing revenue earned from liquor trade. The government in its report also presented data regarding stocks to show that there was not an equitable distribution from three major wholesalers among retailers.

BJP sharpens attack on AAP with 'booze referendum at over 1,000 locations'

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

WITH MCD elections around the corner, the BJP's Delhi unit Friday conducted a "referendum" at 1,120 places across the city to "collect the opinion of about 10 lakh people" on the Delhi government's new excise policy.

About 50,000 party workers, MLAs, district morcha presidents and vice-presidents participated in the drive, during which boxes were placed at residential areas to seek "feedback" from the public. "The AAP government promised to start colleges, schools and provide employment to youngsters but in reality, it is promoting wrong practices and creating a threat to the health of youngsters and women by bringing this policy," said BJP state president Adesh Gupta.

Responding to the BJP's fresh attack, the AAP in a statement said: "This is not any referendum, it's BJP's fear. With the new excise policy, the AAP government has put an end to the BJP's liquor mafia. It should collect feedback on its leaders who are involved in the mafia and tell people how they earned Rs

3,500 crore illegally through liquor mafia."

The "referendum" was conducted at several places by senior leaders such as Dr Harsh Vardhan, Ramesh Bidhuri, Hans Raj Hans, Vijay Goel and Vijender Gupta.

The liberalised policy, which marks the exit of the government from the liquor business, and clears the path for reducing drinking age from 25 to 21 and allowing home delivery of alcohol, has given the BJP a handle a month ahead of the civic polls — just when AAP had it on the back foot over allegations of corruption, mismanagement and negligence by the corporations.

Four months since the policy's implementation, AAP has had to make an amendment, essentially banning liquor vendors from offering discounts, landing it in a court case. The government defended its move saying vendors were getting crowded by customers, leading to law and order issues.

Before the new policy, Delhi had around 850 liquor shops, more than half of which were government run. After the change, the total number of vendors were to remain the same but be reallocated to ensure even distribution.

Ankit Gujjar used phone inside Tihar to make requests for money transfers: CBI

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE CENTRAL Bureau of Investigation in a report before the Delhi High Court has said that gangster Ankit Gujjar (29), who was allegedly murdered inside Tihar Jail in August last year, was unauthorised using a mobile number inside the jail to contact his family and friends to make requests for transfer of payments to various persons, including jail officials.

The mobile number was used in 10 handsets, according to the CBI, between June and August 2021 while Gujjar was in judicial custody at Tihar. One person received Rs 3.50 lakh from three different men "in the months of June-July 2021 for delivering to jail staff on behalf of Ankit Gujjar". The report mentions the name of two head warders of Central Jail 3 to whom the money was allegedly delivered.

Regarding the transfers of Rs 1.44 lakh made by Gujjar's brother through Paytm, the court was told that the money was routed through different persons and ultimately allegedly reached either other inmates or jail staff.

A counsel representing the CBI before the bench of Justice Manoj Kumar Ohri Friday told the court that substantial investigation has already taken place in the case and sought more time to submit further status report. The court will hear the matter next on May 5.

The court last year transferred the murder case to the CBI after hearing the petition filed by Gujjar's mother Geeta through advocate Mehmood Pracha. While transferring the case, Justice Mukta Gupta in September 2021 had said that it was a very serious offence which requires an in-depth investigation to unearth the alleged extortion taking place in the prison. The CBI in its report said that they have examined 113 witnesses in the case and the probe is focused on the murder of Gujjar, negligence in providing him medical treatment, connivance of a jail official in not allowing police to enter the jail, non-functioning of CCTV cameras, and also the demand of money by jail officials.

Following recovery of a phone and other contraband from Gujjar's cell in August last year, the CBI said, he was instructed to be shifted to another ward which was allegedly resisted by him, leading to a fight with Narend Meena, the then Deputy Superintendent of the prison. Gujjar and two other inmates were allegedly beaten by jail staff, and Gujjar died later in his cell.

POLICE TO FILE CHARGESHEET IN COURT
Shahdara rape: Videos recorded by accused are now key evidence

MAHENDER SINGH MANRAL
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE DELHI Police has prepared a chargesheet in the Shahdara gangrape-assault case, listing key evidence found during the probe. This includes five video clips of the attack recorded by the accused on their phones, the victim's hair from the autorickshaw she was abducted in, and a trimmer and scissors used to cut the hair. The report is expected to be filed in Karkardooma court soon.

On January 26, the young woman was abducted from her house, allegedly gangraped by members of a family, and paraded on the streets. The accused blamed her for the death of a teenager from their family, who allegedly committed suicide last November because she rejected his advances. The victim's sister had also alleged she was sexually harassed and beaten up by them.

Speaking to The Indian Express on Friday, her husband said: "My wife came back home around 20 days after the incident; we are now living under police protection. They hit on her head with sticks; she still complains of headaches. She doesn't talk much or meet people now. We received some threatening messages (from the accused) via our relatives, but we have full faith in the system and are awaiting justice. What they did to my wife has scarred us for life."

Police had arrested 16 persons and apprehended four juveniles.

Police had lodged an FIR and formed a 10-member SIT to speed up the probe. "During investigation, the SIT scanned the phones seized from the accused and found that four of them had recorded a video, in which a group of women can be seen thrashing the victim while parading her on the street. Some of their faces were visible in these videos. The phones were sent to the forensic science laboratory," a police source said.

Police had also recovered strands of the victim's hair from an autorickshaw, and a trimmer and scissors from the accused's house along with her hair.

"Police have recorded statements of around 15 people under CrPC section 161, as well as that of the victim and her younger sister under CrPC section 164. In her statement, the woman had corroborated her initial statement and narrated her ordeal," police sources said.

During investigation, the SIT also attached the complaints and calls made by the victim and her family members against the accused. In her complaint following the assault, the victim had said that she and her husband shifted homes to hide from the accused.

HC creates 3 more courts to expedite trial of pending UAPA cases in Delhi

Shifts non-NIA cases from special courts

SOFI AHSAN
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

TO EXPEDITE the hearing of pending UAPA cases in the national capital, the Delhi High Court has decided to withdraw all other cases from the designated National Investigation Agency (NIA) courts and assign them to three new Additional Sessions Judge (ASJ) courts.

Justice Mukta Gupta, while hearing a petition filed by an accused in a case probed by the NIA last December, had stressed the need for expeditious disposal of pending UAPA cases through exclusive courts, and asked the administrative side to file an affidavit indicating the steps taken to streamline the trials.

The court, on the administrative side, last month decided to shift five Courts of Metropolitan Magistrate (Negotiable Instruments Act) in New Delhi district to Rouse Avenue Court Complex because of non-availability of courtrooms at Patiala House Court. Post the shifting, three new ASJ courts — ASJ-05, ASJ-06 and ASJ-07 — are being created in New Delhi.

ASJ-02 and ASJ-03 will continue to deal with the NIA Act cases, including those related to UAPA. "All other cases pending before the said two courts of ASJ-02 and ASJ-03 be immediately withdrawn and assigned to the newly created ASJ courts by the Principal District and Sessions Judge, New Delhi, while ensuring equitable distribution," the administration said in an affidavit.

Further, the HC has also decided that the newly created ASJ-05 court will be designated to try sessions cases investigated by the Special Cell of Delhi Police. The court of Principal and Sessions

Judge, New Delhi, which is also the designated court for the trial of NIA cases, has been asked to transfer "such number of cases under the NIA Act pending in his court to the court of ASJ-03 so as to facilitate their expeditious disposal".

As per a report placed before the court in December, 37 cases are pending before NIA courts, 141 people are in custody and more than 3,855 witnesses have been cited by the prosecuting agency.

Justice Gupta on December 17 had said, "Offences being serious and many a times involving foreign nationals, bail is not granted easily and thus it is paramount that offences under the UAPA, whether investigated by NIA or by Special Cell, are tried by special designated courts expeditiously who have no other matters listed before it so that the trials can be expedited."

The undertrial's petition stated that there are only two courts in Delhi notified as designated ones for trials under the NIA Act, resulting in delay in proceedings. The petition, filed through advocates Kartik Murukutla and Abu Bakr Sabbaq, seeks a direction to ensure that the special courts under Section 11 of the NIA Act deal exclusively with cases being probed by the central agency.

The petitioner Manzer Imam was arrested in 2013 in a case related to alleged Indian Mujahideen operatives, including the group's founder Yasin Bhatkhal. The chargesheet was filed in February 2014, but they are yet to be framed by the court, as per Imam's petition. A total of 24 persons are accused in the case.

In some cases before NIA courts, the accused have been in custody since 2013 and in a majority of them, they were arrested prior to 2020.

Gas station murders: Raids on in districts bordering Gurgaon

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
GURGAON, MARCH 4

FOUR DAYS after three staffers of a CNG gas station were brutally hacked to death in their sleep by unidentified assailants at the pump located on a service lane off NH-48 in Sector 31, police are yet to crack the case.

Senior police officers privy to the investigation said that at least seven crime branch teams are working to nab the accused. On Wednesday, Gurgaon Police had announced a reward of Rs 1 lakh for credible information leading to their arrest.

Preet Pal Sangwan, ACP Crime, said, "Several teams are conducting raids to trace the accused persons. We are examining all angles and a probe is on."

On Monday around 2.40 am, unidentified assailants had stabbed to death three staffers — manager, CNG operator and a filling boy — of a gas station, while they were asleep. Probe had found that the attack was perpetrated within 4 minutes between 2.43 am and 2.47 am. The accused had cut off power supply to the gas station rendering all CCTVs non-operational. An FIR was registered under IPC sections 302 (murder) and 34 (common intention) against unknown persons.

Police had earlier ruled out loot as a motive for the crime since the assailants did not rob Rs 10 lakh kept in a safe in the room where the murders took place.

A police officer, requesting anonymity, said, "Teams are conducting raids in districts bordering Gurgaon for possible leads. The crime scene suggests that personal enmity was the motive. We are checking records of former employees who worked at the gas station."

Skywalk between New Delhi Railway station, metro near it opens today

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

DELHI METRO commuters who currently have to take a rickshaw or walk to reach the Ajmeri Gate side of the New Delhi railway station will soon get relief as the much-awaited 'skywalk' between there and metro station near it will be inaugurated for public use on Saturday.

"This dedicated skywalk will be of great benefit to provide seamless connectivity between one of the busiest hubs of New Delhi railway station and Metro stations of New Delhi on Yellow Line and Airport Express Line," said a DMRC official.

The 242-metre skywalk, constructed by the DMRC in collaboration with the Northern Railways, will also help streamline traffic on the Ajmeri Gate side. It has escalators and lifts for the differently abled and is also equipped with CCTVs and smart lighting systems.

"The construction of this unique skywalk, in a hub witnessing significant traffic, was a major engineering challenge, including the disruptions posed due to the pandemic. The structure had to be built above a functional underground Metro station just three metres below with major traffic movement on Bhavbhuti Marg. Also, the bridge had to be connected to two pre-existing building structures at the far ends, ensuring minimum inconvenience to people, infrastructure and other buildings nearby," said the official.

The skywalk is an extension of the already existing foot over bridge inside the railway station and will connect the Ajmeri Gate side with the New Delhi Metro station as well as the multilevel parking across Bhavbhuti Marg via multiple entry and exit points.

Funds at centre of Cong's bribery charge against BJP

JIMMY LEIVON
IMPHAL, MARCH 4

SENIOR CONGRESS leader and AICC observer for Manipur Jairam Ramesh has accused the BJP government in the state of influencing voters by releasing funds to Kuki militant groups under the Suspension of Operation (SoO) agreement.

Ramesh said Rs 15.70 crore was released on February 1 and another Rs 92.65 lakh on March 1. "This is a complete violation of the model code of conduct and nothing more than bribery and corruption," he said, adding that this meant elections in Churachandpur and Kangpokpi districts in the first phase held on February 28 were not "free and fair", as the Kuki groups had announced support for the BJP, and that payments to SoO groups would influence elections in Tengnoupal and Chandel districts in the second phase on March 5.

The Chief Electoral Officer, Manipur, said it had found no violation. It said the Home Department and Finance Department had clarified that Rs 15.70 crore was released as stipend for SoO groups, as part of a programme since 2008, and that Rs 92.6 lakh was paid as financial benefit to surrendered militants.

The pact

There are nearly 30 Kuki insurgent groups in Manipur and 25 groups are under an SoO pact with the Centre and state government. Seventeen of them are part of the umbrella Kuki National Organisation (KNO), and eight of the United People's Front (UPF).

The SoO pact was signed on August 22, 2008, with the aim of initiating political dialogue. Talks are ongoing, with A B Mathur, former special secretary of R&AW, the interlocutor. The Kuki outfits which were initially demanding a separate Kuki state have settled for a 'territorial council'.

Terms of SoO

While the period of SoO agreement is one year, it is extendable. Under the pact, security forces and underground groups will not launch any operations.

The signatories of the UPF and KNO are required to abide by the Constitution and the territorial integrity of Manipur. They are prohibited from committing "atrocities, extortion", and confined to camps identified by the government. Their arms are deposited in safe keeping, with weapons given to them only to guard camps and protect leaders. As part of the rehabilitation package, the cadres living in the designated camps are given a monthly stipend of Rs 5,000.

Political stand

The KNO and UPF have both announced support for BJP candidates, citing the announcement by Union Home Minister Amit Shah to end the Kuki insurgency problem if voted to power.

Hills vs valley: In Manipur, new bridges across old divides

TORA AGARWALA & JIMMY LEIVON
UKHRUL, MARCH 4

IN MAY 2017, just two months after he became chief minister, N Biren Singh inaugurated the five-day-long 'Shirui Lily Festival' in Manipur's Ukhrul district. On the face of it, the festival was dedicated to conserving a rare, endangered flower. But in the Tangkhul Naga hills of Ukhrul, it meant much more.

"For the first time, there were so many Meiteis from the valley here in Ukhrul," says R Kasar, a student leader.

Relationship between the Imphal valley, the seat of government in the state, and Manipur's tribal hill areas has always been strained. The hills lag on various development parameters, and blame it on years of neglect by the state.

During the Okram Ibobi Singh-led Congress government of 15 years, this gap seemed to widen. Besides the Inner Line Permit demand raised by Meiteis and the government's bid to bring three contentious "anti-tribal" Bills in 2015, the creation of seven new districts in the hill areas had caused tension, including in the Kuki-Paitei-dominated Churachandpur hills.

Ibobi's firm stance on the territorial integrity of Manipur came into conflict with the Naga demand of a homeland. So antagonistic was this relationship that, ahead of the 2017 elections, Ibobi was not allowed to enter Ukhrul.

One of the first announcements by the Biren government was upgradation of the village-level Shirui Festival to an extravaganza, sponsored by the Department of Tourism. On May 12, days before the festival, the CM tweeted: "I am going, are you?"

Change can only come gradually: Biren Singh

The significance was not lost on anyone, as Biren, a Meitei, donned Tangkhul Naga headgear for the festival inauguration, and spoke of the importance of communitarian bonds and equal development.

Over the next year, Biren made it a point to hold Cabinet meetings in hill districts. In May 2018, his hill-valley reconcilia-

Need women in politics, progress without bias, say first-time voters

ASAD REHMAN
AZAMGARH, MARCH 4

MINUTES BEFORE their 3 pm class, a group of girls walk up to a small room on the first floor of the Mirza Study Centre near the Shibli intersection in Azamgarh. All of them are second-year BSc students of the 19th Century Shibli National College — and first-time voters in the Azamgarh Assembly constituency, which votes in the last phase of the Uttar Pradesh elections on March 7.

The conversation veers round to the elections before settling on 'education' and 'development' — the two issues on which most of the students have an opinion.

"If the youth are educated, they can ensure a bright future for the country. Development will happen only if education is affordable for all," says Arisha Jamali, 19, who wants to become a teacher.

Her friend Sanubi Imtiaz, who hopes to become a doctor, adds the government should focus on healthcare. "All of us saw what happened during Covid. Our healthcare sector was completely exposed; it failed to save the lives of common people," she says.

Sanubi says it's important for the country to have women in politics. "The SP has done a lot for students but I disagree with Akhilesh Yadav's caste politics. In the future, if a better alternative emerges with a party led by a woman, I will change my preference. Between the AIMIM and BJP, Akhilesh seems to be a good middle ground for the state. He is neither staunchly Muslim, nor is he Hindutvawadi like the BJP. If he comes to power, he will ensure development for all. Just because I am Muslim, I can't just think of development only for Muslims. Development should reach everyone irrespective of caste and religion," she says.

It's on this count, they say, that the BJP government has fallen short. "The party is actively working to end secularism in the country. They only talk about Muslims. The CM says 'March 10 ke baad dekh lenge'. Then he talks about 80 vs 20. He is saying all this because he can't win an election without targeting the Muslim community," says Sadaf Siddiqui.

In the 2017 polls, the SP had won five out of 10 seats in Azamgarh, the BSP four and the BJP one seat. In 2012, SP won nine seats and the BSP won one.

This time the SP has fielded Durga Prasad Yadav, the eight-time MLA from Azamgarh Sadar, the constituency of which Shibli College is a part. The BSP's Sushil Kumar Singh and the Congress's Praveen Kumar Singh are both first-timers. The BJP has fielded Akhilesh Mishra, the runner-up in 2017 who lost to Durga Prasad Yadav by 26,262 votes.

Asked about the Congress's decision to reserve 40 per cent tickets for women, Aliza Raees, who wants to join politics, says, "I really like Priyanka Gandhi Vadra. But the Congress was late to arrive on the scene. How many times has Priyanka visited Azamgarh before the elections?"

As the conversation shifts to the hijab row, Arisha says, "The hijab is our personal choice and an essential part of our religion. How can we take it off because someone else has a problem? Will Yogiji stop wearing saffron clothes or will Modiji stop wearing his tika if we object to it? We won't and he shouldn't. That is his choice and this is ours."

Aliza says the BJP will not stop at the hijab. "They will keep finding new subjects to keep people busy and to shift the attention from development, inflation and unemployment."

Near Ram temple, even part of manifesto: coaching centres for naukri

SHYAMLAL YADAV
LUCKNOW, RAE BARELI, AYODHYA, MARCH 4

DEVOTEES LINING up for darshan of Ram lalla, and monkeys looking for a share of the offerings, are not the only ubiquitous sight around the Ram Janmaboomi at Ayodhya. So are students. Along the road leading to the site of the under-construction Ram temple are nearly a dozen coaching centres — the earthly portals to a more-accessible salvation, a government job.

Even the BJP realises this. In February 2021, the Yogi Adityanath government started the much-publicised Abhyudaya Coaching programme for government job aspirants. The party has promised in its Sankalp Patra (manifesto) this time that under the Abhyudaya Yojna, its government would provide free coaching for UPSC, UPPSC, NDA, CDS, JEE, NCERT, TET, CLAT and other competitive examinations. Across UP, coaching centres also prepare students for B.Ed as well as government jobs of Group-C and Group-D like revenue lekhpal, police constables, lower rank recruitment for the Army.

On February 25, 2022, the UP government's Directorate of Social Welfare held a review meeting of the scheme, where it was noted that "Abhyudaya Yojna was supposed to start in every district, but so far it has started in all districts of Moradabad division and all divisional headquarters". Officials were directed at this meeting to start the scheme in every district, sources told The Indian Express.

At 'Ayodhya Academy', Pushpendra Shukla is holding coaching for around a dozen aspirants on "one-day examinations" (recruitment involving a single test unlike Civil Services, for example). "The fact is there is so much competition that without proper coaching, it is almost impossible to clear an examination," Shukla says.

Ramesh Yadav, the owner of another coaching centre on the same road, Reewansh Classes, says: "Most of the students come to us from nearby districts and from very low strata of society,

At a coaching centre in Ayodhya. Shyam Lal Yadav

They have only their dreams with them. They even bring aata, dal, chawal from home and just spend a few thousand on room rent and coaching fees."

The large coaching centres based largely in cities and focusing on Civil Services charge nearly Rs 1 lakh to Rs 1.80 lakh a student per year. The small ones are happy with Rs 1,000 a month, for coaching in "one day examinations". For TET, B.Ed entrance and other exams, they offer packages of a few months. Most of the teachers are either those who are unsuccessful after several tries in such examinations or are regular teachers, hired from nearby institutions.

Vijay Singh of Dhyeya IAS Academy, which has its centres in cities such as Lucknow, Prayagraj and Gorakhpur, says: "We are doing a job which our universities and colleges should do. If they did their job properly, no coaching would be needed. Universities are giving just degrees, we are giving what students need to get a job."

Chand Ahmad, who runs Shree Gurudev Institute in Rae Bareilly, says: "Most of our students are aspirants for TET (Teacher Eligibility Test) and Super-TET." They include Vartika Singh, who says that for women like her, "Teaching is the safest job."

Institutes also offer coaching in 'Personality Test' for Civil Services examination, like Vijay Pandey's at Prayagraj. He says following the Covid lockdown and job losses, there is a leap in demand for government employment.

Ankush Singh, 19, enrolled at an Ayodhya centre for coaching for Staff Selection Commission exams, says he dropped out of graduation to prepare for the entrance. One among four siblings, Ankush belongs to Dhanauli in Gonda district, 42 km away. His stay in Ayodhya costs Rs 4,000 a month, a steep price for his farmer father, with no one in the family in a job.

"It is easy to say start a venture. I don't have money... A naukri is the only hope for me. I have come here after I gave up hope for Army recruitment."

Haryana Bill tabled to stop 'forcible' conversion

Opposition terms proposed law 'divisive', Congress MLA suspended for tearing Bill's copy during House session

VARINDERBHATIA
CHANDIGARH, MARCH 4

THE HARYANA government Friday introduced a Bill in the Assembly to prevent religious conversion "through force, undue influence or allurement", triggering vociferous opposition from the Congress, which said it was a bid to divide communities.

Speaker Gian Chand Gupta suspended Congress MLA Raghuvir Singh Kadian for the remaining sittings of the Budget session for tearing a copy of the Bill. Other members of the Congress staged a walkout against Kadian's suspension.

According to the Haryana Prevention of Unlawful Conversion of Religion Bill, 2022, the onus of proof lies with the accused. If conversion is done by allurement, use of force, fraudulent means or coercion, then there is a provision for imprisonment of one to five years and a fine of not less than Rs 1 lakh.

Similar Bills in the recent past have been passed in the BJP-ruled states, including Himachal Pradesh and Uttar Pradesh.

Introducing the Bill, Home Minister Anil Vij targeted the Congress over the country's partition on the basis of religion and the 1984 anti-Sikh riots, sparking protests by the Opposition with Kadian alleging that it reflects the intention of "divisive policies" and demanded that it be sent to a select committee. Other Congress MLAs, including BB Batra, Geeta Bhukkal, too termed the Bill an attempt by the BJP government to "create a divide" between Hindus and Muslims.

CM Manohar Lal Khattar intervened saying there was no mention of any religion in the Bill. He said the Bill does not discriminate against any religion and deals only with forcible conversions. Pointing to the Opposition legislators, the CM added: "All the people sitting on these benches can get their religion converted to whichever one they want to."

Khattar's remark was strongly opposed by the Congress members. He later took back his statement.

Kadian tore the copy of the Bill, prompting the Speaker to admonish the Congress legislator for violating the decorum and dignity of the House. Gupta asked Kadian to either tender an apology or face action. Refusing, Kadian justified his act and said that he had barely torn off the "piece of paper". The Speaker, however, objected to Kadian's assertions and contended: "Once a Bill has been introduced on the floor of the House, it becomes a constitutionally legal document".

Despite repeated warnings by the Speaker, Kadian refused to apologise. While the Speaker attempted to restore order of the House, Congress legislators continued their protests, terming the Bill "unconstitutional".

With the proceedings descending into more chaos, Speaker Gupta called in the Marshals to remove Kadian from the House. The MLA was eventually suspended for the remaining sittings of the Budget Session.

Khattar later told reporters that Kadian violated the decorum and dignity of the House.

PM's 'Hindu dharam ki raksha' remark a lie: Rahul in Varanasi

MAULSHREE SETH
LUCKNOW, MARCH 4

TAKING PART in a roadshow in Prime Minister Narendra Modi's constituency Varanasi on Friday, Congress leader Rahul Gandhi said the PM "protects his lies" and not the "Hindu dharam" as he claims. He also mocked at the Prime Minister, saying that he (PM) could not "stand in Ganga properly" even though he "claimed to have fought a crocodile as a child".

Rahul attempted to strike a chord with the voters by invoking his family's link with Uttar Pradesh and its people. "Hum bhi UP ke hain, hamara pariwar bhi Allahabad ka hai... Modiji kehete hain hum videshi hain (We are also from UP, out family is also from Allahabad, PM Modi says we are foreigners)," Rahul said while campaigning for Congress candidate Ajay Rai in Pindra Assembly constituency.

He was accompanied by AICC general secretary Priyanka Gandhi Vadra. Both leaders also paid obeisance at the Kashi Vishwanath temple.

"Priyanka said that votes are cast in the name of religion... you tell me what is Hindu dharma... truth it is," he said. "Modiji comes, tells lies and then claims what he does to protect the Hindu religion, but the fact is that he only protects his lies. He does not protect the poor, farmers or labourers, but only his lies to save his chair," Rahul said. He also listed out the promises and announcements made by the Prime Minister that never materialised. He also targeted the Samajwadi Party with which the Congress was in alliance in the 2017 polls, alleging "goonda gardi in police stations" during its rule in the state. Rahul termed the Bahujan Samaj Party as the "B team" of the BJP, adding that the party is "finished".

NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

ADDITIONAL SOLICITOR General Aman Lekhi, who represents the central government in several key cases involving law and order, resigned from his post on Friday.

EXPLAINED
Renovation also covered under draft

THE NEW environment regulations for buildings will be applicable on new constructions with a built-up area of 5,000 sqm or more. They will also apply for renovation or repair. The draft notification of the regulations mandates at least 10% of the plot area under tree cover and makes rainwater harvesting or ground-water recharge systems, and wastewater treatment plants compulsory.

Projects will now also need to put in place dual plumbing systems—one for fresh water (drinking, cooking and bathing) and another for treated water for flushing, landscape, fire-fighting, etc. For projects above 20,000 square metres, the project proponent will also need to ensure onsite solid waste management facilities.

DURING PARLIAMENT sessions, they stand out for their blazing oratory against the ruling dispensation. On Friday, it came to light that due to their apparent similar looks, people often confuse their identities. "Even we fail to understand why people find it so confusing," AAP Rajya Sabha MP Sanjay Singh shared on Twitter, tagging RJD MP Manoj Jha. Singh said SP MP Jaya Bachchan calls him Manoj, who in turn gets called as Sanjay by her. Deep friendship should be such that people fail to distinguish between them, Singh added, responding to a social media post.

WORD PLAY

A SUPREME Court bench headed by Chief Justice of India N V Ramana on Friday told a lawyer who had filed a PIL over the Ukraine situation that it had come to their notice that he keeps filing such petitions and that many of them were dismissed earlier with cost. Reading out from his petition, the CJ said, "It is unfortunate that he has not even corrected the SLP Paperbook." He also pointed out that in the prayer portion of the plea, the lawyer says issue direction to the Centre to take immediate diplomatic steps for the "escalation of the stranded...". Pausing, the CJ wondered whether "escalation" was the appropriate term. Justice Hima Kohli said, "It's the wrong word". Putting up a brave face, the lawyer said, "Escalation word I used from escalator which means a moving ladder. So it means to lift them up from that country." Attorney General KK Venugopal then intervened to say, "Actually evacuation."

WOMEN POWER

FOLLOWING THE accolades that their women bikers received during the recent Republic Day parade, the BSF is sending 36 of its women bikers on an over 5,000-km-long tour across the country. The 20-day tour beginning on March 8, International Women's Day, will kickstart from Delhi to eventually reach Chennai via Rajasthan, Gujarat, Hyderabad, Bengaluru and Kanyakumari. BSF DG Pankaj Singh on Friday said the idea behind the tour was to inspire women across the country to achieve greater heights. He also said that the women were offered a team of men to accompany them, but they refused.

Govt notification proposes 10% tree cover at construction sites, seeks views

ESHA ROY
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE CENTRE has proposed at least one tree for every 80 square metres of land at sites meant for residential and commercial construction projects, ensuring that at least 10% of the plot area is under tree cover.

The draft notification of the Building Construction Environment Management Regulations-2022 was issued by the Ministry of Environment, Forests and Climate Change on February 28, and has now invited suggestions and objections over the next two months, before the final regulations are issued.

The notification further says that the topsoil should be stripped only up to a maximum depth of 20cm from the areas proposed for buildings, roads, paved areas, and external services. It should be stockpiled appropriately in designated areas and reapplied during the plantation of the proposed vegetation on the site.

The Environment Ministry had constituted an Expert Committee in January 2021 to examine and recommend regulations for buildings and township projects.

The draft notification says that for effective environment protection and management "it is considered necessary to put in place standardised, outcome-based and quantifiable environmental regulations so as to bring in transparency in approach and encourage ease of doing business".

The ministry has also said that it is necessary to expand the monitoring mechanism through third party audits.

The ministry has pointed out that the regulations "do not substitute approvals/consent/permissions etc, required to be obtained under any other Act/rule/regulation/bye-laws/notification etc".

The notification adds that in case of any inconsistency with any other regulations, bylaws, etc., the provisions that are more stringent will apply. Apart from the mandatory green cover, the ministry has made certain other regulations, without which the project proponent will not be able to obtain completion certificates or hand over occupancy to residents.

No construction will be allowed on wetland and water bodies, and rainwater harvesting or groundwater recharge systems will need to be ensured. No groundwater shall be used during construction phase of the project without the approval of the Central Ground Water Authority,

KCR govt does away with Governor's address to House

SREENIVAS JANYALA & ABHISHEK ANGAD
HYDERABAD, RANCHI, MARCH 4

AS TELANGANA Chief Minister K Chandrashekar Rao on Friday reached out to the JMM as part of his efforts to form an anti-BJP alliance, his government has decided to do away with the Governor's address to the joint sitting of legislature for the Budget Session, which starts on March 7.

While it is the tradition for the Budget Session to begin with the Governor's address, the government decided to skip it saying that the previous Monsoon Session was not prorogued so there was no need for Governor's address.

"The Monsoon Session was held from September 24 to October 8 and it was not prorogued. The House was adjourned sine die and the Governor did not issue the prorogue notification so the House will continue from there," Legislative Affairs Minister V Prashant Reddy said.

Targeting Rao, state BJP chief Bandi Sanjay Kumar said it was insult to the Governor, and that the Chief Minister, who talked of rewriting the Constitution, has started doing so. Governor Tamilisai Soundararajan's office is yet to comment on the matter.

The development comes even as Rao on Friday wrapped up his visit to Delhi and Jharkhand, where he continued with his efforts to forge an alliance with regional powers.

After camping for three days in Delhi, where he met Rajya Sabha MP Subramanian Swamy and farmer leader Rakesh Tikait, Rao on Friday visited Jharkhand to meet Chief Minister Hemant Soren and Jharkhand Mukti Morcha patriarch Shibu Soren.

Addressing a press meet in Ranchi, Rao said Shibu Soren was the first guest invited for the launch of the protest to demand separate statehood for Telangana in 2001. He recalled that Soren had come and given courage to the people. Rao said that during their meeting on Friday he took Soren's blessings. "And we spoke on politics too and I informed him that there is a talk going on in the entire country with different leaders."

"I want to say that 75 years after independence, development in the country is not up to the mark. We remained backward in many parameters as compared to the world. China has developed and other countries too. And today, too, the government is not doing its work properly. It has to be corrected, we spoke on this," he said.

Rao said he is talking with various leaders and they will meet and decide the agenda.

Rao had earlier reached out to Maharashtra Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray and Tamil Nadu counterpart M K Stalin. He is expected to meet West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee soon. He is also in touch with JD(S) leader H D Deve Gowda and RJD leader Lalu Prasad.

Sources in the TRS said Rao is seeking opinion of regional party leaders on formation of the alternative front. The leaders have requested him to wait till poll results of the five states are announced before holding further talks.

Rao also met families of two soldiers - Kundan Kumar and Ganesh Hansda - who were killed in the Galwan Valley clash in May 2020. He gave cheques of Rs 10 lakh to each family.

‘Was nearly impossible to leave...we were scared we would die’

ABHINAYA HARIGOVIND
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

SPENDING DAYS in crowded bunkers with little or no food, walking for kilometres in sub-zero temperatures as they struggled to catch trains out of Kharkiv, waiting for hours at the borders — for Indian students who returned to Delhi from the war-ravaged city of Kharkiv in eastern Ukraine on Friday, travelling across the country to western Ukraine, and crossing the borders into Poland and Hungary, was a journey they found to be near impossible.

Priyanka Goyal, a fourth-year student at the Kharkiv National Medical University, said she left the city, with a few others, on March 1, a day before the Indian Embassy advised all Indian nationals in Kharkiv to leave immediately. “We left on our own, and knew that we had to take care of ourselves. After a 24-hour train journey, we reached Lviv,” she said. Lviv is in the western part of the country.

“The temperature was -5 degrees Celsius, and we had to wait at Lviv for a bus for about 5-6 hours. It was crowded and buses were difficult to find,” said Priyanka, who finally made it to the border with Hungary.

“The embassy issued an advisory. I understand it must have been difficult for them too, but expecting us to travel from the east to the west... It was nearly impossible to leave,” said Priyanka, who is from Kaithal, Haryana, and arrived on an evacuation flight from Budapest.

Shubh Madan, a third-year student in Kharkiv, who is from Moga, Punjab, arrived from Rzeszow in Poland on Friday morning. Shubh said she stayed at a metro station for two days, before the city was attacked. “When the city was attacked, the metro station was closed and we had to move to a bunker. The bunkers are crowded and suffocating. We left on Tuesday morning, walking around 7 km to reach the railway station, since cabs were either difficult to find or expensive. When we were at the railway station, we heard the bombardment outside. We were scared that we would die at the station,” she said.

She said the group of 40-50 students she travelled with took a train to Lviv from Kharkiv. “We somehow arranged a bus on our own from Lviv to the border with Poland. We reached the border at 1 pm, but our turn to cross over came only at around 7 pm. They were letting only 30 to 40 people pass at a time, and they gave priority to people with Ukrainian passports. When our turn came, we waited another four hours for the immigration process,” she said.

Both Priyanka and Shubh said their problems eased after crossing the border. “We were taken to a hotel about 125 km from the border. Mattresses and food were made available, and registrations were done for evacuation flights,” Shubh said.

Anirudh, a second-year student at the Kharkiv National Medical University, also arrived from Poland. “We spent a few days in a bunker, and went two days without food. Our friends are still in Kharkiv... The train journey from Kharkiv to Lviv, which would normally take 11 hours, took 24 hours. Trains were all running slowly, with their lights off. There was no help in the war zone. However, once we crossed the Poland border, we were received very well,” said Anirudh, who is from Saharanpur.

For Govind, a fifth-year student in Odessa, in the southern part of the country, crossing the border into Hungary was a grueling process that took days. “I took the train from Odessa on February 26, and reached the border, but was not able to cross. I spent three to four days at the border, on the street with my luggage,” he said. Though a curfew had been imposed in Odessa, the situation was not as bad as it is in Kharkiv, he said.

According to a PTI report, the Civil Aviation Ministry said in a statement that 14 civilian and three IAF flights brought back 3,772 Indians on Friday. “One more civilian flight is expected to arrive later in the day (Friday),” it said.

BJP MLA says ‘body takes more space’; Cong slams ‘cruelty’

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
BENGALURU, NEW DELHI, MAR 4

KARNATAKA BJP MLA Aravind Bellad has kicked up a controversy with his remarks on bringing back the body of the Indian student killed in Ukraine, saying a body “takes more space” which could instead be utilised to airlift stranded people. Bellad’s comments drew a sharp reaction from Congress, which said cruelty and insensitivity are now BJP’s DNA.

Naveen Shekarappa Gyanagouda, 22, a native of Chalageri in Karnataka’s Haveri district, was killed in shelling in Kharkiv on March 1 after he stepped out of a bunker to buy groceries. The body is lying in a morgue in Kharkiv. Naveen’s parents have requested the Centre to get the body back for the final rites.

Underlining that the Centre and the Karnataka government are making every effort to bring Naveen’s body from Kharkiv, Bellad, MLA from Hubballi Dharwad West, said the place where the body is kept is a war zone and it is difficult to transport it to India under current circumstances. “It is a war zone. You (the media) are all showing the ground situation.... The body will be brought once the flight services become operational,” Bellad said on Thursday. “In a situation when bringing the living people is proving to be difficult, it will be even more difficult to bring the body because it occupies more space. In place of it, 10 to 12 people can be brought.”

“Drunk with arrogance, power has gone into the head of heartless BJP leaders, particularly from Karnataka. (Union minister) Prahlad Joshi calls children in Ukraine as those ‘who failed NEET’. Arvind Bellad has lost his balance. Insensitivity and cruelty are now BJP’s DNA.” Congress chief spokesperson Randeep Surjewala tweeted.

Rahul Gandhi accused the government of “cruelty and failure” in getting back Indian students. He also shared a video showing how Indians stuck in Ukraine were being harassed and were collecting snow for using it to drink water. “Instead of questioning Indian students, why doesn’t the Modi government question itself? The students trapped in the crisis have shown the truth of government’s cruelty and failure,” Rahul said while sharing the video.

Medical students home, but their future still clouded by uncertainty

KAUNAIN SHERIFF M
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

WITH THOUSANDS of medical students returning to India from war-torn Ukraine, there is a certain level of uncertainty over the completion of their course. Currently, the Centre has no plan to make special relaxations so that the students can complete their MBBS degree without prolonging the course’s duration, The Indian Express has learnt.

Well-placed government sources said going by the statutory regulations applicable on medical students graduating from foreign universities, there is a buffer of around two years to complete the course. “Hence, the students returning from Ukraine have little to worry about as of now,” sources cited above said. India is currently carrying out Operation Ganga to bring back its citizens, mainly medical students, stranded in Ukraine. The Ministry of External Affairs on Thursday said that the number of people who have left Ukraine since advisories for evacuation were issued stood at nearly 18,000.

The National Medical Commission (NMC) does not recognise or approve medical courses completed through on-line mode. According to its statutory regulations, a medical course from a foreign university has to be completed within 10 years from the date of enrolment.

Also, the regulations don’t allow such students’ migration to a medical college in India for internships or examination. The regulations clearly state that the “MBBS course, training, and internship throughout the course should be done from the same foreign medical institution”.

For the medical graduates, the regulations mandate completion of a supervised 12-month internship in India.

Sources said at this juncture, there is no proposal to make changes to any of the rules for medical students returning from Ukraine because they have sufficient time to complete the course.

“The MBBS course in Ukraine takes five-and-a-half years. A student has to complete a 12-month internship in Ukraine and a similar one in India. So, a student normally completes the degree in 7.5 years. Hence, the final year students still have buffer of two years,” sources said.

Significantly, a large number of international students, including those from India, couldn’t return to China to continue their MBBS degree due to the Covid-19 restrictions imposed there. Chinese authorities had conveyed earlier that the course will be completed online. However, on February 8, the NMC objected to this, reiterating that the regulator does not recognise or approve online mode for medical education.

Indian trying to flee Kyiv in cab injured in shooting

ANAND MOHAN J
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

A 30-YEAR-OLD Indian pursuing a language course at a university in Kyiv suffered bullet injuries while trying to flee the war-torn Ukrainian capital in a cab, his family members said on Friday.

Harjot Singh sustained bullet injuries in his leg and chest and is recuperating at Kyiv City Hospital, they said, and pleaded with the Indian authorities to help him evacuate from Ukraine.

“He is really scared and the constant shelling in the city has made things worse. He fears a strike at the hospital will kill him. I plead with Russia and Ukraine to please stop this war. Help the students leave the country,”

Harjot’s father Kesar Singh, 66, told The Indian Express.

He said the family, which lives in south Delhi’s Chattarpur area, has been in touch with Harjot daily through video calls.

According to the family, Harjot, a first-year student at International European University, was fired upon on February 27. He had booked a cab to Lviv for US $1,000 along with three other foreign students after local authorities allegedly did not allow him to board a train out of Kyiv, his family members said.

They shared a text message Harjot sent from hospital: “I was going to Lviv city by car in Ukraine. But in the middle of the way, I was attacked and I was shot at. The ambulance brought me to the hospital. Now I am in Kyiv city. About 20 minutes away from the Indian embassy, I want you (to) help.”

In a video interview to news agency ANI, Harjot said the cab crossed two checkpoints on the way but at the third checkpoint they were stopped and asked to return the next day. “We returned from there as the local authorities cited security reasons. As I reached Kyiv city, a bullet whizzed past the car window. We all... ducked inside the car. Three-four people were firing at us continuously from the front and other people from the roof of a building. They had AK-47s,” Harjot said.

He said after the firing stopped, he opened the car door and lay on the ground before falling unconscious. “Two bullets hit me in my left knee. Another bullet ripped through my right leg. Another bullet entered my chest from the shoulder area,” he said. When he regained consciousness in hospital, he said, “The doctors told me that I was lying on the street for 3 or 4 hours. I had lost a lot of blood.”

Harjot pleaded with the Indian authorities to help evacuate him. “This is a new life. I want to go back to India and spend this new life with my family. I tried to contact the embassy but they have already moved on from there to Lviv. I have not got any support till now. The authorities keep telling me they will do something. Trying and doing are two separate things.”

His family told The Indian Express there was no word on Harjot for four days after he was shot at. “For four days, we looked into Harjot’s social media accounts and found out all his friends. We made contact with each of them. Then we stayed glued to the news for days waiting for a word on him. We were told that no Indian student has been left behind in Kyiv, but my brother and several other students are stuck in the city,” said his elder brother Prabhjot Singh.

Harjot finally managed to contact his family after his doctor helped with the phone call.

“My son should not have been caught in this situation. We feel so helpless,” said Parkash Kaur, 58, of her youngest of three children. “The government is asking the students to find their way to the border areas. How will they leave a war zone?”

Stuck in Sumy, hope fading fast: ‘We had to boil ice to get water — even for drinking’

JAYPRAKASH S NAIDU
MUMBAI, MARCH 4

“WE HAVE given up on all hope of being rescued. At times, I feel the Indian government is giving us false hopes — the Indian Embassy tells us they will rescue us but has not given us a time-frame. I feel hopeless.... After yesterday’s blast, water supply got discontinued in different parts of Sumy, including our college hostel. We boiled ice to get water — even for drinking,”

Mayuri Aher, a student stranded in Sumy, in northeast Ukraine, said Friday night.

Aher told The Indian Express that the embassy has stopped taking their calls: “The health of some students with underlying conditions is getting affected.”

More than 800 medical students of Sumy university, meanwhile, made a desperate appeal to the government and Prime Minister Narendra Modi, pleading to be rescued from the war-torn region — or, they said, they will be “killed”.

In the video, one student, Mehtab, said: “There are about 800 students in different hostels in the college. There was a huge blast yesterday night after which water supply got discontinued. We have been hungry and thirsty since last night. No food...no water is left to drink. We cannot self-evacuate and need the intervention of the Indian government. There are people roaming outside with firearms; there could be an air attack or firing if we try to leave on our own.”

In sub-zero temperature, Mehtab said in the video, “we cannot leave from the western border, as we will have to pass through Kyiv or Kharkiv, which are under attack. We have heard news of people being attacked while trying to escape from Kyiv and Kharkiv; we have heard buses are arranged for us at the Russian border, which is nearby, but we cannot reach there. We need the government to escort us.”

Another video showed students accumulating ice in bags and collecting drops of icy water falling off trees for drinking.

Back in Mumbai, a group of students who escaped from Kyiv and Kharkiv on March 1 and took a flight from Hungary, said they saw rockets flying over their heads and explosions from their apartment windows. They appealed to the government to rescue thousands of hundreds still stuck in eastern Ukraine.

Raminder Pal Singh, 23, from Chandigarh, a fifth-year medical student in Kyiv, said the Indian government did not help in their evacuation in Kyiv. “Help came only after we reached the border,” Singh said. “Many are still stuck in Kyiv; I request the government to rescue them. I was lucky that I am able to speak Russian, which helped me communicate with Ukrainians.”

After waiting 12 hours at Kyiv railway station, Singh said, an official there helped his group get on to a train out of Kyiv on March 1. Initially, he said, they were not allowed to board the train, as local residents got preference.

SC pat for govt evacuation efforts, but ‘concerned about those stuck’

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

APPRECIATING THE government’s efforts in evacuating Indians from Ukraine, the Supreme Court on Friday said it is at the same time “concerned about the anxiety” of students there and asked the Centre to consider setting up an “online helpline” to help parents and families of those stranded.

Hearing petitions seeking evacuation of students from the war zone, Chief Justice of India NV Ramana referred to the ongoing rescue efforts and said, “We are not saying anything about the efforts which you are taking. We appreciate that... But at the same time, we are also concerned about the anxiety of the children.”

Conveying his disillusionment over the developments in Ukraine, the CJI said, “It’s unfortunate we haven’t learnt from past situations of wars, etc. We don’t have much say in this. But the anxiety is about students.”

The bench, also comprising Justices A S Bopanna and Hima Kohli, told Attorney General K K Venugopal, who represented the government, that “you can keep an online helpline or something so the parents and families must know where they are, and what is the position and all”. The court pointed out that “some state governments are doing at state bhawans. They are trying to contact children and trying to get...back (those stranded)”.

Leaving it to the government to take a call, the bench said, “You work out something...we won’t pass any orders. We will keep the matter”.

Assuring the court that the suggestion will be looked into, Venugopal said that “the government of India is as concerned as your Lordships” about the students.

On Thursday, the court had referred a plea by a medical student — Fathima Ahana from Bengaluru, who said she and several others were stuck on the Ukraine side of the border with Romania, as they were not being allowed to cross over into Romania — to the A-G and asked him to see whether he can use his good offices to render any help.

On Friday, Venugopal told the bench: “The concern was communicated to Shri P K Mishra (Prime Minister’s Principal Secretary). He communicated that to Shri Scindia (Civil Aviation Minister Jyotiraditya Scindia), the person in charge in Romania, and the telephone number of Fatima Ahana was also given...She is now in Romania. I expect that she and the persons accompanying her — the other college students — will come back by tonight.” The bench thanked him for taking personal interest in the matter.

BECAUSE THE TRUTH INVOLVES US ALL

COST OF WAR

From inflation to growth, navigating the economic environment in shadow of Russian invasion is a task cut out

THE MACROECONOMIC ENVIRONMENT has changed considerably from the time Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman presented the Union budget, and the RBI released its inflation forecast for the upcoming fiscal year. On Thursday, crude oil prices hovered around $120 a barrel for the first time in years. While prices have moderated mildly thereafter, for the Indian economy which imports around 80 per cent of its requirements, higher crude oil prices will have adverse consequences. Higher prices will impact growth, will be inflationary, and will exert upward pressure on the current account and fiscal deficit. Considering that crude oil prices are currently significantly higher than those factored in the Union budget and the RBI's calculations, navigating this uncertain economic environment will require deft management by monetary and fiscal authorities.

Since November last year, when the price of the Indian crude oil basket stood at $80.64, oil marketing companies have refrained from revising pump prices, even though global prices have been on the rise. But, once the assembly elections are concluded, fuel prices at the pump are likely to be hiked. However, steep hikes will be needed — as per a report by ICICI securities, a Rs 12 per litre hike will be needed just to break even. This will be inflationary. Needless to say, fuel price hikes will upend the central bank's optimistic assessment of the inflation trajectory. As per RBI's recent assessment, inflation was expected to trend down from 5.7 per cent in the fourth quarter of 2021-22 to just under 5 per cent in the first half of 2022-23. This will complicate the choices before the monetary policy committee. Higher prices will also reduce discretionary spending by households. Governments may respond by lowering fuel taxes to absorb part of the burden. However, this will weigh down their revenues and spending. Thus, growth will thus take a hit. Higher oil prices will also push up imports, increasing the current account deficit at a time when global financial conditions are tightening. Recent data shows that the merchandise trade deficit has already widened to $21.2 billion in February, up from $17.9 billion, with much of the surge driven by oil. The rupee is already coming under pressure. This will only add to the inflationary pressures.

The indirect consequences of the deterioration in the economic environment are also beginning to show. There are reports that LIC's initial public offering may be postponed to the next financial year due to prevailing market uncertainty. While the full effects of the oil price shock will be visible with a lag, when taken together with the third wave of the pandemic, it suggests further downside risks to economic growth in the fourth quarter, which as per the National Statistical Office's latest estimate was already expected to slow down to 4.8 per cent from 5.4 per cent in the previous quarter.

ON THE WRONG FOOT

Breach of propriety, conflict of interests have defined Sourav Ganguly's stint as BCCI chief. He must course correct or quit

WHEN SOURAV GANGULY became the president of the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) in 2019, an understandable breeze of optimism wafted in. It was felt that finally a player was in charge, that too a legendary one, and he would clean up the mess that had dragged Indian cricket into the high-ceiling offices of the Supreme Court. It turns out this was a naive urge as Ganguly has arguably outdone some of the old cynical non-player-administrators. Especially, as he had stepped in post the judicial intervention, and was expected to at least uphold the court's order and recommendations. The latest overstep, as reported by this newspaper, was how he "bullied" other selectors by going against the BCCI constitution and sat in their meetings. And that's one of his milder offences.

Ganguly has systematically undermined institutions, been brazen about conflict of interests, allegedly promised players stuff that he has no right to (the wicketkeeper Wriddhiman Saha claimed Ganguly promised him he will be in team), and generally acted as if he was a Maharaja accountable to none and not a paid office bearer of Indian cricket. Ganguly, by then president of the BCCI, was also director of ATK Mohun Bagan when Sanjiv Goenka's RPSG Group, which owns that football franchise, successfully bid for the new IPL team based out of Lucknow. He was the brand ambassador of the fantasy gaming app My Circle 11 when they announced a three-year title sponsorship deal with the Lucknow franchise and all this when a rival fantasy gaming app was the official kit sponsor of the Indian team. Couple of years ago, he instagrammed his photo clad in a JSW Cement T-shirt with tagline "at work"; JSW Sports, the sports arm of the business conglomerate JSW Group, is a joint owner of the IPL franchise Delhi Capitals.

When a news agency questioned him about his latest breach of selectorial independence, he said: "I have played 424 international matches for India." The response suggests he believes that his record as a player allows him the privilege to abuse power, disregard rules, and ignore conflict of interests. When he was named president of the BCCI, he was expected to clear the mess left behind by the IPL spot-fixing saga and cleanse Indian cricket. Instead he has been "at work" for himself. The sad fallout of l'affaire Ganguly is that the trust in players to offer administration with a difference has quickly evaporated, revealing a broken system.

#OSCARSSOOLD

By turning to a Twitter poll to stay relevant, Academy Awards show just how out of touch they are

There is a saying in Bengali that fits well the sad, desperate attempts to make the Oscars popular by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. "Shingh khule bachhur er dole" translates into a "[a bull] taking off its horns and pretending to be a calf". The #OscarsFanFavourite gimmick asks for votes on Twitter for a film that, in all likelihood, would not make the list of nominees selected by the Academy. In doing so, it tries to present as something new a concept that is already passe: An ageing bull, when it tries to be a calf, only brings more attention to how out of touch it is.

Over the last few years, the Oscars have been criticised on multiple fronts. First, there was #OscarsSoWhite, then a furor over a comedian host's jokes on social media from a decade ago (that year, there was no host and the show suffered for it). All the while, viewership for the awards show — at one point one of the most-watched television events in the world — has been rapidly declining. This year, in addition to going to the hunting ground for trolls to select an awardee, awards for some categories — including Editing and Original Score — will not be telecast live. Both ideas are counterproductive.

Spiderman: No Way Home, the biggest grossing Hollywood film of the year, does not need the critical recognition the Oscars provide. The awards' purpose — in the best interpretation — is to recognise good cinema and those that make it possible in the world's richest film industry. The People's Choice Awards have been around for decades: They do not pretend to judge art, only popularity. And anyone who knows films will tell you, editors are as important as cinematographers and directors. What the Oscars should do to stay relevant is focus more on films and stories that rise to the level of art, in more diverse settings. By starting popularity contests, they are reduced to just another tweet.

Putin's delusion

In pursuing imperial ambition, Russian president underestimated Ukrainian national consciousness

ASHUTOSH VARSHNEY

JUST WHAT DOES Putin's invasion of Ukraine signify? How do we understand Putin's objectives and motivations?

Let us begin with what the invasion is not about. It is not about the reconstitution of the Soviet Union, which disintegrated after seven decades in 1991. Putin's hour-long speech on February 24, which laid out the rationale for war, was severely critical of the Communist handling of Ukraine, which he called "Vladimir Lenin's Ukraine". Indeed, his critique of Communism was larger. As is widely known, the Soviet Constitution granted the right to secede to the 15 constituent republics of the USSR. Lenin's assumption was that nationalism flourished if nationhood was denied. By recognising the languages and cultures of 15 national groups — from the Estonians on the northwestern tip all the way down to the Uzbeks on the southeastern flank — the Soviet Union would end up extinguishing internal nationalisms. All 15 nations would make a transition to a higher state of human consciousness. They would be Communist/Soviet. If you are no longer national, why would you secede from the Soviet Union?

In his speech, Putin called this theory an "odious and Utopian fantasy inspired by the Communist revolution". Indeed, exercising the right to secede in 1991, all 15 republics of the Soviet Union did become independent nations. Lenin and the Communists, said Putin, were wrong about nationalism, whose "virus" still persists.

What should then Moscow do, if not rebuild the Soviet Union? Using the various speeches of Putin, scholars of Russia point to his frequent citation of the concept of "Russky Mir", translated as "Russian World". A non-literal, but more appropriate, translation would be a Russian imperium, consisting of Ukraine, Belarus and Russia. Belarus has already accepted Russian hegemony, but having less than 10 million people, it is small. With a population of more than 40 million and having a land-mass second only to Russia in Eurasia, Ukraine is infinitely more significant. In the words of Lilia Shevtsova, a scholar of the region, Ukraine is "a star in the Russian galaxy", accounting for what she calls "Russia's Ukraine obsession".

In the February 24 speech and his widely noted 5000-word essay "On the Historical Unity of Russians and Ukrainians", published by the Kremlin on July 12, 2021, Putin offered three arguments about Ukraine.

First, Ukraine is an "inalienable part of our history, culture and spiritual space". Only during 1918-21 and, then, for a mere three decades after 1991 has Ukraine been independent. In contrast, he said, Ukrainians have called themselves Russians for centuries and have also been Orthodox Christians, thus sharing their religion with Russia. Their statehood was "never stable". They were historically an integral part of Russia.

Second, Ukraine's new leaders are "building their statehood on the negation of everything that historically united us", in the process "distorting the mentality and historical memory of millions of people". In the creation of pro-Western, anti-Russian attitudes, the political leaders have been systematically helped by Ukraine's oligarchs, who have "stolen billions of dollars from the people and kept them in Western banks". Ukraine's move towards Europe and the West is thus a conspiracy hatched by the political elites and oligarchs, going against the historical truths and violating the honest sentiments of Ukrainian masses.

Third, Ukraine's gravitation towards the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), argues Putin, poses a grave security threat to Russia. It is a two-headed threat. If NATO admits Ukraine as a member, an anti-Russian, US-led security umbrella will reach the doorsteps of Russia. Moreover, Ukraine used to host Soviet-era nuclear weapons before giving them up in 1994. The know-how, says Putin, has not disappeared and Ukraine can easily develop its own tactical nuclear weapons capable of hitting Russia, an argument the scholars of nuclear weapons find wholly false. Nuclear weapons require much more than technical knowhow.

Essentially, these three arguments boil down to one foundational claim — Ukraine cannot have an independent state because it was historically part of Russia. Any attempt at expression of independence, or Ukraine's Western desire, must be militarily crushed.

Longstanding nationalism theory tells us why this argument is deeply flawed, apart from being profoundly dangerous if accompanied with military action. Over the last four decades, Benedict Anderson's Imagined Communities has become the most authoritative text on nations and nationalism. Anderson has persuaded the scholarly world that nations were bom only after the 18th century. They are modern political constructs. Indeed, most nations were born in the 19th and 20th century. Earlier polities took two forms, both non-national: empires or city-states. There was no Russian nation before the modern times, only a Russian empire.

Leaving this conceptual reasoning aside, the absurdity of Putin's argument can be more concretely illustrated if we draw a South Asian comparison. We know that there was no Pakistan before 1947, and no Bangladesh before 1971. Both were, historically, parts of India, and they even speak languages also spoken in India. Such conditions, however, neither mean that India can legitimately claim them as its own today, nor that they must be brought back into an Akhand Bharat (undivided India) with military means. As history progressed, both Pakistan and Bangladesh emerged from the development of national consciousness, became nations in their own right, evolved statehood reflecting that consciousness, and received international recognition for their sovereignty.

With over 92 per cent vote in favour of independence, Ukraine opted overwhelmingly for a break-up from the Soviet Union in 1991, and other than in some small parts, especially on its eastern borders, there is no evidence of a popular desire to re-unite with Russia. It is also now providing one of the ultimate tests of national resolve and consciousness. Ready to sacrifice their lives, citizens are turning into street soldiers, mounting an impressive resistance against the Russian armed forces. The emergence of citizen soldiers, aiding professional soldiers, reflects a highly developed form of national consciousness.

Putin might have expected that Ukrainians would welcome the Russian armed forces with open arms, or view them as liberators from an illegitimate elite wrongly taking them down the disloyal Western path. But what we are witnessing today is a full-blown national rebellion against a mighty neighbour bent upon bullying and subjugating.

History tells us that these conditions lead to lasting conflict. Ukraine will be no exception. Devastation and resistance are likely to continue.

DREAMS OF WORDLE

The reveries and reflections after a five-letter victory

JANAKI SRINIVASAN

THIS CANNOT BE the word. My head kept refusing what seemed the only possibility even as I tried all other combinations out of the yellow and unused letters on the keypad. I am talking about Wordle. Eventually, frustrated at the non-words I was making at 6 am, since it has become the first thing I do every morning, I punched in RUPEE. Voila! The tiles turned green! (Note to self: three vowels, voila is a good start word). I begin to see the headlines and social media posts that will follow: "This has been made possible because of India's rising superpower status on the world stage"; "Wordle recognises India as vishwaguru"; "Was this possible under Nehru?"; "The rupee was never taken seriously before 2014"; "Never mind that the rupee is the name of the currency of at least six other countries now and was of many more till the mid-20th century. Also, never mind that the rupee has been on a downward slide vis-à-vis key foreign currencies for some years. But, to be on Wordle, soon after it had been bought over by The New York Times must mean something.

I yanked myself out of this train of thought. In case I doze off, I do not want early morning dreams of political leaders giving speeches on anything. Till now, the few minutes of reflection that followed getting the Wordle word of the day had been pleasant. They dealt with the curious ways of the brain, which is sometimes unable to see the word staring right at you and sometimes hops over unlikely loops to arrive at the destination. It can also be a humbling experience, for there will always be words that those who aren't Shashi Tharoor don't know. "Caulk", for instance. Now that it has become part of our textual sociality, it allows us to trace the trajectory of others. It is a refreshing alternative to "all is well" conversations. It also yields good jealousies, like what I felt till I hit that first 2/6 score that everyone I knew had achieved.

How long will the Wordle craze last? Why did it become a craze? What are the likely futures of the game in a world that is the most literate ever, and where the ascendance of English has been steady despite the return of revanchist nationalism? We already have interesting predictions and assessments of this phenomenon. Marketing scholar Gaurav Sabnis links its popularity to the "sweet spot" the game has hit in being moderately difficult — thus posing a challenge — but mostly yielding gratification. It provided default contrarians a chance to rack up their social media presence by claiming to be untouched by the obsession. My teacher cousin made it part of her pedagogy by creating her own wordle, wherein she puts a word every day from the ongoing lesson for her students to solve.

It is the spin-offs in other languages that are to watch out for. While linguists have been discussing the suitability of other languages to the wordle format (some have those trauma-causing features like that word ending in -ight brought on for many), I do hope this spurs innovation of word games in other languages. As Indians rapidly lose their multi-linguality, and urban kids grow up with barely passable competence in their parental tongue(s), the smartphone could become our route to retain languages and find our way to regional literature outside of translation.

For long, I have been bothered by the lack of a Duolingo type app for South Asian languages, apart from Hindi. Our land of tech experts and several university centres for languages have not yet come up with ways to make language learning fun and accessible. Yet, as more languages enter endangered and extinct lists, talking with them the unique culture, worldview and knowledge that every language holds, we need creative ways to not just preserve but keep languages alive. Language is what makes us human, as research into cognition and linguistics show. But could language also be the key to saving us from both planetary and self-destruction? Etymology shows the interlinked migrant history of our species and is a counter to linguistic chauvinism. In times of war, it is words, not nukes that can bring peace. For who will mourn us once we are all gone? Yes, that is the train of thought set off by my second 2/6 word: Mourn.

BENGAL ELECTIONS

THE SUPREME COURT has removed the legal hurdles in holding elections in West Bengal elections on time by vacating the stay of the Calcutta High Court on publication of the final electoral lists. The election commission can now go ahead with preparations for the assembly elections due in June. The High Court stay had rendered the electoral work impossible to be completed before June and President's rule would have become imperative on the expiry of the Left Front government's term. The constitutional bench headed by YV Chandrachud sat late to hand down a crucial verdict in a crowded court. The Supreme Court will hear a writ petition filed by the Congress (I) on the elections separately on March 15.

MINISTER'S SILENCE

THE PETROLEUM MINISTER P Shiv Shankar was reluctant to answer questions raised by Rajya Sabha members of aviation fuel. The house was seized of a call-in-attention motion and it was Aviation Minister A P Sharma who spoke all through, sometimes even speaking for his colleague. Shiv Shankar got up thrice but was unable to answer the barrage of questions directed at him. He had remained silent when a similar call-in-attention motion was tabled in the Lok Sabha.

INDO-GREEK TALKS

PRESIDENT OF GREECE Constantine Karamanlis said Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, in their talks on March 4, had expressed concern at the dangers posed by increasing tensions in different parts of the world and the growing domination of the arms industry in world affairs. Mrs Gandhi, also said that an important change had taken place as the people of India and Pakistan were getting friendlier towards each other.

Climate of denial

The IPCC report has a dire warning for India's environmental future. But is our political class listening?

OPENING ARGUMENT
BY MENAKA GURUSWAMY

IT IS SPRING in Delhi — the three weeks spanning mid-February and early-March when all Delhi dwellers experience exhilarating optimism about their lives and their futures. The air is simply “moderate” to “poor” (and not “severe”), as per the various air quality index (AQI) applications on our phones. The Mughal gardens are in full bloom and thrown open to the public. Our public gardens are packed to the gills with picnickers amid the tombs, roses and preening peacocks.

Life is good. The Supreme Court is mostly functioning in physical mode, and the temperature is pleasant enough for us lawyers to stand around drinking tea while gossiping under the high domed ceilings and in the open-air corridors, wearing our multi-layered, mostly black advocate uniform, without sweat furiously dripping down our brows. It is amid this time of relative joy that I read parts of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) report released on Monday. Perhaps, I shouldn't have.

The IPCC, a body of almost 270 experts from 67 countries, brought together by the United Nations, gave a bleak assessment of the future of our planet and species. In its sixth assessment report, titled ‘Impacts, Adaptation and Vulnerability’, the IPCC discusses the increasing extreme heat, rising oceans, melting glaciers, falling agricultural productivity, resultant food shortages and increase in diseases like dengue and Zika. Antonio Guterres, the United Nations Secretary General, quoted in The New York Times, describes the IPCC report as being “an atlas of human suffering and a damning indictment of failed climate leadership.” He added, “With fact upon fact, this report reveals how people, and the planet are getting clobbered by climate change”.

Now those of us who live in India don't need the UN Secretary General to tell us that climate change is clobbering us. We are living in the future that the IPCC predicts. Our cities are experiencing more frequent extreme heat waves. In Delhi, the AQI for winter months averages between 300-500, akin to smoking one to two packs of cigarettes every day. Delhi, Mumbai and Kolkata are in the list of the top 15 most polluted cities of the world, as per the Switzerland-based climate change group IQ Air.

The IPCC warns that should our planet get warmer than 1.5 degrees Celsius from pre-industrial times (we are at 1.1 degrees at present), then there will be irreversible impact on “ecosystems with low resilience” such as polar, mountain and coastal ecosystems “impacted by glacier melt, and higher sea level rise”. This will cause devastation to “infrastructure in low-lying coastal settlements, associated livelihoods and even erosion of cultural and spiritual values.” The increased heat will lead to an increase in diseases like diabetes, circulatory and respiratory conditions, as well as mental health challenges. Clearly, adverse climate change is an all-encompassing condition damaging our minds, our lungs and our livelihoods.

The IPCC also highlights that climate “maladaptation” will especially affect “marginalised and vulnerable groups adversely, indigenous people, ethnic minorities, low-income households and informal settlements” and those in rural areas. Therefore, India, with a majority of its people falling in these categories, will be especially devastated.

Esha Roy and Amitabh Sinha in their reports in The Indian Express note that the IPCC highlights India as a vulnerable hotspot, with several regions and cities facing climate change phenomena like flooding, sea-level rise and heatwaves. For instance, Mumbai is at high risk of sea-level rise and flooding, and Ahmedabad faces the danger of heat waves — these phenomena are already underway in both cities. Vector-borne and water-borne diseases such as malaria and dengue will be on the rise in sub-tropical regions, like parts of Punjab, Assam and Rajasthan.

When the concentration of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere increases, the grains we consume, including wheat and rice, will have diminished nutritional quality. But this presumes we will not face a crisis in food. Tucked away in annexure I of the IPCC report, I found a chilling factoid — that over the past 30 years, major crop yields have decreased by 4-10 per cent globally due to climate change. Consequently, India, which continues to be predominantly agrarian, is likely to be especially hurt.

Yet, it is not just our agrarian segments that will be impacted. Anjal Prakash, one of the lead authors of the chapter on cities and settlements, wrote that “urban India is at greater risk than other areas with a projected population of 877 million by 2050 nearly double of 480 million in 2020. The concentration of population in these cities will make them extremely vulnerable to climate change.”

We Indians know that we are experiencing the adverse consequences of the impacts of climate daily — the extreme heat, dirty air, poor quality of food grains. Our elders are mostly diabetic, and our streets are clogged with gas-guzzling vehicles. Yet, our political class has no cohesive and urgent policy roadmap to combat rising emissions and our diminishing life spans.

Our data, not for sale

Proposed policy allowing government to enrich and sell data to private sector risks prioritising commercial interests over privacy, ought to be recalled

APAR GUPTA

THE GOVERNMENT MAY very soon start selling your data based on a proposed policy released by the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (MEITY), titled “Draft India Data Accessibility & Use Policy 2022”. The policy aims to “radically transform India's ability to harness public sector data”. If passed, it would govern, “all data and information created/generated/collected/archived by the Government of India” as much as, “State Governments [who] will also be free to adopt the provisions of the policy”. The twin purpose to which this data will be put to will be government-to-government sharing and high value datasets for valuation and licensing. There are three clear reasons why this policy deserves a recall by the Union government.

The immediate risk arises from perverse incentives when a government starts licensing citizen data. Over the past three years, there has been a rapid expansion in the nature and scope of our most intimate details. While the middle classes faced the mendacity of voluntarily linking their Aadhaar to their bank accounts and mobile connections, today, the digital sweep is all pervasive. For agriculture, there is an Agristack; for unorganised labourers, we have the e-SHRAM portal; in health we have Aarogya Setu and ABHA (Ayushman Bharat Digital Health Mission); and for school children and teachers there is NDEAR (National Digital Education Architecture). This list goes on. For every area of our lives, the government now has a database filled with our personal data. The stated purpose for collection has been improving service delivery, planning and checking leakages. Such methods have been criticised by privacy and welfare activists but have been justified as serving public purposes.

This changes with the draft data accessibility policy. To adopt a phrase from start-up culture, the basis of such massive data collection over citizens is undergoing a 180-degree pivot. Public data is now being viewed as a prized asset of the Union government that should be freely shared, enriched, valued and licensed to the private sector. Given that more data means more money, commercial interests will prompt the government to collect granular personal details through greater capture and increased retention periods. Tying government policy determinations with a fiscal potential may also lead to distortion of the aims of data collection — the welfare of farmers, healthcare, unorganised labourers or even schoolchildren. There is no indication that consent will be sought in a meaningful form.

Over time, the original objectives for which databases are built will get diluted in favour of commercial interests. Even past experience signals caution, given that social risks such as arson and communal violence prompted the Ministry of Road, Transport and Highways to recall a bulk sharing policy for licensing vehicular and driver licence data.

The second issue emerges from the disingenuous phrasing of “making data open by default”. The World Bank notes that one of the first benefits of open data is that it supports “public oversight of governments and helps reduce corruption by enabling greater transparency”. These principles were recognised in past policy pronouncements of the government. Specifically, the National Data Sharing and Accessibility Policy, 2012 and the implementation guidelines formulated in 2017 refer to the Right to Information Act, 2005. However, within the present draft data accessibility policy, while the phrase “open data” has been used, its values and objectives are absent. Of the 13 objectives listed, only one is relevant to transparency and is limited to a single sentence. The primary, overpowering objectives in the draft data accessibility policy and the background note are commercial.

The final area for reconsideration is a larger trend of policy-based administration detached from our constitutional framework. This is a malady afflicting large areas of data governance, with confusion on the enactment of a data protection law. Compounding this problem, the present policy, as many others, is untethered to any legislative basis and contains no proposals for the creation of a legal framework. Parliamentary scrutiny is not an inconvenient democratic artefact that can be jettisoned for a forecasted economic windfall. As per the Supreme Court's Puttaswamy judgment on the fundamental right to privacy, the first ingredient to satisfy constitutionality is the existence of a legal, more often a legislative, basis. Without a law, there is absence of defined limits to data sharing that are enforceable and contain remedies.

In this case, the promise of privacy preservation through anonymisation tools holds little promise when it cannot be independently assessed by a body for data protection. For instance, Luc Rocher and co-authors at the Oxford Internet Institute note, “results suggest that even heavily sampled anonymised datasets are unlikely to satisfy the modern standards for anonymisation set forth by GDPR and seriously challenge the technical and legal adequacy of the de-identification release-and-forget model.” This becomes vital as it is the principal measure suggested in the draft data accessibility policy.

Such risks will become a reality without an independent regulatory body or penalties. Parliamentary enactments also help bring accountability through deliberation that furthers foresight and contains financial memorandums — given that public money would be spent to enrich datasets of public data. Since the policy contemplates sharing data between databases of the central and state governments as well as through central funded schemes, it may also be prudent to deliberate further in the Rajya Sabha. Federalism becomes a relevant issue given that such data, when it is generated, processed and enriched by state governments to comply with interoperability standards, will lead to revenue generation for itself. These are the glaring issues in this short, 10-page draft data accessibility policy, which appears to transform the Union government into a data broker.

Wheels of Swachh Bharat

Safai Saathis are outside safety net, need collective bargaining, policy support

I STILL REMEMBER meeting 52-year-old Ratnamala in Mumbai, a waste picker who scrapes a living out of the garbage we throw away. Ratnamala told me she had been doing this work for 40 years, but could barely make ends meet and support her four children. Her meagre savings and feeble access to the government social safety net have left her highly vulnerable to emergencies and disasters. Marginalised, and at the very bottom of the socio-economic chain, Ratnamala faces the same questions every day: How to break out of this trap and move up? How to extricate her children from the same? How to create a life of dignity for herself and her children?

It is estimated that India generates 65 million tonnes of waste each year and is home to more than 4 million waste pickers like Ratnamala. Predominantly women, this army of waste pickers or Safai Saathis is the backbone of traditional waste management in most Indian cities.

Despite this, Safai Saathis have not found their legitimate space in India's development discourse. When the government announced measures during the pandemic to support frontline workers, the waste picker community remained conspicuous by its absence. This is particularly disheartening as they continue to collect and sort through rising mounds of potentially dangerous waste including masks, hazmat suits, and plastic face-shields.

Their multiple vulnerabilities, including low and uncertain incomes, limited access to government schemes, high health risks, and severe social exclusion, have all been exacerbated by Covid-19.

In line with our mandate to ensure that no one is left behind, UNDP India works with Safai Saathis through our Plastic Waste Management programme. However, when we began in 2018, we were struck by the paucity of data on this community. How was anyone going to devise programmes and policies to support Safai Saathis if official data say so little? This led us to design and publish India's first large-scale analysis of the socio-economic conditions of Safai Saathis, based on a survey of over 9,000 workers across 14 Indian cities. Our findings underline an urgent need to extend multifaceted support to these workers. Our survey shows that Safai Saathis are employed mainly on the margins of the urban informal sector. Their low incomes and job insecurity is compounded by the fact that nearly 70 per cent come from socially backward groups and over 60 per cent have no formal education.

More than 90 per cent of the workers reported owning an Aadhaar card — in line with broad national trends — but only a tiny subset owned an income, caste, or occupation certificate. This thwarts any attempts at formalising their work and limits their access to government social security schemes. Less than 5 per cent of those surveyed had any health insurance, indicating very high degrees of health-shock vulnerabilities.

Of those Safai Saathis who had a bank account, only 20 per cent were linked to the Jan Dhan Yojana — the government's flagship financial inclusion programme. Half of the sample reported owning and using a ration card and this proportion was even smaller in cities where migrants formed a larger share among surveyed workers. With its focus on portability, the government's One Nation One Ration Card scheme has the potential to play a transformative role in ensuring access to subsidised food grains for these workers.

As India progresses towards meeting the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, our study makes a compelling case to intensify efforts to address the challenges faced by Safai Saathis. Its evidence-backed insights have the potential to inform government policy and action — including the government's ambition to bring informal workers under the Swachh Bharat Mission, and the e-SHRAM initiative that links workers to the state-funded health insurance.

An important starting point is the registration of Safai Saathis by urban local bodies, and providing ID cards that recognise them as municipal workers with a clear role. Ensuring minimum pay and enabling their authorised access to waste are essential next steps.

The overall policy agenda for Safai Saathis must include a firm focus on building resilience against shocks, expanding access to social protection, and creating opportunities to graduate towards safe, sustainable, and dignified livelihoods.

First, diversified solid waste management-linked livelihoods like dry waste centre managers and machine operators can broaden employment horizons for these workers. Waste pickers' cooperatives can strengthen Safai Saathis' collective bargaining power enabling higher prices for what they collect.

Second, a welfare framework to design social protection schemes explicitly for Safai Saathis should be a policy priority. Proactively reaching out to the workers for enrolment in government schemes, minimising paperwork, and a greater awareness among Safai Saathis about their entitlements are essential for linking them to government programmes.

In the medium term, there is a clear need to create better, safer, decent jobs in the economy that informal workers like Safai Saathis can eventually move to, supported by efforts to enhance their skills.

Finally, as India makes determined strides towards realising the Sustainable Development Goals, it must look at exploring alternate, technology-led circular economy models that eliminate the need for any person to do this hazardous work manually. Ratnamala and her children deserve to break away from this cycle and have a chance at a life with better opportunities and a life of dignity.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

NUCLEAR FEAR

THIS REFERS TO the editorial, ‘The N-Word’ (IE, March 4). Even uttering the N-word, and that too by a senior minister of a country that possesses among the largest nuclear stockpiles is disturbing and has severe consequences. Ukraine was seen until recently as the embodiment of non-proliferation as it gave up its nuclear stockpile yet remained a “safe” place. If Ukraine had not given its nuclear weapons in 1994 under the Budapest Memorandum, this invasion by Russia might not have come to pass. However, ifs and buts have no place in international relations. The point is the N-word is terrifying. The horrors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki point to only one thing: A nuclear war cannot be won and must not be fought.

BETTER GRID

THIS REFERS TO the article, ‘The only fuel’ (IE, March 4). Electricity could emerge as the biggest substitute to non-renewable sources of energy if problems such as the erratic supply of electricity could be addressed. One of the ways to optimise performance is to move towards the digitisation of assets. Tools such as predictive analytics can be used to monitor performance and collect data regarding probable asset failure in the distribution and transmission sector. This will enable the discoms to discover the reason behind the high failure rate of the transformers. The electricity regulatory authorities can step in and mandate the collection of assets failure data and thereafter formulate/streamline the process to reduce such incidents. It is essential to first improve the reliability of the present system and reduce the burden of O&M expenses. As such, it is suggested that operational expenditure should be prioritised over capital expenditure.

ONUS ON STUDENTS

THIS REFERS TO the editorial, ‘After the arrival’ (IE, March 4). While it is important that the government make arrangements for continuing the education of students returning from Ukraine, the onus falls on the students as well. The time spent over there has provided them with international exposure, which is essential in the long run. They can also explore short-term medical internships to gain experience.

NIA charges five suspected Khalistanis for arms smuggling

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE NATIONAL Investigation Agency (NIA) on Friday filed a chargesheet against five suspected Khalistani operatives in a case of arms and narcotics smuggling from across the border via drones.

The chargesheet has been filed against Harmesh Singh, Darvesh Singh, Gurmukh Singh, Gagandeep Singh and Lakhbir Singh Rode — all residents of Punjab.

"Investigation has revealed that the chargesheeted accused persons had smuggled illegal consignments of arms, ammunition, explosives and narcotics from across the Indo-Pak border to carry out terror activities in India," the NIA said in a statement.

According to NIA, these illegal consignments were sent by absconding accused Lakhbir Singh Rode (chief of ISYF, a banned terrorist organisation) and his associates from Pakistan via drones.

"These consignments were received by the co-accused and further discreetly passed on to other accused persons involved in the conspiracy to carry out subversive activities in India. Incriminating evidences have been found against all the chargesheeted accused persons," the NIA statement said.

The case was initially registered at Mamdot police station in Ferozepur, Punjab on August 8 last year. NIA took over the case in November that year.

Rode, incidentally, is also being probed in connection with the 2020 killing of Balwinder Singh Sandhu in Punjab's Tarn Taran district.

A Shaurya Chakra recipient, Sandhu was gunned down at his home in Tarn Taran's Bhihiwind by two unidentified bikers on October 16, 2020.

Kerala CPM state panels infused with new blood

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
THIRUVANANTHAPURAM,
MARCH 4

KERALA UNIT of CPI(M) on Friday infused its state committee and state secretariat with some new blood, effecting a decision of the party's central committee to fix 75 as the age limit for the leaders in party bodies. Politburo member Kodiyeri Balakrishnan was, however, elected as the state secretary for the third consecutive term.

The restructuring of the state-level bodies comes on the heels of the party's decision in the last year's Assembly elections not to field a leader who had been a legislator for two consecutive terms.

In the new 17-member state secretariat, the only leader aged above 75 is Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan. Among the eight new members, the most conspicuous is the presence of Public Works Department Minister and Vijayan's son-in-law PA Mohammed Riyas, who is now emerging as the Muslim face of the CPI(M) in Kerala.

Congregations at the grand mosque had mostly been prohibited since August 5, 2019, when Jammu and Kashmir's special status under Article 370 was revoked. Later, the lockdown was extended due to the Covid pandemic. Mirwaiz Umar Farooq, who led prayers at the mosque, continues to remain in house detention since the revocation of the special status.

Sources in the administration told The Indian Express that "there is a discussion within the establishment to release Mirwaiz Farooq ahead of Ramzan", which begins in the

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
PATNA, MARCH 4

FOURTEEN PEOPLE, including five members of one family, were killed and 10 others were injured in a blast at an illegal firecracker manufacturing unit inside a house in Bihar's Bhagalpur district on Thursday night, police said.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi spoke to Chief Minister Nitish Kumar to seek an update on relief and rescue operations, as the state police on Friday ordered a probe by the Patna Anti Terrorist Squad (ATS).

"The news of loss of human lives in Bihar's Bhagalpur blast is painful. I wish the injured fast recovery. I have also spoken to Nitish Kumar regarding the aspects related to the incident. Administration has been doing relief and rescue operations and the affected are being helped in all possible ways," the PM tweeted.

Can't curb discussion in academia: High Court to Savarkar biographer

SOPIAHSAN
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE DELHI High Court on Friday told historian Vikram Sampath that academics are well within their rights to debate about plagiarism allegations against him and asked him to desist from filing applications every week seeking injunction against them.

"You cannot curtail discussion on the subject in the academic world. Your cause of action is only qua the defendants, who are allegedly defaming you, so for that the court has passed an order. But if academicians of the world are of the view that you had plagiarised or something, you cannot get an injunction against (a) thousand people who are talking about this," Justice Amit Bansal said dur-

The unit was illegally operating from a house. Prasanna Kumar Das Bihar CM Nitish Kumar said: "I have taken full stock of the situation from state chief secretary and DGP. The matter is being probed and we are monitoring relief and rescue operations... and the injured are being treated."

Police said the incident happened at Kajiwaliachak under Tatarpur police station around 11.30 pm Thursday, at a house owned by one Mohammed Azad. Azad, police said, had rented out the house to Leelawati Devi, who, besides four of her family, is among the 14 killed.

Primary investigations by the police have suggested the house ran an unlicensed firecracker manufacturing unit, Bihar DGP SK Sibghal told reporters. "ATS will probe the matter. FSL samples are being collected. Gun powder and iron nails, used in making crude bombs and firecrackers have been seized from the spot," he said.

The injured are being treated at Jawaharlal Nehru Medical College and Hospital, police said.

The intensity of the blast was such that three adjoining houses were also damaged.

The in-charge of Tatarpur police station, Sudhanshu Kumar, has been suspended for dereliction of duty.

Bhagalpur SSP Baburam said No arrest has been made so far. "We have been busy with relief and rescue operations and would look into the matter thoroughly soon. We did find violation of adherence of the police manual by local police station incharge and have suspended him," he said.

HC protection to Punjab ex-top cop in future cases 'shocking': SC

Will ask HC CJ to hear Saini's plea or assign it to different judge, says court

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE SUPREME Court has termed "unprecedented" and "shocking" the Punjab and Haryana High Court order granting protection from arrest to former Punjab DGP Smedh Singh Saini, who has accused the state government of attempts to falsely implicate him, in cases "pending or likely to be registered" against him till the Punjab Assembly election is over.

"How can future course of action be stayed? It is shocking, and the three of us feel that it is unprecedented. This will require hearing," a three-judge bench headed by Chief Justice of India N V Ramana said on Friday.

The High Court order had been passed by a single-judge bench on September 10, 2021, while hearing a plea by Saini who had requested that investigation in cases registered against him be handed over to "CBI or any other independent agency outside the Punjab".

Saini had told the High Court he feared being falsely implicated in criminal cases "on account of malice, mala fides and ulterior motives on part of the political party in power in the Punjab".

The Punjab government appealed against the order in SC.

The SC bench, also comprising Justices A S Bopanna and Hima Kohli, said it will request the Chief Justice of the Punjab and Haryana High Court to himself hear Saini's plea or assign it to a different judge than than the one who had passed the order and dispose of the petition within two weeks. "We will keep this matter (appeal) pending," the SC said.

The Assembly election in Punjab was held on February 20. Votes will be counted March 10.

In its September 10 order, the Punjab and Haryana HC had granted Saini protection from arrest after considering it to be "a case of exceptional circumstances and hardship being caused to the petitioner by the State of Punjab (on political grounds)".

"There will be a clear stay for the arrest of the petitioner in all cases pending or likely to be registered or registered or where he is sought to be implicated in the aid of Section 120-B IPC except FIR No. 77, where the matter is pending before the Hon'ble Supreme Court, till the General Election in the State of Punjab..." it had said.

On why it passed the order, the single-judge bench said: "[A]fter hearing the learned counsel for the parties, I find merit in the submissions made by learned senior counsel for the petitioner that involvement of the petitioner in multiple cases can be a political ploy in wake of the coming... elections".

The 'FIR 77' is related to the disappearance of a junior engineer, Balwant Singh Multani, in 1991.

While the police said Multani had escaped from custody, his family alleged he was abducted from his home by officials operating under the instructions of Saini and tortured while in custody.

PUNE Six barge into house, thrash women 'for wearing shorts'

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
PUNE, MARCH 4

SIX RESIDENTS of a Pune locality barged into the residence of three women late on Wednesday night and thrashed them with slippers allegedly because they objected to the latter wearing shorts around the area.

The three women, in their 20s, are paying guests at a house in Kharadi. Police said two of them are software engineers working in Pune.

Police also said there have been quarrels in the past between the owner of the house the women live in and the persons who thrashed them. No arrest has been made yet.

The owner of the house, a 32-year-old woman, filed a complaint at the Chandan Nagar police station on Thursday. Based on her complaint, an FIR was lodged and the police booked six people — Alka Pathare, Sachin Pathare, Ketan Pathare, Seema Pathare, Shital Pathare and Kiran Pathare — under trespass, causing hurt, and criminal intimidation charges, among others.

According to the complaint, the residents were allegedly angered by the women wearing shorts around the locality. Around 10.15 pm on Wednesday, the accused persons allegedly forced their way into the house, thrashed the women with their footwear, abused the complainant, and threatened to demolish the house.

Assistant Police Inspector Manohar Sonawane said investigation is on in the case. Police are also examining CCTV footage of the scene outside the house.

The complainant in this case said, "Accused persons are my neighbours. They had a quarrel with us even in the past. Some girls and women have been staying as PG at our house for the last few months and they do not trouble anyone..."

Raipur journalist held for writing satire against govt

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
RAIPUR, MARCH 4

A RAIPUR-BASED journalist was arrested on Wednesday after he wrote political satires allegedly critical of the Congress-ruled Chhattisgarh government.

The complaint against Nilesh Sharma, editor of Indiawriters.co.in and its magazine, was filed by Congress member Khilawan Nishad with the Raipur cyber police. Nishad alleged that the fictional characters in Sharma's articles under his 'Ghurwa Ke Maati' column resembled state ministers and Congress legislators. He also claimed that the journalist used derogatory remarks in his column and drove a wedge between ministers.

After forming the government in 2018, the Congress had promised a law to protect journalists against harassment. A draft bill was shared with the public for feedback last year. Sharma has been booked under IPC sections 505 (public mischief) 505 (1) (whoever makes or publishes rumour) and 505 (2) (promoting enmity or hatred).

"We have registered the FIR as Sharma was writing baseless articles spreading misinformation and rumors," a senior police officer said. The media fraternity in the state termed the arrest an attempt to curb dissent against the state government.

In the police complaint, Sharma has been accused of being right wing. However, he had published similar political articles critical of the erstwhile BJP government.

In a separate incident, a journalist was beaten up by a BJP leader in Raipur on Thursday. BJP's Durg Zila Panchayat member Monu Sahu was arrested and remanded to jail for 15 days the following day. According to the FIR, Sahu beat up journalist Dharendra Giri over a personal enmity.

Remove statues from roads, HC tells MP govt

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
BHOPAL, MARCH 4

THE MADHYA Pradesh High Court has ordered the removal of a statue of Arjun Singh, the late Congress Chief Minister, from a trijunction in Bhopal — along with all other statues at roads that have been erected in the state since January 18, 2013.

In its order on Thursday, the Bench of Justices Sheel Nagu and Purushendra Kumar Kaurav imposed a fine of Rs 30,000 on four government agencies and also prohibited the erection of any more statues at roads and other such places across the state.

The petition — filed in 2019 by Jabalpur-based advocate Gresham Jain — had argued that the 10-foot statue of Singh had come up in place of a statue of freedom fighter Chandrashekhar Azad — which had been removed for hindering the flow of traffic.

The court directed the Bhopal Municipal Corporation to remove Singh's statue from the Nanke petrol pump tri-section.

The order stated: "The state is directed by a writ of mandamus to remove all statues erected on public roads, pavements, sidewalks and any other public utility place at any village, town or city situated within MP, which had been erected on or after 18.01.2013."

Speaking to The Indian Express, Grisham Jain welcomed the court's verdict and said: "My only contention is that while the statue of Chandra Shekar Azad was removed as it was obstructing traffic, how is that former Singh's statue was not obstructing the traffic." The cost of Rs 30,000 is to be paid in equal proportion by four respondents, including the state of Madhya Pradesh through the Chief Secretary and others.

150TH BIRTH ANNIVERSARY YEAR OF SRI AUROBINDO

'Govt committed to help in Auroville expansion plan'

SUKRITA BARUAH
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

THE GOVERNMENT is committed to expanding Auroville into a 'city' in line with the existing Master Plan, amid reaffirmed support to the experimental township during the first Auroville Festival to mark the 150th birth anniversary year of Sri Aurobindo.

Founded in 1968 by Mirra Alfassa — known as 'The Mother' — Auroville currently has a population of 3200 people, with the Auroville Foundation owning 3,300 acres of land. A plan, known as the Galaxy Plan, envisages a city of 50,000 residents.

Created on the lines of the Galaxy Plan, the Auroville Universal Township Master Plan (perspective 2025) was approved by the HRD Ministry in April, 2001.

Last year, however, its execution split the township, with a section of residents protesting in December against felling of trees for the project. The Southern Bench of the National Green Tribunal also issued an interim stay on the felling. Tamil Nadu Governor R N Ravi said the Centre, however, remains committed to the expansion plan.

Speaking on a panel on 'Practical manifestation of the city and the role of UNESCO and Government of India' last week, Ravi, who is also the chairman of Auroville's Governing Body, said: "Unfortunately, we have seen a large number of groups, factions... We are still trapped at a very subordinate level. It has to evolve. But this evolution can't be done by the government... Mother had given a design of what the township should be like. That is the physical infrastructure of that township... The government of India is only doing that part." As part of its support, the Centre has in the last one year doubled its grant to the Auroville Foundation, from Rs 15 crore to Rs 31 crore.

Jayanti Ravi, a senior bureaucrat currently the Secretary of the Auroville Foundation, said the increase is in view of the festival as well as for several projects.

"In terms of the timeline, we want to see it happen in a 5-10 year window and the budget is Rs 1,100 crore for five years," Jayanti Ravi said.

The OBC vote in UP

OBC voters, especially non-Yadav OBCs, could be key to who rules UP after the March 10 results. A history of the castes that the BJP has cultivated since the 1990s, but some of whom could now be breaking away.

SHYAMLAL YADAV
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

SINCE THE late 1960s, communities that are now identified as Other Backward Classes (OBCs) have been an important factor in the politics of Uttar Pradesh. For the last 30 years, the BJP has worked to build a base among non-Yadav OBCs to take on the Samajwadi Party's formidable Yadav-Muslim combine; in the weeks leading up to the Assembly elections, however, several non-Yadav OBC leaders broke from the BJP and joined the SP. On March 10, the choices made by OBC voters could determine who forms UP's next government.

Numbers, reservation

The National Commission for Backward Classes (NCBC) lists 76 castes (using 156 surnames) from UP in the central list for 27% reservation. The Mandal Commission report, submitted in 1980 and implemented in 1994, said OBCs were 52% of India's population. The report of the National Sample Survey Organisation's (NSSO's) 61st round, released in October 2006, however, put it at 41%.

In UP, a Social Justice Committee set up by then Chief Minister Rajnath Singh in 2001 estimated OBCs to be 43.13% (54.05% in rural areas). Among OBCs, the report estimated Yadavs to be 19.4%, Kurmis 7.46%, Kachhi-Kushwaha-Shakya-Maurya-Saini-Mali 6.69%, Lodhs 4.9%, Jats (who are OBC in UP) 3.6%, Kewat (Nishad) 4.33%, Shepherd-Pal-Baghel 4.43%, Kahar-Kashyap 3.31%, and Bhar-Rajbhar 2.44%.

There has been no caste census since 1931, so these numbers are only estimates. Political parties collect seat-wise information on castes from their workers on the ground.

A Commission for Backward Classes constituted in UP in October 1975 under the chairmanship of Chhedilal Sathii recommended 29.50% reservation for OBCs, with 17% of that going to the most backward communities.

Ram Naresh Yadav's Janata Party government implemented 15% reservation in government jobs for OBCs in UP in 1977. In 1994, the SP-BSP government headed by Mulayam Singh Yadav increased it to 27%.

At the central level, the Kaka Kalelkar Commission, constituted in 1953, submitted its report in 1955. The BP Mandal Commission was set up in 1978. Leaders such as Ram Manohar Lohia raised their voice for the welfare of OBCs.

Charan Singh to Mulayam

The UP Assembly election of 1967 saw significant shifts in social equations. The Bharatiya Jana Sangh (BJS), precursor to the BJP, won 98 seats, riding the support from backward farming communities. OBC leaders and future CMs Kalyan Singh (BJS) and Mulayam Singh Yadav (Samyukta Socialist Party) entered the Assembly for the first time, and Jat leader Chaudhary Charan Singh became CM after defecting from the Congress.

In eastern UP, where there are no Jats, Charan Singh received support from communities such as Yadavs and Kurmis. A significant number of BJS MLAs in the 1967 Assembly were from these communities, but in the years after that, their bases shifted loyalty to Charan Singh, who remained their most widely accepted leader until his demise in 1987.

VP Singh, who broke from the Congress in the late 1980s, received support from OBC leaders Mulayam in UP, Lalu Prasad in Bihar, and Sharad Yadav from MP. The Jats of UP, Haryana, and Rajasthan too threw their weight behind him. His announcement during his Independence Day speech of 1990, on implementation of the Mandal Commission report, strengthened OBC consolidation further.

In UP, Mulayam, who had become CM in 1989, got the support of Muslims with his hard opposition to the BJP's Hindutva, and of several non-Yadav OBC communities, and emerged as the pre-eminent leader of OBCs in the 1990s.

BJP's Kalyan and Rajnath

The BJP mounted its own OBC face against Mulayam, and after the elections of 1991, Kalyan Singh, a Lodhi Rajput, became CM. As Mulayam's support base outside his Yadav-Muslim core started to fragment, Kalyan rallied several smaller OBC communities behind the BJP. It was around this time, as several communities started to assert their identities in the post-Mandal years, that 'non-Yadav OBC' entered the political lexicon of UP. Kalyan nurtured this constituency, and ensured their representation in party posts and in the distribution of election tickets.

Kalyan's successor Ram Prakash Gupta (Nov 1999-Oct 2000) granted Jats OBC status in UP. Working to weaken Mulayam and BSP chief Mayawati, the government of Rajnath Singh, who succeeded Gupta, came up with the idea of "reservation within reservation" to divide OBCs and Dalits.

The Social Justice Committee constituted by Rajnath's government in June 2001 submitted its report that August. Its purpose was seen to be to alienate Yadavs from other OBC castes, and Jats from other SC castes. A committee headed by Hukum Singh recommended that the 21% quota for Scheduled Castes should be split between Jatavs (10%) and the remaining 65 SC castes (11%). In the 27% OBC quota, the share of Yadavs should be kept to 5%, the committee recommended, with 9% going to eight other castes, and the rest to 70 other castes.

The plan was quashed by the Supreme Court, and in the elections of 2002, the BJP was reduced to 88 seats out of 403 in the Assembly.

OBC politics post 2002

The success of identity politics inspired several other leaders to seek recognition for themselves and their communities. Sonelal Patel, a Kurmi leader who was earlier with the BSP, had formed the Apna Dal in 1995. In 2002, he fielded 351 candidates including 59 Kurmis, and won three seats; all three MLAs, however, defected to the SP later.

In October 2002, another former BSP leader, Om Prakash Rajbhar, formed the Suheldev Bharatiya Samaj Party (SBSP), with its base in the Rajbhar community. Several years later, in 2016, Sanjay Nishad formed the Nirbal Indian Shoshit Hamara Aam Dal (NISHAD), claiming support from the Nishad community.

After Sonelal Patel's death, his daughters went their separate ways. The faction led by Anupriya Patel is in alliance with the BJP, the other faction, led by Pallavi Patel, is with the SP. Rajbhar is now with the SP alliance, while Nishad is with the BJP.

Modi-Yogi years

Ahead of the Lok Sabha polls of 2014, Narendra Modi focused strongly on social engineering. In UP, with the help of Kalyan Singh who had returned to the BJP, Modi and Amit Shah devised a strategy that would bring the party 73 out of 80 seats, with two more going to its ally Apna Dal.

The strategy paid off again in 2017, when Amit Shah camped in UP and Keshav Prasad Maurya was made president of the BJP's state unit. The party won 312 seats, and its allies Apna Dal and SBSP (which was then with the BJP) won 9 and 4 respectively. The BJP's sweep indicated that barring a few OBC castes, most others had backed the party.

Non-Yadav OBC leaders flocked to the BJP. Keshav Maurya was joined by Swami Prasad Maurya, who was once Mayawati's trusted lieutenant; with Babu Singh Kushwaha having left already, the BSP lost a major part of its OBC base to the BJP. Nonia leader Dara Singh Chauhan came over. The BJP launched a campaign to brand the SP as a party that took care of only Yadavs and Muslims, a narrative that Mulayam's then badly divided party failed to counter.

The SP and BSP joined hands for the Lok Sabha elections of 2019, but the BJP still won 62 seats, and the Apna Dal won two. The BJP had promised sub-categorisation of OBCs in 2014 and 2017, and a Commission headed by Justice G Rohini has been looking at the issue since October 2017. A separate committee at the state level under Justice Raghavendra Kumar has submitted its report to the state government.

Swami Prasad Maurya and Chauhan are no longer with the BJP. Every OBC leader that has left the BJP ahead of the 2022 elections has accused the Yogi Adityanath government of being unfair to these communities. On the other hand, SP leader Akhilesh Yadav has reached out to non-Yadav OBCs with several election promises.

THIS WORD MEANS: GENERAL CONSENT

When states block CBI from probing cases

DEEPTIMANI TIWARY
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

MEGHALAYA HAS withdrawn consent to the CBI to investigate cases in the state, becoming the ninth state to do so. Last November, the Supreme Court had expressed concern over the CBI's submission that since 2018, around 150 requests for sanction to investigate had been pending with the eight states that had withdrawn general consent until then.

What general consent means

Under Section 6 of the Delhi Special Police Establishment (DSPE) Act, 1946, the CBI must obtain the consent of the state government before beginning an investigation in a state. In contrast, the National Investigation Agency, governed by The NIA Act, 2008, has jurisdiction across the country.

The state government's consent to the CBI can be either case-specific or general. General consent is normally given to help the CBI probe corruption cases against central government employees in the state concerned. Without it, the CBI would have to apply to the state in every case, and before taking every action.

The 9 states

Since 2015, Mizoram (in 2015); West Bengal (2018); Chhattisgarh (2019); Punjab, Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Kerala, Jharkhand (all 2020) and now Meghalaya have withdrawn general consent to the CBI. In 2018, Andhra Pradesh (then ruled by the TDP) too withdrew consent, but restored it when YSRCP came to power in 2019.

Seven of these nine states—the exceptions being Meghalaya and Mizoram—are ruled by the anti-BJP opposition. Mizoram was ruled by the Congress when it withdrew general consent in 2015, but hasn't restored it after NDA ally MNF came to power. At the time of withdrawing consent, all states alleged the Centre was using the CBI to target the opposition.

What withdrawal means

It means the CBI will not be able to register any fresh case involving officials of the central government or a private person in the state without the state government's consent.

The Calcutta High Court recently ruled that the CBI cannot be stopped from probing a central government employee in another state. The order has been challenged in the Supreme Court. Last July, the Calcutta HC ruled that a central government employee could not be "distinguished" just because his office was located in a state that had withdrawn general consent. It said withdrawal of consent would apply in cases where exclusively state government employees were involved.

What is doesn't mean

Even when consent is withdrawn, the CBI retains the power to investigate cases registered before the withdrawal. Also, in cases registered anywhere else in the country, involving individuals stationed in these states, the CBI's jurisdiction extends to these states.

There is ambiguity on whether the CBI can carry out a search in connection with an old case without the state's consent, but the agency has the option to get a search warrant from a local court. For a surprise search, it can use CrPC Section 166, which allows a police officer of one jurisdiction to ask an officer of another to carry out a search on their behalf. And should the first officer feel a search by the latter may lead to loss of evidence, he can conduct the search himself after giving notice to the latter.

Powers in fresh cases

Avenues remain available to the CBI even without consent. It could use the Calcutta HC order to register a fresh case in any state. Alternatively, it can file a case in Delhi and continue to investigate people inside these states.

In October 2018, the Delhi High Court ruled that the CBI could probe anyone in a state that has withdrawn general consent, if the case was not registered in that state.

HOW CLOSURE OF RUSSIAN AIRSPACE HAS IMPACTED FLIGHTS

The closure of Russian airspace for US-based, Canadian and European airlines has meant flights between some major destinations in these jurisdictions and India have become longer. For passengers on these carriers, longer flight times have meant inconvenience and higher fares. Air India has remained unaffected, as it continues to use Russian airspace for its flights to and from the western hemisphere. The screengrabs below, from the flight tracking website Flightradar24, show routes and flight times from randomly picked dates before and after the invasion of Ukraine, which triggered the West's closure of airspaces to Russian aircraft, and Moscow's retaliation. The flight times are indicative; within the broad 'before' and 'after' categories, aircraft may reach a little sooner or later on a daily basis depending on flight conditions. PRANAV MUKUL explains.

NEWARK-DELHI

The United Airlines flight on March 1, which went around Russian airspace, was well over an hour longer—flying over Europe and the Middle East before entering the Indian subcontinent. The Air India flight on same route continues to use Russian airspace, and takes the same time as it did before the closure of airspaces.

Fighting rages in other parts of Ukraine, southeastern port city of Mariupol encircled and shelled

AGENCIES
KYIV, MARCH 4

AS RUSSIA'S invasion of Ukraine passed its first week, panicked residents of Kyiv swarmed the capital's main train station on Friday to flee the city before the window closes to escape and Russian forces increasingly bore down on cities along the strategically important Black Sea Coast in the south.

Fighting raged elsewhere in Ukraine as Russian forces besieged and bombarded several cities in the second week of an invasion launched by Russian President Vladimir Putin.

The capital Kyiv, in the path of a Russian armoured column that has been stalled on a road for days, came under renewed attack, with explosions audible from the city centre.

The southeastern port city of Mariupol - a key prize for the Russian troops - has been encir-led and shelled. Its mayor said on Friday it had no water, heat or electricity and is running out of food after five days under attack.

"We are simply being destroyed," Mayor Vadym Boychenko said.

Ukrainian presidential adviser Oleksiy Arestovych said, "The humanitarian situation is tense," adding that Ukrainian authorities are in talks with Russian representatives and international organisations to set up a humanitarian corridor to evacuate residents and supply food.

Battles in the area have knocked out the city's electricity, heat and water systems, as well as most phone service, officials said. Food deliveries to the city were also cut.

Meanwhile, a top Russian diplomat insisted Friday that his country will not occupy Ukraine. "The goal is very clear: Denazification and demilitarization," Gennady Gatilov, Russia's ambassador in Geneva, said of the invasion - which he called a "special military operation."

"We are not going to stay in Ukraine militarily. We are not going to occupy this country," he told the UN Geneva press association ACANU. "I don't know all the details of the military plan, but the political goal is as I described it." He said the definition of "demilitarization" was being discussed in diplomatic talks between Ukrainian and Russian envoys.

Suicide bombing kills 56 at Shia mosque in Pak

BY KATHY GANNON & RIAZ KHAN
PESHAWAR, MARCH 4

A SUICIDE bomber struck inside a Shia Muslim mosque in Pakistan's northwestern city of Peshawar during Friday prayers, killing at least 56 worshippers and wounding 194 people, hospital officials said.

No militant group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack. Both the Islamic State group and the Pakistani Taliban - a militant group separate from the Taliban in Afghanistan - have carried out similar attacks in the past in the area, located near the border with neighboring Afghanistan.

According to the spokesman at Peshawar's Lady Reading Hospital, Asim Khan, many of the wounded were in critical condition. Scores of victims were peppered with shrapnel, several had limbs amputated and others were injured by flying debris.

Peshawar Police Chief Muhammed Ejaz Khan said the violence started when an armed attacker opened fire on police outside the mosque in Peshawar's old city. One policeman was killed in the gunfight, and another police officer was wounded. The attacker then ran inside the mosque and detonated his suicide vest.

The suicide bomber had strapped a powerful explosive device to his body, packed with 5 kilograms (12 pounds) of explosives, said Moazzam Jah Ansari, the top police official for Khyber Pukhtunkhwa Province where Peshawar is the capital.

The device was hidden beneath a large black shawl that covered much of his body, according to CCTV footage seen by The AP. The footage showed the bomber moving quickly up a narrow street toward the mosque entrance. He fired at the police protecting the mosque before entering inside.

Within seconds a powerful explosion occurred and the camera lens was obscured with dust and debris. Ansari said the crudely made device was packed with ball bearings, a deadly method of constructing a bomb to inflict the most carnage spraying a larger area with deadly projectiles. The ball bearings caused the high death toll, Ansari said.

Local police official Waheed Khan said the explosion occurred as worshippers had gathered in the Kucha Risaldar Mosque for Friday prayers. There are fears the death toll could still rise further, he added.

Ambulances rushed through congested narrow streets carrying the wounded to Lady Reading Hospital, where doctors worked feverishly.

Shayan Haider, a witness, had been preparing to enter the mosque when a powerful explosion threw him to the ground. "I opened my eyes and there was dust and bodies everywhere," he said. AP

Belarusian leader Alexander Lukashenko said on Friday that the Belarusian armed forces were not taking part and would not take part in Russia's military operation in Ukraine. Foreign ministers of the Group of Seven (G7) advanced economies agreed on Friday they would impose further sanctions on Russia if Moscow does not stop attacking Ukraine, Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshimasa Hayashi said. 'We are not part of this:' NATO rejects no-fly zone

Brussels: NATO foreign ministers rejected any possibility of intervening against Russian forces in Ukraine, whether on the ground or in the air, the alliance's secretary general said Friday.

"Allies agree we should not have NATO planes operating over Ukrainian air space or NATO troops operating in Ukrainian territory," Jens Stoltenberg, the secretary general, said.

NATO is resisting for fear that it could draw member states into a war with Russia. "We understand the desperation, but if we did that, we would end up with something that could lead to a full-fledged war in Europe involving much more countries and much more suffering," he said.

The Ukrainian foreign minister, Dmytro Kuleba, pleaded for help from the foreign ministers of the 30 nations of the alliance. "Our country is ready to fight. But we need immediate help in repelling Russian attacks in the air," he said. "If you do not do this, you will have to share the responsibility for the lives and suffering of the civilians who are being killed by rocket attacks from Russian planes." NYT

Zelenskyy urges Russians to protest over attack on Zaporizhzhia plant

LVIV, MARCH 4

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy appealed to Russians on Friday to stage protests over Russian forces' seizure of the largest nuclear power plant in Europe.

A building at the Zaporizhzhia nuclear plant was set ablaze during intense fighting, Ukrainian authorities said on Friday, triggering fears of a potential nuclear disaster. The blaze was later extinguished.

"Russian people, I want to appeal to you: how is this possible? After all we fought together in 1986 against the Chernobyl catastrophe," he said in a televised address, evoking memories of the world's worst nuclear disaster.

"You have to ... take to the streets and say that you want to live, you want to live on earth without radioactive contamination. Radiation does not know where Russia is, radiation does not know where the borders of your country are."

THE REACTOR that was hit was offline, but still contains highly radioactive nuclear fuel. Four of the other six reactors have now been taken offline, leaving only one in operation.

The reactors at the plant have thick concrete containment domes, which would have protected them from external fire from tanks and artillery, said Jon Wolfsthal, who served during the Obama administration as the senior director for arms control and nonproliferation at the National Security Council. At the same time, a fire at a nuclear power plant is never a good thing, he said. Another danger at nuclear facilities are the pools where spent fuel rods are kept to be cooled, which are more vulnerable to shelling and which could cause the release of radioactive material. Perhaps the biggest issue, however, is the plant's power supply, said Najmedin Meshkati, an engineering professor, who has studied both the Chernobyl and Fukushima disasters, raising a concern also voiced by Wolfsthal and others. AP

"How can you forget that? And if you have not forgotten, you should not be silent."

Don't target us for development: China official tells US

Beijing: The US should not regard China as a strategic rival and stoke confrontation because of its economic progress and development, a senior Chinese official said on Friday.

To use China's development as an excuse and take China as a strategic rival will only erode the mutual trust and cooperation between the two countries, and will eventually hurt own interests of the United States, Zhang Yesui, spokesperson of China's Parliament, the National People's Congress, told a media briefing.

The Biden administration, which treats China as a strategic competitor, has made it clear that the most effective way for America to out-compete a more assertive and authoritarian China over the long-term is to invest in its people, its economy and its democracy.

Beijing is faced with a major political and trade onslaught from the US, European Union and their allies over a host of issues including human rights violations in Xinjiang, Tibet and Hong Kong. PTI

Benazir's daughter hit by drone on face during PPP rally

LAHORE, MARCH 4

PAKISTAN'S SLAIN Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's daughter Aseefa Bhutto on Friday suffered a face injury after a drone camera hit her during her party - Pakistan People's Party (PPP) - rally in Punjab province.

The incident took place when Aseefa, also the daughter of Pakistan's former president Asif Ali Zardari, was standing atop a container alongside her brother and PPP chairman Bilawal Bhutto who was addressing the participants of the rally in Khanewal, some 300 kms from Lahore, against Prime Minister Imran Khan.

As the drone hit Aseefa, Bilawal rushed to rescue her. "She was taken to a private hospital where she had 'five stitches' on her forehead," PPP leader

Aseefa Bhutto. File

Hasan Murtaza told PTI.

He said the PPP workers have taken the drone operator of the TV channel into custody and handed over to police. "It will be determined whether the drone operator deliberately aimed at Aseefa at the best of someone," he said.

Since the drone belongs to the TV channel, which is owned by the ruling Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf stalwart Aaleem Khan, the PPP is suspecting that this might be a deliberate act. PTI

GIOIA MARIA, a 10-year-old Italian girl, says she would like to do more for people suffering from the war in Ukraine "but I'm very small". So every night, she prays. And she wants Ukrainian children to know it.

The girl wrote a letter in her best English on a large yellow sheet of paper and gave it to her mother to bring to a church collecting food, medicine and clothing to be sent to Ukraine and border areas taking in refugees. "Dear Ukrainian friends, my name is Gioia Maria. And I'm Italian. I'm very sorry for this horrible war. I'm very close to you with my heart. I'd very like to do more, but I'm very small and far away. Every night I pray for you and I ask God to help you. With love. Gioia Maria." Six heart signs follow her name.

Her mother, Katherine Valerio, said Gioia Maria used her savings to buy gifts for Ukrainian children to send along with the letter. "I have two daughters, a 10-year-old and an 8-year-old, and they ask me why all this is happening and above all, they ask me how they can help these children," she said amid the bustle of volunteers re-

MONETARY POLICY ART OF MANAGING EXPECTATIONS, SAYS RBI GOVERNOR

Central banks in a bind, geopolitical situations aggravate dilemmas: Das

ENSECONOMICBUREAU
MUMBAI, MARCH 4

RESERVE BANK of India (RBI) Governor Shaktikanta Das on Friday said central banks are in a bind as the recent geopolitical developments — the Russian invasion of Ukraine — have further aggravated the challenges and dilemmas for them.

“Central banks are in a bind — if they act aggressively to contain inflation which may perhaps subside as normalcy returns, they run the risk of setting in recession,” Das said. On the other hand, if they act too little and too late, they may be blamed for “falling behind the curve” and may have to do a lot of catching up later which will be detrimental to growth, Das said while delivering his speech at the National Defence College.

He said the current global conditions, after about two years of living through the pandemic, are now posing complex challenges for central bank communication.

The RBI kept the repo rate un-

SHAKTIKANTA DAS
Governor, Reserve Bank of India File

changed for the tenth time in a row at 4 per cent and retained the accommodative policy stance in the February policy review. With inflation now crossing the 6 per cent level and threatening to rise further, several analysts are now arguing that the RBI faces the risk of “falling behind the curve” if the accommodative policy is not changed.

Meanwhile, financial markets have turned extremely volatile as they have been left grappling with heightened uncertainty over the pace of future monetary policy normalisation. Amidst these uncertainties, central banks have to find the optimal grounds with attendant communication challenges, he said. “A number of economies, including the major ones, are facing multi-decadal high inflation due to supply disruptions, tighter labour markets, fragility of the just in time inventory management and geo-political disturbances,” he said.

Das said monetary policy is an art of managing expectations and central banks have to make continual efforts to shape and anchor market expectations.

As monetary policy is an art of managing expectations, central banks have to make continual efforts to shape and anchor market expectations, not just through pronouncements and actions but also through a constant refinement of their communication strategies to ensure the desired societal outcomes he said.

According to him, there is no last word yet on what constitutes the best practice of monetary policy. The conduct of monetary policy has undergone notable changes both in India and across the world as economies and markets evolved and policymakers gained greater insights into how economic agents interact in a complex economic system, he said.

Globally, the evolution of monetary policy has swung from being more directive and discretionary to a strict rule-based regime, before settling to the current consensus for a pragmatic mix of rules and discretion. “In this process, communication has gained importance although it works both ways — while too much of communication can confuse the market, too little may keep it guessing about the central bank’s policy intent,” he said.

“Recalibrating the pandemic time policy path, as and when the situation warrants, would present its own share of communication challenges,” he said. For RBI’s crisis measures announced with pre-specified terminal dates, market expectations remained anchored and communication challenges were minimal when these measures got automatically withdrawn.

On the other hand, measures or unwinding of open-ended policies, as and when they happen, would require careful, nuanced and measured communication as in such instances, the expectations of certain segments of the market may not be in sync with that of the central bank’s assessment, Das said. He said the RBI has been different from other central banks in our pandemic response. “We have undertaken unconventional measures even before exhausting the conventional policy space — i.e., even before reaching the zero lower bound of interest rates.”

My view is that the Ukraine situation is a threat to both growth and inflation. While you have emphasised the inflation shock, the growth shock should not be ignored. Some countries in Western Europe might actually tip into recession, and India too could face headwinds particularly (but not only) in terms of exports. We do not know how long lasting and how severe these two shocks would be.

What will be the impact of Russian invasion of Ukraine on the Indian economy? If the conflict gets prolonged, what will be the impact?

I do not have a crystal ball, and I strongly believe that policymakers should not pretend that they have a crystal ball. Monetary policy makers must (a) proceed with

INTERVIEW WITH MEMBER, RBI'S MONETARY POLICY COMMITTEE

‘Policymakers should not pretend to have a crystal ball; be ready to adapt’

JAYANTH VARMA, Member of the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) of the Reserve Bank of India (RBI), who has been opposing the central bank’s accommodative policy stance, said the “stance carries with it the risk of falling behind the curve in future because the stance limits the MPC’s freedom of action in ensuring meetings.” In a conversation with GEORGE MATHEW, Varma, professor of finance and accounting, IIM Ahmedabad, said, “We should have our hands on the trigger, ready to act if the need arises ... and policymakers must recognise that reality may not unfold according to their expectations.” Edited excerpts:

The situation has changed after the last monetary policy review in February. How serious is the inflation threat, considering the fact that crude oil prices have shot up, commodity prices are expected to remain high and many nations have imposed sanctions on Russia?

My view is that the Ukraine situation is a threat to both growth and inflation. While you have emphasised the inflation shock, the growth shock should not be ignored. Some countries in Western Europe might actually tip into recession, and India too could face headwinds particularly (but not only) in terms of exports. We do not know how long lasting and how severe these two shocks would be.

humility, (b) recognise that reality may not unfold according to their expectations, and (c) stand ready to adapt rapidly to changing conditions. Above all, they should avoid making commitments that restrict their freedom of future action.

Do you think the RBI’s policy of focussing on growth and low interest rates will boomerang at a later stage in the wake of the latest global developments? Do you think the central bank is not doing enough to check inflation?

I reiterate that regard the current level of the policy rate as appropriate, given the twin challenges of sub-par economic growth and above-target inflation. I think the MPC should do more to communicate its resolve to defend the inflation target, and its willingness to raise rates as and when required.

Do you think the RBI has fallen behind the curve in its policy actions, especially on the inflation front?

No. My concern is that the accommodative stance carries with it the risk of falling behind the curve in future because the stance limits the MPC’s freedom of action in ensuring meetings.

Do you see the possibility of retail inflation breaching the 7-per cent level?

This possibility is nothing new; it is recognised in the minutes of the February MPC meeting. The fan chart (Chart 1 in the policy statement) shows the 70 per cent confidence interval is within shouting distance of 7 per cent. The width of the fan chart was the focus of my dissent in that meet.

Do you think it’s time for the RBI to change the accommodative stance and hike policy rates like repo and reverse repo to tackle inflation? What should the RBI do now?

I have argued in my successive dissents for many months now that a change in the accommodative stance is long overdue. At the same time, I do not think the time has come to raise the repo rate. My position is not that we should pull the trigger now, but that we should have our hands on the trigger, ready to act if the need arises.

Do you think there’s a case for the RBI’s MPC to act before the next policy review in April?

It’s premature for the MPC to act now. The situation is still fluid. We have to wait and watch the developments in Ukraine.

New Delhi: Services sector activities in India picked up marginally in February on the back of better demand conditions and the retreat of the coronavirus pandemic but the rate of expansion was the second-lowest since last July and subdued by historical standards, according to a monthly survey.

India flourish on grass to take control over Danes

GAURAV BHATT
NEW DELHI, MARCH 4

WELL BEGUN, nearly done. India finished the first day of their World Group I Play-off tie against Denmark with a 2-0 lead. Ramkumar Ramanathan beat Christian Sigsgaard 6-3, 6-2 before Yuki Bhambri defeated Mikael Torpegaard 6-4, 6-4 on Friday.

Much of the build-up was focused on the grass courts at the Delhi Gymkhana Club, and how various grass experts and local gardeners had pored over each blade. The hosts had chosen the surface to exploit Denmark's general unfamiliarity with grass and banking on the playing styles of Indians. While the Danes had sported game faces and talked about being underdogs ready to cause upsets, the writing was always on the grass.

The Indians were simply better tennis players on the day. There was an obvious gulf in talent, magnified by the surface.

As expected, Ramkumar was the main man for India. With a game tailormade for grass, he likes to serve and volley. The opening game of the tie set the tone. Ramkumar followed each serve — first or second — to the net. Meanwhile, Sigsgaard, glued to the baseline, struggled to time his returns. The Dane ventured forward once, to catch a Ramkumar drop shot. He scampered, reached the ball, couldn't stop sliding and stumbled into the net to concede the point. He somewhat found his footing, but lost serve at 1-2 with desperate forays to the net. And when the volleys weren't letting him down, his service did. Sigsgaard sent down eight double faults to Ramkumar's three.

It wasn't that Ramkumar was impervious at the net. He shanked a few volleys and was occasionally passed by a groundstroke. But he was simply more comfortable on the surface and anticipated better than the 824-ranked Dane. Throughout the week, Ramkumar had maintained that the conditions were "perfect" and the grass was "great." "Stays low, it's quick, it goes through, the slice works," he had assessed during practice sessions.

The slice worked alright. For Denmark's hopes of advancing, it was a death by thousand slices. When not killing off points, Ramkumar took the pace off with backhand slices. "I love to slice and I love to come in. I served pretty well. And I made a few good first volleys during the start of the match. That just kept me going," Ramkumar said.

Surface matters

Non-playing captain Rohit Rajpal discussed how the surface was matched with a suitable tactic.

"We clearly had a strategy where we worked on the courts to ensure that it plays low, and the slices move well and kick off. If you see their grips, they are way over the top, clay-court, hard-court grips. The idea was to keep it low and trouble them as much as we

Unlike Ramkumar, grass-court tennis doesn't come naturally to Yuki. It was, thus, intriguing to watch two baseliners try and adapt in real time. While Ramkumar dealt with Sigsgaard in less than an hour, the two sets between Yuki and Torpegaard nearly went 90 minutes. The surface again played a pivotal role. After the two traded early breaks in the opening set, Torpegaard conceded his serve at 4-4 in a game that saw the 6'4 Dane repeatedly beaten by the pace and low bounce. With his opponent's timing off, Bhambri constructed and finished points with approach shots.

The biggest server of the four on the day, Torpegaard had his moments. Bhambri's lead in the second set was cut from 4-1 to 5-4 as the Dane went for broke. Four of Torpegaard's six aces came in the second set, but also five of his seven double faults. Eventually, Torpegaard, who led the majority of games but couldn't close them out, was defeated by the more consistent Bhambri, who also embraced the slice.

"I think for Ram, that style comes naturally. For me, it was bit of a strategy," said Bhambri. "I realised that the court was playing very low. I am more of a traditional baseliner who likes to hit the ball. But I realised the slices are difficult to put away." Torpegaard conceded his opponent has "got a good backhand slice" and "stepped up his game when it mattered".

"That's what separates the good players from the great players. Countless examples out there of me being ahead in the games but he stepped up," said Torpegaard. "It's a very different game on here than it would have been on hard courts. I think I ran out of time towards the end. I would have liked for it to go into a third set, like the good old days." The reverse singles fixtures on Saturday will remain on grass and continue to be three-set matches. But they will only come into play if the Danish pair pulls off the unthinkable in doubles. As for India, Rajpal confessed that Ramkumar's showing in singles could have put him into the running to partner Rohan Bopanna.

"We have that option looking at the way we played today," he said.

Kohli cameo on special day

Former captain played some authoritative strokes for his 45 before making an error in his 100th Test

ABHISHEK PUROHIT
MOHALI, MARCH 4

"I TOLD RAHUL bhai I am feeling like I am making my debut all over again. There were butterflies in my stomach. I didn't realise the magnitude of the occasion until today, when the presentation happened and there were people in the stadium. I felt very nervous," said Virat Kohli after the end of the first day's play in the Mohali Test against Sri Lanka.

In the morning, the stage had been set for Virat Kohli's 100th Test match. Long having ignored Test cricket, Mohali had begun to turn up quite early for the man who adores the format. His wife, brother, BCCI biggies, they were all there. The entire India squad stood behind in a line as head coach Rahul Dravid presented Kohli with a special cap for the landmark before the start of play.

The crowd erupted in celebration at the fall of Mayank Agarwal and cheered Kohli all the way to the pitch in the 19th over. It can't be said that he didn't give them their money's worth. He stayed in the middle for 104 minutes, and played some authoritative strokes. But just when it appeared that this was the start that would be converted into that elusive century — he's given that feeling before too — he made a basic error to be bowled for 45.

The crowd would never approach the allowed 50 per cent capacity during the day, but even a couple of hours before the scheduled 9.30am start, there were queues building up at various entrances to the Punjab Cricket Association Stadium. Shouts of 'Kohli, Kohli' rang out from one gate or the other. There was a group of young men holding up a poster proclaiming, 'You will always be our captain'. All this was to have been lost, but for the last-minute decision to not play the match to an empty stadium.

Only a few hundred had made their way in while the teams were warming up. Even those many made plenty of noise whenever Kohli took a catch at first slip. Hardly anyone seemed to initially notice Rohit Sharma walking out for his first Test toss in his captain's blazer. For Kohli was making the walk back at the same time towards the dressing room to change into his whites.

It was only half an instant, but as Rohit neared the pitch, Kohli, who'd reached the boundary by then, turned around to look at the spot that had been his all these years. He then put his head down and disappeared out of sight into the dressing room.

Soon, Dravid was all smiles as he got mic'd up for the cap presentation, followed by 16 Indian players forming a line. Skipper Rohit was nowhere to be seen for a bit before he jogged out having put his pads on. As

Virat Kohli stayed in the middle for 104 minutes. PTI

Anushka Sharma walked up to be by her husband's side, Dravid went on to say a few typically solemn words about the occasion.

"It's a testament to everything. It's well deserved, well earned, and hopefully it is just the start of many things to come," Dravid said. "As we say in the dressing room, double it up."

"Thanks Rahul bhai, it's a special moment for me," Kohli said. "My wife is here with me, my brother is there in the stands. Everyone is very proud. It's a team game and the journey wouldn't have been possible without you guys. Thanks to the BCCI too. I couldn't have received it from a better person, my childhood hero. I still have that picture with you from my Under-15 days. In present-day cricket, with the amount we play with three formats and an IPL, the one takeaway the next generation can take from me is that I played 100 games in the purest format."

Formal presentations are often banalities that have to be gone through but it was hard not to feel the emotion from Kohli in this one as he hugged Anushka multiple times, before Dravid signed off with a couple of very formal looking handshakes with husband and wife. As the teams proceeded to line up for the national anthems, Rohit walked up to Kohli, thrust his right palm into his former captain's, and had a quick half-hug. After the anthems, Sri Lanka skipper Dimuth Karunaratne came over to Kohli to shake hands. 'Kohli, Kohli,' the chants kept coming.

When it was his turn to bat, he turned into a roar which seemed to inject more energy into his sprint out of the dressing room. His first four, a bullet of a straight drive, sent the crescendo higher. The swat-flick through midwicket made an appearance, so did the cover drive. He left and defended the pacers well. But the left-arm spinner Lasith Embuldeniya troubled him every few deliveries. Inside edge onto pad, leading edge, one popped almost into the bowler's hands. Embuldeniya kept hitting a good length around off, but Kohli kept stretching forward to a ball that had pitched on the same length. This one turned a bit more than he expected, and it was all over. These mistakes have often come out of nowhere, when he's looked alright otherwise.

Hanuma Vihari soon followed Kohli back to the pavilion on 58 and Shreyas Iyer's fall made it 228 for 5, after which it was up to Rishabh Pant (96 off 97) and Ravindra Jadeja (batting 45) to revive the score to 357 for 6 at stumps. However, Kohli doesn't think he needs to change anything in his preparation process.

"I'm preparing the way I always have," Kohli said. "As long as I am batting well, I am not bothered at all. I have been involved in very important partnerships for the team. Even today, the partnership of 90 (with Vihari) was important for us. I have never been bothered about milestones. These conversations happen on the outside and will continue to happen because we are somehow obsessed about milestones and materialistic achievements." Obsessed enough to have made him feel that he was playing his first Test and not his 100th.

ARIES (Mar 21 - Apr 20)

There may now be no way you can maintain the peace. It must be said that there are times when arguments or harsh words are necessary if you are to clear the air and settle someone else's hash. But you do have to make sure that you have the right person in your sights.

TAURUS (Apr 21 - May 21)

Your obstinate adherence to your ambitions could be the cause of much friction. Are you really sure that now is the moment to force various issues, or do you think it would be better to bide your time? You may well do best to err on the side of caution.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21)

It's time to get tough, yet I doubt if anyone can do so as charmingly as you. It's very much a question of the iron fist in the velvet glove, your firm resolve delivered in the nicest possible way. Your strength is, you see, that you are about to be proved right.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23)

Passion is in the air. Certain personal encounters may be tremendously exciting. One or two experiences might be rather too blunt for your liking, though. Monetary affairs and expenses could be the only significant cause of discord but, even then, deeper emotional motives are most important.

LEO (July 24 - Aug 23)

Involvements which once seemed so desirable, no longer hold out the promise they offered at first. It looks very much, though, as if someone has seen through your little game. Perhaps you should have been more straightforward about your real, personal needs.

VIRGO (Aug 24 - Sep 23)

There is a lot to be said for keeping your distance yet, right now, I would advise you to move closer to other people, especially emotionally. It may not be easy to express your real feelings, but do have a go. If anything can be done to change a partner's mind, do it.

LIBRA (Sep 24 - Oct 23)

A long-standing relationship or involvement has been going through a stressful phase, but you now have the opportunity to set matters straight. Domestic repairs should be a priority if good feeling is to be restored. Fix practical problems and other questions will be resolved.

SCORPIO (Oct 24 - Nov 22)

You have certainly done a great deal to safeguard your long-term health and security. If other people have also benefited from your efforts, you may expect a word of thanks. However, you may have to accept that gratitude is not an emotion that partners are likely to feel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23 - Dec 22)

You're happiest when everything is out in the open. This is why you may not have an easy time when the causes of current problems lie deep in the past, perhaps in a partner's background rather than yours. This is more reason why you should try to be sympathetic and understanding.

CAPRICORN (Dec 23 - Jan 20)

Adverse aspects to planets in strategic sectors of your solar chart are pushing you into getting your act together properly for a change. This relates to your willingness to share information and discuss plans with the people who matter most.

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 - Feb 19)

Stand your ground, but don't expect partners to back down. The best solution might be an honourable compromise in which you both agree to pursue your separate goals. An amicable reconciliation will then be the next step. That will leave you free to get back together when you wish.

PISCES (Feb 20 - Mar 20)

Pisces, the peacemaker, should be making his, or her, appearance today. People will be snapping at each other for no other reason than that it seems easier than being nice. Stand above such petty squabbles, and try to make friends and family members see that there is no reason why they shouldn't get on.

"Shocked, stunned & miserable... Will miss you Warnie. There was never a dull moment with you around, on or off the field. Will always treasure our on field duels & off field banter. You always had a special place for India & Indians had a special place for you. Gone too young."

SACHIN TENDULKAR

SHANE WARNE
1969-2022

WIZARD OF 5.5 OZ

The Ball of the Century perfectly captured what Shane Warne was all about - his art, skill, persona and the hallucinatory effect on the batsman, writes Sriram Veera.

SHANE WARNE dispensed with reality, made it whatever he wished it to be, and had bewitched batsmen sway to his machinations inside his world. He made them do what he wanted them to do. Hypnotised, they followed the piper. It was Warne's world of illusions and no batsman, barring Sachin Tendulkar, has really glimpsed its true nature - for how does one play an illusion? You get played. They had no choice. That was his genius.

Good spinners try to open their trickery under the gaze of the batsman rather than reveal its perfection from the moment of release. Their deliveries are constructed for what a batsman might do, tailored to probe the anticipated response, and create a dent in their reality. Not Warne. He created the response he sought from the batsman. He lived rent-free in their head, long before he began that intoxicating walk towards them with ball in hand.

The Ball of the Century was no different, and it perfectly captured him, his art, and the hallucinatory effect on the batsman. The only difference was that he hadn't yet begun his tenancy in batsmen's heads and cricket-lovers' hearts; this would kickstart that addiction.

A 1993 tour game against Warwickshire, Graeme Hick with the bat, Warne with the ball and Allan Border, the captain, sidled across. "Just bowl regular leg-breaks. He is bound to play the Tests. Let's not give away anything." Hick creams a hundred and Warne is left a touch frustrated, but appreciates the mind games of his skipper. In years to come, he would outdo Border in the mental calisthenics.

The moment arrives, finally. Warne with the ball, Border in his ear setting the field, and the rotund ageing Mike Gatting, still pretty good against spin, shadow-practising a straight drive.

Warne begins to walk in. If Abdul Qadir's run-in was magical with whirring arms, Warne's walk was sparsely beautiful. No trickery, no stealth, no concealment, as if he was saying, 'here is what I am going to do, you can have a good look at me. I don't care'. Over the years, it began to seem like a walk in the anticipation of a triumph. Not that day, though, as Gatting tapped his bat and peered across, little knowing that he was going to be part of history. Warne's.

One for the ages

"I was a bit nervous," Warne once said

“As soon as I released that ball, I felt really good. I didn't know what it was going to do but I felt good”

SHANE WARNE

I thought Healy had removed the bails and was running past me from the leg side to retrieve the ball. I heard no sound.”

about his pre-ball thoughts that day. One can see it in the replays. Face muscles tightened, a look here and there, a kind of look that was seldom seen since. There was to be incomprehension once on a magical Sharjah Tendulkar night, but this was different. And Border too sensed it. "It was the Ashes, England. It was bound to be, I could see it. I had seen worse in others," he would say later.

"As soon as I released that ball, I felt really good. I didn't know what it was going to do but I felt good." It's a physical sensation almost at the tip of the fingers which rapidly escalates into something more emotive, in the head and heart.

The batsman is the last to know. Gatting certainly went about as if he hadn't seen any devil. The front leg moved out a touch - "LBW taken care off," he would say - and shaped to pat it back. The lights went out, in his head then.

The ball swerved outside leg stump, spat from the soil, and shot right across his bat and ample girth to gate-crash his off stump. Wicketkeeper Ian Healy jumps, Mark Taylor jumps, Warne has already landed and rushing ahead, screams everywhere and Gatting has this dazed look as he stood there, seemingly frozen, which when watched live and for years later, was interpreted as a haunted hallucinatory effect on batsmen after ingesting the Warne pill. Apparently, Gatting stood there because he thought it had missed everything. "I thought Healy had removed the bails and was running past me from the legside to retrieve the ball. I heard no sound."

The crack of doom could be heard everywhere around the cricketing world.

Mobbed by his teammates, the blonde gaped at the big screen, which would make one of its early appearances on a cricket field. Warne gazes and is astonished at his own reflection of his deed. "Now, I felt really good!"

No secrets

Unlike some athletes, Warne had no issues with fame. He enjoyed its privileges, revelled in its dark interiors, and only disliked that it left a tiny window open for the media to squeeze through and gape at him. Sometimes, it was him who left that window open. Once, in England, he was a handshake away, sharing a smoke, and talking about an incident earlier in the afternoon. After a long night out, he had come to the ground way before the game, in which he was commenting, and chose to sleep away the night's stains. Unfortunately, among all the empty rooms that opened out to that corridor, he had chosen the press box. There he was, the greatest leg-spinner the world has ever seen, sprawled on the floor, mouth agape, and oblivious to the camera flashes. So, he asked, the smoke swirling away from his lips, "the pictures are all over, you know. You were there? Why would they take those pics?!" And as the silliness of the rhetorical query revealed itself to him, he laughed.

That evening after bowling what has come to be known as the Gatting ball, Warne shared a beer with his victim and queried, "What happened?" I missed the ball, came the most factual reply of our times. "It didn't spin all that much mate, next time do better," Warne would tell him. When another Australian leg-spinner Arthur Mailey bowled the great, almost mythical, Australian batsman Victor Trumper in a domestic game once with a googly, he had said that he felt like a boy who killed a dove. No one can accuse Warne of that sentiment; he devoured the batsmen, and not just danced around their bodies after the act but announced it prior.

From that Gatting day on, the minimalist walk-in with the ball seemingly slowed down time and dramatically increased the anticipation of magic. To watch Warne simultaneously explore and explode the art of leg-spin was one of the greatest pleasures of this sport.

BOWLING SHAA-EN, YEA MAA-ET & OTHER WARNIE MEMORIES

The permanent markers of Warnie moments on cricket-gulping minds

His floppy hat

The Baggy Green was iconic. But the world-beating Australia of the 90s through all the swirls of the floppy hat - Warnie's. Which could be distinguished from Mark Waugh's. Who would not be mistaken for his twin Steve Waugh. The c. Waugh (floppy hat) b. Waugh (floppy hat in umpire's hand) was the framed image of innumerable Aussie scythes through rival batting orders. Though nothing said "Aus dominate session" than Pigeon hitting the deck ball after ball and the Wa-Wa floppy hats slouched in slips, coolly pouching edges.

His blond tresses

Dishevelled, gleaming gold, and so Australian that his blond hair guffawed in his languorous, strolling run-up, even as the crab-like arms did their accelerating antics at the crease and the head bobbed around. Nothing screamed gold like Warnie's tresses. They could be spotted from a mile with a spiky halo. In later years post retirement, when Shane Warne turned up all groomed and sleek hair-parting, gel minding the wild mane into conformity, you missed the forever-sight of cricket's grandest goldilocks.

Pleading appeal

India learnt its Aussie accent and vocabulary in the 90s through all the din that swirled around the wildly confident Warnie. 'Bowling Shaa-en' & 'yea, maa-et' - of the chirpy glovemen Ian Healy and Adam Gilchrist, were the do ray me of the Oz drawl. Reverence was shyly dropped to be replaced by nicknames, and no one was closer to the Indians than 'Warnie' - the talented wildchild, spin whiz and ungrudging 'bunny' of Sachin. But what truly sharpened the aspirational claws of Indians learning overt aggression, was Shane Warne's tremendous performance in an appeal for a leg-before. He turned to the umpire, lifted both arms, goggled out his gleaming eyes and pleaded incessantly the long Howzzzaaaat that crescendoed no matter what odds you gave him of succeeding. It was a sight to behold - Warnie bent at the hips, in belligerent beseeching.

Muddied trousers

Because Pigeon and Steve Waugh and Justin Langer, Bevan & Damien Martyn were so impeccable at all times, Shane Warne's untucked shirt and often muddied trousers and a hankey/towel yanked into the elastic to dry the ball, all gave him the look of a busy workman. He must've scoffed at fitness and drills and professorial coaches with their PPTs and the general disorder of his wardrobe at the end of his spell, felt like a well-earned badge of honour, never mind the barely-there run-up and rushed overs.

Smartest brain

Warne would say in later years how much it hurt him that the Australian captaincy wasn't given to him. Starting from IPL in 2008 (though Aussies would've witnessed it in Shield matches), Warne began to weave the magic with his intuitive calls - be it in handpicking Ravi Jadeja as Superstar and inspired field placings for Royals when winning the inaugural edition, or pre-ordaining impending dismissals while on commentary. His bombast and slightly laidback style off-the-ball so to say, and non faking of earnestness, might've masked a singularly brilliant tactical mind. But the man could talk and think and play as smart as any appointed captain. Uncrowned he might be, but there was no doubting who was the King.

IRON GLOVES

Catcher-in-the-fly, straight-talking mentor, Rod Marsh no more

SRIRAM VEERA
MUMBAI, MARCH 4

RODNEY MARSH is clad in a white bathing towel, beaming an angelic smile, staring directly into the eye. A text runs above his head: What does Marsh do with his vaseline? The mind boggled.

It's as disconcertingly amusing to watch it now, as it was when one first heard it in mid 80's. Off we would run then, in faraway Madras, to cricket parks, yelling out the line, laughing our silly heads off, as kids tend to do. Had never seen the advert till now, but prompted by news of Marsh's death, a google search was done and it threw up the advert. It was real, just as it was described to us by some Mr Know-it-all, and a laughter escaped the lips. What would Marsh do?!

This is what he did: he drank (45 cans of beer enroute to the 1983 world cup), he jumped in front of second slip to pluck catches, he hit vital runs (once caned Lance Cairns for 22 runs in an over), he bet, he was apparently hurt that he was never made the Australian captain, he mentored generations of cricketers in Australia and England and his walrus-moustache, girth, mirth, sledging are all part of cricketing folklore. The first time one read about the term The Aussie Larrikin, the mind automatically went to him. Not that it was entirely true - Merv Hughes probably fit it better - but that was the kind of popular hold he had on us.

"You are a fg idiot!" The recipient of the cuss, the legendary Ian Chappell looked up at Rod Marsh and wondered if it was anything to do with the previous evening at the bar. They were in middle of a Test match, Chappell was still a new captain having recently taken over from Bill Lawry when the verbal spray drenched him. "It's a seamer's paradise and you've got two spinners on. Get them off and get a seamer on, it doesn't matter which one," the walrus-moustached Marsh barked.

It made Chappell realise his error; that he was still captaining as if he were at his home ground Adelaide Oval. "I got a few lessons like that. You want people around you that tell you the truth, and I was lucky to have a gang of them," Chappell would say later.

Chief among the gang members that had the fierce-willed Dennis Lillee, his own brother Greg Chappell, the popular Doug Walters, was Rodney Marsh. It was Ian Chappell who unfortunately called him "Iron Gloves" on one of his early encounters and that label stuck for a long while.

Ray Jennings is known as the RCB coach who first predicted Virat Kohli would become captain of not just that franchise, but of India. But he was also an incredibly agile wicketkeeper. A decade back, he had shown a CD of some of his catches in South Africa's domestic matches. The jaw dropped. There he was diving past bewildered slip fielders twisted in weird angles, watching him fly past them.

A "wow" slipped out on its own and Jennings looked up and said, "you should have seen Marsh keep, then!" Just a photographic evidence would do, though innumerable videos do exist on the ether. The catch of Tony Greig from the 1979 World Cup. The first slipper Ian Chappell is twisted at an angle, Greig's head is yanked back for some masochism, and Marsh is captured, flying past Chappell with the ball pouched in his extended arm. As Marsh got up to celebrate with his mates, Chappell shot out, he recalled now to Channel 9, "Listen, you fat bd, I don't mind you pinching them on my left hand, but the ones on my right are mine! That's how we used to talk to each other, and it's probably one of the reasons we got on so well, we knew exactly where we stood with each other."

Stories abound of Marsh's playing days - the legendary tag of 'caught Marsh, bowled Lillee' about his partnership with the famous pacer, his experiences of keeping to the fastest bowler of 'em all Jeff Thompson, whose pre-season training was to hunt down pigs with bare hands, of him betting against his own team in the famous 1981 Botham Test. More will come out in a day or two. Lap it all up for sure, but to know the man, seek out the gif or the video of him telling off his mate Greg Chappell not to do the unthinkable of asking his brother Trevor to roll an under-arm delivery.

As soon as he realises what his friend was thinking, Rod Marsh, hands across his chest (another famed image of him, that), can be seen shaking his head and yelling out, "Don't do it Mate!"

Marsh blossomed as a mentor and coach for a whole slew of younger lot from Adam Gilchrist to Kevin Pietersen to Alastair Cook. Gilchrist recalled in his book how Marsh once invited the young kids to his home for barbecue. Drinks were had. When it was well past Cinderella hour, Marsh told them to come to the pool at 6 am. Half the kids struggled next morning. Gilchrist says the message was clear. If you can't handle it next day, don't overdo the previous night just because you heard tales about us.

"Alcohol and chlorine doesn't mix well," Gilchrist wrote about his lesson learnt. Perhaps for them. Not for Marsh.

But what did Marsh do with his vaseline? The answer is blowing in the wind.
